A Thought For The Week

Today, in the minds of many people, Labor Day will signal the end of summer, the last long holiday of the season... a time for a final outing for swimming, picnicking, boating or just loafing. The real meaning of Labor Day has been lost for many in the frantic pursuit of fun.

This is unfortunate, because never have so many people been able to enjoy the leisure, the luxuries and comforts we see around us in our United States. The rights of labor never have been so certain, nor its obligation to act in a responsible manner more necessary. We must never, therefore, become insensible to the time-honored virtues of thrift, competence and pride in a job well done.

These are the characteristics that have made possible the turning of Labor Day into a holiday of fun and leisure. These are the virtues that Labor Day ought to commemorate and, if the nation is to survive in its greatness, they will be needed as never before in the years to come...

Once There Were Dahlias. Today, Tradition Meets Convenience.

In 1962, M. Joseph Sweeney acquired the Elcock Estate in West Quincy to better serve the residents in that growing area of the city. The circa 1863 residence was built long before the expressway. Its previous owner, Mr. Elcock, had a green thumb and soon became known as the "Dahlia King" for his spectacular dahlias.

Today, the location is not only near the Southeast Expressway (I-93), but also the Furnace Brook Parkway. These two major arteries offer convenient access to West Quincy, Milton and Boston. Joe's son, Dennis, has recently had the location redecorated, continuing the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.

Since 1917, the staff at Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions. And as the area has grown, they've become more accessible to you.

READERS FORUM

The Flag Is An Important Part Of Nation's History

Editor, The Quincy Sun: I would like to commend The Quincy Sun for the detailed way they have reported the campaign for state representative between Bruce Ayers and Lawrence Chretien.

On the whole, I think the newspaper has done a good job underscoring the differences between the candidates while reminding readers the winner of this election will be determined in less than one month when the Democratic Primary is decided.

Since I am very interested in the political process, I decided to look past those issues that have been making the constant headlines and instead evaluate each candidate's approach to public policy. While many may believe that a similar resume makes Ayers and Chretien virtually identical in a political sense, concerned voters should take a closer look.

These candidates for state representative are campaigning to take a very important position in our democratic system of government. The winner must prove to be not only a skilled politician but a defender of American ideals. He should defend the rights of citizens to directly decide important and sometimes controversial matters of conscience. Only one candidate can rightfully claim his allegiance to upholding that liberty.

As a United States veteran, I know that one of the most important symbols of freedom around the world is the American flag. In times of war, brave American soldiers have fought and died to protect the flag and the American freedom it stands for. It contains a piece of each state in the union and should be considered a vital part of our nation. Those who fought under the flag know it is far greater than the fabric it is sewn with and more durable than any monument or patriotic speech. Remember the very emotional scene of five U.S. Marines raising the U.S. flag on Mount Suribachi on the island of Iwo Jima during World War II.

In the United States, it is a crime to deface or destroy a mailbox, but the Supreme Court has determined that burning the flag of our country is protected under the provisions of the First Amendment Right of Free Speech. While even the staunchest veteran will agree that anybody has the right to speak his peace about our government and its conduct, it is virtually impossible to find a veteran or patriotic American who agrees that destruction of the flag should be condoned. It is the reason why veterans founded the National Flag Alliance and is why we continue to push for Congress to approve a resolution that will allow the nation to decide, by referendum, whether the flag should be a protected symbol under the Constitution.

A while back when both men were serving on the Quincy City Council, a resolution was debated to encourage Congress to allow the question to be decided by the entire nation. Only one candidate voted to uphold the right of us, the people, to decide. Only one candidate understood that the flag is an important part of our history that provides lessons and strength for the future. That person was Bruce Ayers.

Are you surprised when I tell you that every concerned veteran I have spoken to is voting for Bruce Ayers on Sept. 15? Bruce is the only candidate who knows that a symbol of suffering and sacrifice should be upheld, not ignited.

Candidacy, Pregnancy Keeping Her Busy An Interesting Year For GOP's Jane Swift

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Jane Swift is having an interesting year.

From a campaign for lieutenant governor of Massachusetts as the running mate of Acting Gov. Paul Cellucci to a pregnancy that has created more public interest than she ever expected, 1998 is destined to be a period in her life she remembers for a long, long time.

Swift outlined her thoughts on these and other topics during a recent tour of Quincy which included a visit to The Quincy Sun.

She said education is the most important issue in the election, noting that results of the recent examination administered to Massachusetts teachers are the "first phase" of changes to come in that field.

Swift added that despite the poor showing by teachers, the criteria for the test, which was devised by other educators, should not be lowered.

"But I think it demonstrates the magnitude of the challenge that faces us," she said.

Financial matters also are priority for the Cellucci/Swift team, which Swift said views taxes and the continued fiscal operation of the state as the second and third most important election issues respectively.

"I think the citizens of Massachusetts would be best served by supporting us," she said.

Of State Treasurer Joe Malone, whom Cellucci will face in the Republican primary in September, Swift said he has run "a very negative campaign," mainly because he "has no compelling reason why people shouldn't support Paul Cellucci."

JANE SWIFT

She added that she likely will have much to say about the Democratic gubernatorial candidates in the weeks to come, saying voters "have a reason to doubt" their campaign promises.

Regarding her pregnancy, which caused something of a stir in some political circles when Cellucci first selected her as his running mate, she said the media interest continues to be strong.

Because it is possible she is the first pregnant woman to run for such a high office (there may have been someone before her in Minnesota), she said, although the truth of that is currently being researched, media coverage has been as extensive as a story in The Los Angeles Times and a piece on ABC-TV's "20/20" scheduled to air in September. CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" also has contacted her, she said.

Noting that her first child also will be her parents' first grandchild, she joked, "They think this running for lieutenant governor thing is OK, but I know what they're really excited about."

Swift, a graduate of Trinity College in Connecticut who spent six years in the Massachusetts Senate representing her native North Adams, said she enjoyed her recent visit to Quincy and described Mayor James Sheets, her tour guide, as "very kind."

"Quincy seems to be in great shape," said Swift, adding she was particularly pleased to see the progress of the Fore River shipyard, which closed in 1986 but is slated to begin building ships again under new ownership later this year.

"I was very impressed," she said of the yard. "It's an amazing project."

Told that Sheets has taken some heat from fellow Democrats for not endorsing Democratic candidates in a couple of state elections, Swift said she once faced similar criticism from her colleagues in the Republican Party for supporting a Democratic mayor in North Adams.

"I can relate to Mayor Sheets on that," she said. "Sometimes you have to do what's best for your community. Municipal issues need to transcend partisan politics."

an outstanding job with this event," said Joseph Dennehy, Quincy Emergency Management emergency shelter director and a disabled veteran. "This gave them the opportunity to see the great work that VBC is doing for homeless veterans, a problem that should not exist in our country today.

Dennehy also expressed gratitude to VBC Director Ralph Cooper for allowing the Quincy group participate to assist with "such a worthwhile cause."

Locke Soliciting Proposals For Community Drug Forfeiture Funds Grant

Norfolk District Attorney Jeffrey A. Locke announces his intention to distribute Drug Forfeiture Funds for community programs which deter the use of illegal substances.

Under Massachusetts drug forfeiture statute, the District Attorney's Office may use forfeited drug moneys and proceeds for drug prevention, drug education and other anti-drug or neighborhood crime watch programs which further law enforcement purposes.

To further his commitment to provide education and programs to prevent drug use by young people, Locke has invited proposals from town officials and police chiefs of Norfolk County for the funding of drug education and prevention programs. Programs can include, but are not limited to, night basketball leagues, D.A.R.E. programs, Boys and Girls Club, and local teen drop-in centers.

In October 1997, with the benefit of Byrne grant funding, Locke created

C.D.A.R.T. (Community Drug Action Response Team), a community-based, county-wide drug task force. The primary mission of C.D.A.R.T. is to collaborate with the 28 police chiefs in the county and provide community-based and county-wide support in drug investigations and prosecution.

"To date, our drug prosecution efforts have met with considerable success," said Locke. "The attendant seizure and forfeiture of drug dealers' assets has increased as well. In fact, in the last six months alone the Norfolk District Attorney's Office has collected over: $50,000 in funds forfeited from criminal drug defendants."

Grant awards will be announced by Oct. 2, said Locke.

Different Opening Day Schedules For High Schools

The city's high schools will have different opening day schedules for the new 1998-99 school year.

Quincy High School will hold a freshmen orientation day Wednesday, Sept. 9. All Grade 9 students are to report to the school at 7:45 a.m. that day.

All Quincy High students in Grades 9-12 will report for classes Thursday, Sept.

10 at 7:45 a.m.

North Quincy High School will not hold freshmen orientation. All students in Grades 9-12 will report for classes Wednesday, Sept. 9 at 7:45 a.m.

For more information, call Quincy High at 984-8754 or North Quincy High at 984-8745.

Enrollment Up 2.6%

throughout the Quincy Public Schools, new technological capabilities in the school system's classrooms, and continued progress on a $74 million, citywide capital improvement program for the schools are among the factors that will help make 1998-99 a particularly interesting period.

Creedon said the opening of the Marshall School, a new security system

"I think it's going to be a very exciting school year," he said.

Creedon added that he is also looking forward of the results of the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS) examinations that were administered to students in Grades 4, 8 and 10 during the last school year.

The first day of school for students in Grades 1-12, with the exception of Quincy High School, is Sept. 9. It will be a full day for the students and lunch will be served.

Quincy High School will use Sept. 9 as an orientation day for freshmen. Grade 9 students will report that day at 7:45 a.m. All Quincy High students (Grades 9-12) will report for classes Thursday, Sept. 10 at 7:45 a.m.

All North Quincy High School students will report for classes Sept. 9 at 7:45 a.m.

Kindergarten orientation will be held Wednesday, Sept. 9 through Friday, Sept. 11. Kindergarten classes begins Wednesday, Sept. 16.

School hours are the same as when school closed in June. The Point-Webster schedule will be used at the Marshall School.

There are a total of 180 school days mandated by the state. Teachers are required to add two extra days to their own total and will be in school next Tuesday as well as the day after the students are dismissed for the summer. The last day of classes is scheduled for June 21.

Creedon noted that although a number of school systems are beginning to hold classes a weekly earlier, the Quincy Public Schools chose its opening date after a survey of the city's parents was conducted. The survey indicated the parents "overwhelmingly" favored the tradition of a post-Labor Day starting date, he said.

The school year could extend as late as June 28 if as many as five "snow days" are used, Creedon said. If more than five are needed, the school system would have to cut into one the students' school vacation weeks, but that likely will not happen, he added.

New Bus Stop Added

stancies will be allowed to do so provided there is room on the bus.

DeCristofaro said parents are encouraged to take part in their children's commute to school whenever they can.

"We urge the parents to participate in getting their kids to school as safely as possible," he said.

A complete listing of the Quincy Public Schools bus routes can be found in this week's Quincy Sun beginning on Page 16.

A FUN FAMILY DAY

At Grossman's Building

Permit Sought For New Juvenile Court

Plans to have the new, separate Norfolk Division of the statewide Juvenile Court Department located in the Grossman's Building at 152 Parkway, Quincy Center appear to be moving along.

Mayor James Sheets, however, says he still has concerns about the plan.

Sheets and Walter White, the city's director of inspection services, said Tuesday a demolition permit has been requested for the state project. White said the permit cannot be granted until someone representing the building owner, Reuben A. Grossman Realty LLC, appears before the Zoning Board of Appeals because the site is not zoned for such a use.

White said the request for the demolition permit came from the project contractor, the Brookline-based Kaplan Corp. He said he sent a letter Aug. 20 to the architect, Harvard, Mass.-based Moers & Associates, informing them that the owner or a representative would have to appear before the zoning board.

"They haven't gotten back to me at all," said White. "The ball's in their court now."

White said the demolition permit, if granted, would allow the proponents to "gut the interior partitions" and would not affect the outside of the building. The project would include two holding cells, two courtrooms, office space and jury space, he said.

Sheets said he still strongly opposes having the juvenile court at the site because of its lack of substantial parking and its proximity to nearby senior facilities.

"I oppose the juvenile court being there," he said. "It doesn't fit in with our plans for the downtown at all."

The plan initially was proposed by the state Divi-

$7,000 Needed

Donations Sought For Dive Truck Engine

Officials are seeking $7,000 in donations for a new engine for the Quincy Emergency Management Command Center Dive Truck.

Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano said the truck is used during natural and other disasters and in body recovery following drownings.

"I'm really in trouble," he said. "That truck is hurting. We're desperate to get that truck back in service. It's both a command center and a dive truck."

The vehicle responds at the request of police and fire chiefs and public safety agencies throughout Massachusetts seven days a week, 24 hours a day with an all-volunteer, professionally-trained crew.

Donations are needed from the business and industry sector and private citizens. Checks should be made out to City of Quincy Emergency Management Agency and sent to 85 Sea St. (Naval Reserve Center), Quincy, MA 02169.

For more information, call John Blackadar, dive chief of the Quincy Underwater Recovery Department, at (781) 826-4696.

Ayers, Chretien Race Takes Local Spotlight Light Vote Seen For Next Tuesday

With two of the three state representative seats uncontested and no senate fight, a light voter turnout is seen here for next Tuesday's primaries.

With two of the three state representative seats uncontested and no senate fight, a light voter turnout is seen here for next Tuesday's primaries.

"I think we will see about 40 percent," says City Clerk Joseph Shea whose predictions have been pretty much on target in the past. "I hope it will be higher but I really don't think so."

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Shea said he is basing his forecast on the fact that there is only one local race—the one between Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers and former Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien for the First Norfolk District state representative seat.

Both are Democrats and with no Republican or other candidates, the winner Tuesday will also be the final winner, succeeding Michael Bellotti who is running for Norfolk County sheriff.

"There are no contests for the other two state representative seats or for senate," Shea notes. "Races for those seats normally do a lot to bring out the vote but they aren't there this year."

If they were, Shea thinks Tuesday's turnout would more likely be 50 to 52 percent.

The city's total voter registration is now 51,545.

If Shea's forecast is right it will mean only about 20,000 voters will turn out to cast ballots and 31,000 will stay home.

The only other Quincy candidate in a contest besides Ayers and Chretien is businessman Daniel J. Flynn seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor's Councillor.

Polling Places

Three Quincy Democrats, state Sen. Michael Morrissey and state Reps. Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano have no opposition in the primary and no Republicans to face in November.

Outside of the Ayers-Chretien fight, the race for the Democratic nomination for district attorney is probably the most closely watched locally.

John J. Corrigan of Brookline, state Sen. William R. Keating of Sharon, and Norfolk County Commissioner William P. O'Donnell of Norwood are after the nomination and the right to square off against Republican incumbent Jeffrey A. Locke of Wellesley in November. Locke is unopposed in the primary.

Corrigan and O'Donnell served as assistant district attorneys under Quincy's William D. Delahunt, now a Congressman. Keating is chairman of the state Senate Judiciary Committee.

Delahunt, who succeeded Gerry Studts, is seeking his second term in the 10th Congressional District. He is unopposed in the primary and will face Republican Eric V. Bleicken of Yarmouth, who is also unopposed, in November.

Bellotti, a Quincy Democrat and Republican incumbent Jack Flood of Canton have no opponents next week and will have their showdown in November.

Flynn is making his second run and the only South Shore candidate for governor's councillor in the Fourth District, a seat now held by Christopher A. Iannella, Jr. of Boston.

Also challenging Iannella are Brian D. O'Reilly, Jacquelyne Payne-Thompson and Clare M. Schroder, all of Boston.

County Commissioner Peter H. Collins of Milton is opposed by John W. Fallon, Jr. of Stoughton for that Democratic nomination. Robert D. Hall, Jr. of Needham, former county treasurer, is unopposed for the Republican nomination.

Of the state-wide races, the one with a little extra local interest is the fight for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Sprague Energy in Quincy Point complained of noise from barges late night pumping and appealed to the the license board at Tuesday's meeting for a "right to sleep peacefully".

Abutters told the board of not being able to hear each other at outdoor cookouts to waking up every two or three hours with the constant sounds from the barges. The noise continues from early evening until the next morning.

Suggestions from limiting pumping after 11 p.m. to putting a stop to pumping from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. were made by the abutters.

One resident, Tom Smollett, who played a tape of noise he had heard in the wee hours of the morning, suggested the company should acquire an "universal sound shield", whether it be portable or otherwise. He said residents should not "endure the cost of turning on their air conditioning to detract from the noise."

Smollett said the company is violating an EPA code by the loud noises. He said it isn't fair that persons have to turn on their air conditioner even on a "beautiful day" just to detract from the noise. He added that severe spot lights shining directly at the windows is another problem in the early morning hours.

One proponent, Steve Rodney said "we are a culture of complainers" and said residents knew of the impending noise before they moved into the condominium. He said if the hours of delivery were limited, "prices of oil would increase."

Steve Cipullo, manager at Sprague said the barges sometime give the company short notice and at times it takes at least 24 hours to discharge the oil from the vessel. He said the barges are controlled by the Boston Coast Guard and not Sprague.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi said he has received constant calls of complaints about the noise in the early hours and asked the board to check out noise levels and to try to have Sprague develop the proper technology available and work along with the fire department.

Raymondi said it was not right for a resident to have to "create a sound barrier with their own unit" with the air conditioner going.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said although there is "no easy fix" suggested a type of exhaust pipe with a long flexible hose to muffle the sound.

License board chairman Joseph Shea said "we cant resolve this problem today without taking the proper readings. He said he and Chief Gorman and members of a noise committee will meet with the condo association and return Oct. 6 with the findings.

Proposal Sent To City Council Sheets Seeks Special Events Coordinator

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Mayor James Sheets is hoping to hire a full-time coordinator to handle all of the special events organized by the city.

The mayor sent his proposal for the $48,000-a-year position to the City Council Tuesday night. The coordinator cannot be hired unless the new job is approved by the council.

Sheets, who noted that the position would be paid for with excess city revenues "above and beyond" Quincy's Fiscal Year 1999 municipal budget, said the reason for the proposal is a simple one.

"We just cannot control properly the number of events we have now in the city," he said, citing as one example a time when three separate road races were held on the same Sunday.

Sheets said the person hired would coordinate annual Quincy festivities such as the Arts in the Parks program, Presidents Day Festival, Summerfest Concert Series, and others. Among the coordinator's duties would be the preparation of annual and monthly events calendars, he said.

In addition, the coordinator would be in charge of planning events for the city's upcoming millennium celebration beginning in December 1999.

The coordinator also would deal with tourism issues, including the eventual establishment of a tourism information center in the city, according to Sheets.

Sheets said he has not decided how many candidates will be interviewed or whether they will have to meet with a screening committee before they speak with him.

Two names being mentioned as potential candidates are former City Councillor Michael Cheney—who is chairman of First Night Quincy and other special events in the city—and Rhonda Merrill, manager of a local catering business.

The mayor declined comment when those names were mentioned, saying only that once the process is decided upon he wants to hire the new coordinator as soon as possible.

NEW SIGN that stands in front of the Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School in Quincy Point was designed by Monti Granite of Quincy and is made of the last large piece of Quincy granite owned by that company. The 5-ton, $10,000 sign measures about 5 feet high and 9 1/2 feet wide.

sion of Capital Planning and Operations (DCPO) last summer. The Juvenile Court is being separated from the Trial Court as mandated in a 1992 court reform bill, officials said.

Officials also said at the time both criminal and court cases that currently take place in Quincy District Court would be heard in the court's new home.

Quincy District Court's Juvenile Court cases come from Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Randolph, Milton, Holbrook and Cohasset.

When the project was first proposed, Sheets announced his opposition and was backed by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation.

Others, however, including Sen. Michael Morrissey, Reps. Michael Bellotti and Stephen Tobin, and Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott said the presence of the juvenile court would be an asset to the community.

Franklin St. Residents Complain About Early Morning Trash Pickups

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO
With a petition signed by more than 25 persons registering complaints against BFI's early morning trash pick ups in the Franklin Street area, Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymonti told the license board Tuesday that "they've had it, I've had it."

Familiar faces have appeared before the board for the same existing problem for several years.

Raymonti asked "what is it going to take to get BFI to comply with the city ordinance?" He added "what enforcement policies and procedures will be made to guarantee that city ordinances are enforced."

Raymonti said early pick ups are a violation of city limits and charged that BFI has disregarded city ordinance consistently. He said that pick ups at 5 to 5:30 a.m. "are not uncommon."

Chairman Joseph Shea said the city's ordinance states that pick ups can be made between 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. He asked BFI to set up a list of what pick ups are done before 7 a.m. and to structure which businesses should go first.

Raymonti suggested a fine and said the board should secure a policy change, and restrict pick ups before 7 a.m. and establish a schedule of fines. He said if they don't comply, then when contract renewal time arrives, the city should "think about whether or not to maintain a relationship with this company."

Although Bob Forrest, a manager at BFI said his truck drivers don't start as early as 5:30 a.m. an abutter, Christine Graham, who lives next to the Getty Station disagreed with Forrest and said BFI trucks are there at 5:15 a.m.

Another resident said he had been complaining for 10 years and even went to the health department at one point. He said his wife has been ill for three years

SOY: THE LATEST CHOLESTEROL FIGHTER?

In a study of blood specimens from 1,242 men and 3,596 women who participated in a health check-up program in Takayama City, Japan, researchers noted a significant correlation between increased intake of dietary soy and a decrease in total cholesterol levels in the blood. The statistics gathered in this study, conducted by the Department of Public Health, Gifu University School of Medicine, were adjusted to compensate for contributory effects of other factors, such as age, smoking, intake of carbohydrates, fiber, vitamins, protein, and fat (including dietary cholesterol intake). In the female participants, an additional adjustment was made for menopausal status, body mass index, physical activity, and even coffee and tea consumption, so those factors didn't alter the statistical findings. What our friends in the East know so well, we would do well to imitate: a diet high in fresh vegetables and fruit and protein-rich fish or soy products can help keep the pathways clear to our hearts. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. These data suggest that soy can play a significant role in regulating serum cholesterol levels.

A One Party Town?

Looking at next Tuesday's primary ballots, you can't help get the feeling Quincy could be on its way to becoming a one-party town. Or, in effect, already is.

Democrat.

Locally, one senate and three state representative seats are on those ballots with but no Republican candidates in sight.

Three Democrats, Sen. Michael Morrissey, and Reps. Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano are unopposed for re-election. A cake-walk for them.

The only local contest is for the First Norfolk District state representative seat, the one Michael Bellotti is leaving to run for the Norfolk County sheriff badge.

And that's a two-candidate fight between two Democrats, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers and former Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien.

With no Republican candidate in the picture, the winner next Tuesday will automatically be the new state representative from that district.

So, four Democrats will be able to sit back and relax at the final election in November winners already.

Local Republicans, you might say, tossed in the towel in this election year. And, maybe you can't blame them. Maybe mounting a challenge in a Democratic stronghold such as Quincy is like banging your head against a political stone wall.

The GOP elephant that once politically dominated this region now appears to be an endangered species.

Back in the late 1940s and early 1950s Quincy had twice as many Republicans as Democrats. In 1949, for example, it was 14,786 to 7,034.

Today there are 51,545 registered voters of which 27,110 are Democrats and 7,002 Republicans. There are 17,123 unenrolled. This means Democrats outnumber Republicans and unenrolled combined by nearly 3,000.

So, as we have said before, it isn't easy being a Republican today in Quincy.

Even when it comes to non-partisan municipal elections, Republicans find the going tough.

Bay State Community Services Smoking Cessation Program

Bay State Community Services will offer a free six-week smoking cessation program Tuesdays from 6 to 7 p.m. beginning Oct. 6 in Conference Room D at Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St.

Marie Connare, LMHC, CAC will lead the group through a series of six group smoking cessation counseling sessions that provide education on methods for ceasing tobacco use, supportive counseling during the early quitting period, information and advice on nicotine replacement therapy, and referral to individual smoking cessation counseling.

Call Marie Connare at (617) 472-6027, ext. 147 for more information.

When Winston Churchill described something as a "terminological inexactitude" he was talking about a lie.

Today, there are only two Republicans holding Quincy elective offices: former Mayor Frank McCauley, now a city councillor at-large and School Committeewoman Christine Cedrone.

McCAULEY

CEDRONE

Democrats hold 14 of 16 municipal elective offices: Mayor, eight council seats and five school committee seats.

It takes money to run against Democrat incumbents who are entrenched in office. And if you are a Republican, it also takes courage.

But Republicans sitting on the sidelines election years unwilling for one reason or another to challenge Democrats is eventually going to mean one thing: a one-party system.

That's the last thing we need.

But sadly, something we may get.

SIX POLITICAL FIGURES will financially help boost the U.S. Marshal William Degan Memorial Road Race and Fun/Walk Sunday. And, politically boost themselves.

The six are sponsoring water stops at $250 each and, in return, have the opportunity to display their campaign signs.

The race and walk which begin and end at Veterans Memorial Stadium honor Degan, who was killed in the line of duty in August, 1992 in Idaho. Proceeds go to worthy causes in his name. Including this year a donation to help pay medical bills for Kevin Moore, the Quincy teenager who has been in a coma since an auto accident in May.

The six sponsors and their water stops:

Bruce Ayers, candidate for state representative, Souther Artery starting line.

Senator Bill Keating, candidate for Norfolk County District Attorney, North Quincy High School.

Dist. Atty. Jeffrey Locke, Quincy Shore Drive.

Scott Harshbarger, candidate for governor, Beechwood Knoll School.

City Councillor Paul Harold, Furnace Brook Parkway.

Michael Bellotti, candidate for sheriff, finish line.

GEORGE PARKER of the Yellow Cab Co. in Quincy, is still quietly and generously helping the fight against muscular dystrophy.

He's been doing it now for 22 years and each year asks us not to make a big deal out of it.

It began in 1976 when The Quincy Sun became the Quincy-South Shore pledge center for the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day telethon.

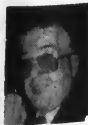

George came in that first year with two checks—a $400 personal one and a $400 company one.

For 10 years it was an annual ritual. Two $400 checks. In those 10 years the pledge center and committee raised over $1 million thanks to nice people like George.

Because of space limitations, the pledge center is no longer at The Sun but we do continue to sponsor special MDA events. And, George keeps coming in with those two $400 checks. As he did this year.

If our arithmetic is correct, he has donated $17,600 to help defeat muscular dystrophy.

George would rather we didn't mention it. But nice people, we think, should be recognized. And George is one of them.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD is a view taken at the Harvard-Boston aero meet at Atlantic in September 1910. This was only the second air meet held in the United States. Large prizes for various contests drew the best aviators from around the world. Claude Graham-White the Englishman piloting the plane in this view was the winner of most of the events at the air meet. The plane is a French-built Bleriot Monoplane, one of the most successful of the early single winged aircraft. It was built by Louis Bleriot a Frenchman who was the first person to fly over the English Channel.

The Real Issue Regarding Flag Desecration Is Free Speech

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I would like an opportunity to respond to a letter by Leonard Morris ("The Flag Is An Important Part Of Nation's History") which appeared in the Sept. 3 edition of The Quincy Sun.

I was offended at the manner in which Mr. Morris twisted the flag-burning issue. The real issue regarding the flag desecration is free speech.

Everybody I've spoken with, including Larry Chretien, is appalled when they see the flag being desecrated and I know of no one who would participate in such action. However, like it or not, it is a protected act under the Constitution as freedom of speech and as much as we (including Mr. Chretien) find it disgusting, we have to accept it if we are going to maintain the foundation on which this country

As an American, I too am appalled when I see the American flag being burnt. As an American veteran, I can't print in a family paper what I'd like to do to those who do it.

Like Mr. Morris, I too have seen (through news reels) the very emotional scene of the flag-raising on Mount Suribachi. Personally, my military experiences were probably somewhat different than my predecessors. I remember the bombing of our Air Force headquarters in Germany in the early 1980s and protesters banging and spitting on the glass window of the trolley I was riding in, unknowingly passing through an anti-American demonstration on my way back from a temporary duty assignment.

I also remember looking down the rows of flag-draped coffins in the White Hangar at Dover AFB after the 1983 bombing of the Marine Barracks in Beirut, Lebanon and working in the mortuary the week of Christmas 1985 assisting in the identification process of the Army's 101st Airborne Division troops who were killed (in Gander, Newfoundland) returning from training exercises in Egypt.

I find it ironic that some people in our community will fight against legislation that will regulate weapons that are killing our children (because it violates their constitutional right to bear arms) but will support legislation that will outlaw flag burning though it violates our constitutional right to free speech.

It took an awful lot of courage for Larry Chretien to vote against the City Council resolution knowing it would be unpopular with many voters. He did not vote in favor of the resolution because, as the Supreme Court pointed out, the measure was unconstitutional. Larry chose to back the fundamentals on which this country was based rather than to take the politically correct action.

I agree with Mr. Morris when he says that "The winner must prove to be not only a skilled politician but a defender of American ideals" and that "only one candidate can claim his allegiance to upholding that liberty." As Mr. Leonard pointed out, Larry Chretien demonstrated himself as a defender of American ideals when he refused to ignore the constitutional issue as a city councillor and that's one of the many reasons why this veteran is supporting him on Sept. 15.

As for the rest of the voters, I hope they look at all of the issues before casting their votes on Sept. 15.

Grossman Puts Office Building On Hold

By PAUL HAROLD

Rueben Grossman of the Grossman Companies agreed to put on hold the excavation for a new office building behind City Hall.

The delay would afford the city time to reconsider its rejection of an offer by the New Haven Railroad to purchase the property. At one time the city considered taking the land for the construction of a city hall annex and for parking.

One proposal floated by the Grossman companies was for a land swap, of the New Haven parcel for acreage for Broad Meadows.

SWOLLEN FEET AND WATER PILLS

In the not-so-good old days, the average person walking into a doctor's office complaining of swollen feet or ankles might have walked out with a prescription for water pills, or diuretics. In many cases, though, water retention may not have been the cause of the problem. The water pills, which can have side effects, would be useless. A different diagnosis might be related to the circulatory system. The feet are often among the first heralds of circulation problems. Veins and valves can be so weak that blood doesn't flow efficiently back up to the heart, leading to fluid pooling around the feet. In such cases, support hose might be prescribed to limit the amount of room for fluid to accumulate in the feet and lower leg, as well as to help muscles contract, pumping blood back upward. If you are suffering from these or any other foot related complaints call us at (617) 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Pkwy., Suite #18, Quincy and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

Quincy Groups Recruiting Walkers For Cancer Walk

Quincy-area organizations are recruiting walkers for the American Cancer Society's sixth annual Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk set for Oct. 4.

Seven businesses and community organizations already have started organizing teams of walkers to participate in the walk, the largest one-day breast cancer fundraiser in the nation. The 5.7-mile walk along Boston's Charles River Esplanade will help kick off National Breast Cancer Awareness Month in Massachusetts.

Groups in the Quincy area currently organizing walk teams for Making Strides are Blue Cross-Blue Shield, Green Environmental, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance, Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology, Thompson & Thompson, State Street Bank, and South Suburban Oncology Center. There is still time for other area businesses and community groups to organize walk teams.

The 24,000 anticipated walk participants are expected to raise $2.4 million in pledges. Funds raised will support the American Cancer Society's breast cancer research, education, and support programs for breast cancer patients and their families in Massachusetts. According to the Massachusetts Cancer Registry data released last year, breast cancer deaths in the Commonwealth declined by 11 percent between 1991 and 1995—twice the national decline. In addition, 70 percent of all breast cancers in the state were diagnosed in their earliest stages, when the chance of survival's greatest.

Flagship sponsors for this year's Making Strides Against Breast Cancer—BankBoston, Tufts Health Plan, Lotus Development Corporation, The Gillette Company and Bell Atlantic Mobile—will each recruit hundreds of staff members and volunteers from their organizations to take part in the walk.

Breast cancer, the most common form of cancer among American women, will strike 182,300 this year in the United States, including 4,500 in Massachusetts, and more than 1,100 Massachusetts women will die of it this year, according to experts.

For more information on participating in or volunteering for the walk, call 1-800-952-7664, ext. 4700.

Senior First Aid Class At Beechwood Sept. 16

A First Aid Class designed especially for senior citizens will be offered Wednesday, Sept. 16 from 2 to 4 p.m. at Beechwood Community Life Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, announces Mary Centola, the center's director of elder services.

The class has been developed and will be taught by staff members from Fallon Ambulance.

"We intend to keep this class small," said Centola. "So early registration is a must."

The class is the latest offering through Beechwood's citywide, year-round Senior SAFE Program co-sponsored by Beechwood and the City of Quincy, according to Beechwood Executive Director Sharon Beals.

The Senior SAFE Program began with the Elder Home Repair Program and expanded last year in partnership with the Quincy Fire Department and Quincy Rotary Club to "SAFE Service Day," the installation of smoke detectors for elders "at risk."

The program also includes the Emergency Alert Bracelet Project for memory-impaired seniors in partnership with the Quincy Police Department.

"We value our seniors and are committed to doing all we can to ensure their safety," said Mayor James Sheets. "The Senior SAFE

Program is designed to assist seniors to remain independent in their homes for as long as is possible.

"Beechwood Community Life Center has always been a forerunner for things for seniors such as smoke detectors and fire alarms. It's very important that seniors have these opportunities. Once again, Beechwood is ahead of the game."

For more information, call 471-5712.

WILLIAM B. RICE EVENTIDE HOME

Where Security and Friendship Go Hand In Hand.

Miriam Addison is proof positive that you're never too old to make new friends. She first met Gayle Davis after moving to Quincy's Eventide Home, where Gayle is a loyal volunteer.

Miriam came to Eventide from her Quincy home, after living alone became too much to handle and she needed nursing care.

Gayle began volunteering at Eventide after moving to Massachusetts from Maine 14 years ago. Miriam also lived in Maine for a time.

"Can you believe that we both started our first jobs at Union Mutual in Portland, Maine?" Gayle asks. "What a small world!"

When Miriam expressed a desire to go shopping, Gayle responded and they became instant friends.

"We just gelled," Miriam says. "We discovered the Talbots outlet together."

"And don't forget about your favorite lunch spot overlooking Hingham Bay," adds Gayle.

VETERANS FOR CHRETIEN

As veterans we feel compelled to respond to the ad run by LARRY CHRETIEN's opponent in last week's Quincy Sun. The ad was signed by a group who want voters to think they speak for all veterans. WE WANT YOU TO KNOW THEY DON'T.

The ad said that we need to amend the United States Constitution to prohibit desecration of the flag. It also said that people should vote for LARRY CHRETIEN's opponent for state representative based solely upon that one reason.

We served our country to protect the liberties America has been built upon. As we do, LARRY loves the flag and would never condone desecration of the flag. But in a democracy it is essential that we protect freedom of speech, even if we disagree with what people are saying or how they say it. Patriotism is fostered best by taking positive steps, not by chipping away at the Constitution's Bill of Rights.

We support LARRY for state representative for several reasons. He stands for many things such as better education, protecting our precious open space and improved services for seniors. He is committed to helping veterans and non-veterans alike. Furthermore, he is better qualified than his opponent and would be a much better advocate for our district.

Finally, Bruce Ayers promised you the opportunity to compare the candidates through open, public debates - but he has gone back on his word. He will not debate LARRY and has said very little about any issue other than the flag. If Ayers believes that the only issue is the flag amendment, then he should say so in an open, public debate. And then he should tell us where he stands on ALL of the issues. He might not be interested in those issues, but we are!

THE RACE FOR THE FIRST NORFOLK DISTRICT

Ayers: 'We Need Someone With A Proven Record'

The Quincy Sun interviewed Democrats Bruce Ayers and Larry Chretien, candidates for state representative in the First Norfolk District.

Here's what the two candidates had to say about important local and state issues, current events and why they should be elected state representative.

Q. Where do you stand on the issue of Lot 23 at Marina Bay?

A. My position is to preserve Lot 23. We've made continuing efforts to try and get necessary funding to preserve that parcel. Also, I've created an open space task force to take a more proactive role not only on Lot 23 but also on the Dickinson parcel and throughout the city.

This is a way I think we can allocate monies to attach a certain percentage onto future development or business, where we can earmark that money for preserving open space by getting people on the task force who have the background, not only on the state, but (also) federal and local levels, (and) we can all work together....

So the task force we created with the mayor's blessing, I plan to use not only to preserve Lot 23 but other parcels of land in my ward and citywide.

Q. As a state representative, what would you do to improve the water quality at Wollaston Beach?

A. There's a number of ways we can do that. I think we have to make the state more accountable. We could put certain language in the budget before it passed to have the MDC officials come down for a series of neighborhood meetings similar to what we're trying to do now with different task forces along Wollaston Beach.

We have made some small steps, but more has to be done. This would definitely be a priority under my representation....We need to get proper funding so we can maximize the potential of the 27 miles of shoreline in the City of Quincy....(and) take a more aggressive role to see that the steps are being taken, not only on the state but (also) on the city level, so that we'll start to see more swimming like we have seen over the years.

Q. What are your thoughts on the Squantum Gardens senior housing project?

A. As you know, I'm a strong supporter, along with

BRUCE AYERS

Name: Bruce J. Ayers

Address: 45 Williams St.

Family: married to the former Maureen McCarthy

Occupation: president of Ayers Handicap Conversion Center

Education: North Quincy High School, Class of 1980; attended Northeastern University

Public Service: currently in fourth term as Ward 6 city councillor; first elected in 1991

Mayor Sheets, to convert the Squantum Gardens into senior housing. I feel we have an obligation to our seniors to provide them with affordable housing. I also feel that converting that land from the Navy to the city, for Quincy seniors, was paramount. I think if you talked to some of the people who are up in Naval Terrace, you'll find they're very happy with their accommodations and how everything's worked out....

Future plans? To continue along with that theme, to provide a senior center down there, to provide some recreational opportunities, also some medical opportunities, is something I want to see. It's important that we protect our seniors and give them an opportunity to stay in the City of Quincy....We have an obligation to do that.

Q. What do you think is your greatest achievement as a city councillor?

A. I think there's a number of things. One of the things I've always tried to be is accessible and accountable in prioritizing the neighborhood needs—whether it's addressing the school issues like overcrowding or the upgrading and facilities, whether it's improving the business district, whether it's cleaning up the parks or working with the police and fire (departments), I've always tried to reach out to the community and be accessible.

Q. Turning to state issues, what is your position on the death penalty?

A. I'm for the death penalty in extreme cases. When you see some of these violent criminals—cop killers, (or) you look at what happened to that poor boy up in New Hampshire who was molested by those people—I think it's a stricter penalty....I would be for the death penalty in those situations.

Q. Do you support a cut in the state income tax?

A. I would like to see the tax cut that was promised given back. It was a promise that was given to the taxpayers to cut the income tax, yes, and it's something we need fulfill.

Q. Is there any particular area in the state budget you would try to increase or decrease?

A. I think what we have to do now, with the economy in a more stable position than it was five or six years ago, we have to be even more accountable. And as a businessman, you look your budget and the business mentality is "you can always do things better."

What I think a state representative needs to do is prioritize things like education, the cleanup of Wollaston Beach, highways and roads, what we're going to do up on Quarry Hills....you need to maximize the funding in

Chretien: 'I'm The Most Qualified Candidate'

Q. Where do you stand on the issue of Lot 23 at Marina Bay?

A. I think I'm the candidate that has demonstrated a much stronger commitment to environmental protection and that I have the best ability to preserve Lot 23 if elected. What I would like to do as state representative is to pull together state financing, work with Mayor Sheets to get some local financing, work with my good friend Bill Delahunt to get some federal funding, and also work with large non-profit environmental groups such as the Trust For Public Land to put together a package to purchase Lot 23 from the developer.

I think that the developer should be given a reasonable price for his property; I don't think it should be the highest current-day market value for the property. And I hope that we can accomplish this in the next few months....I've spoken with the developer, and I'm satisfied that he's willing to talk.

Q. As a state representative, what would you do to improve the water quality at Wollaston Beach?

A. Right now, a number of agencies and citizens are working together on the Wollaston Beach Task Force to come up with ideas for cleaning up the water off Wollaston Beach. They're working very hard, and I'm sure they'll come up with some sound recommendations. If I'm elected, I will take full responsibility for the implementation of the recommendations as they pertain to state government.

I think one of the problems over the last few years is there is no one agency who is taking full responsibility. We have a number of agencies that are trying to help....but nobody is currently acting as a quarterback. I think my background in environmental protection is well-suited to this, in that I worked as a legislative aide to a state representative before I served on the City Council; I know my around the bureaucracy, I know how to get things done.

Q. What are your thoughts on the senior housing project at Squantum Gardens?

A. I hope that it will work out in the long run. I know that there are a lot of friends of mine who live out there, and they're very satisfied with the situation....As a state representative, by the time I'm elected, I'm not sure I'll (be able to) have too much involvement in the further development of that.

LARRY CHRETIEN

Name: Lawrence F. Chretien

Age: 37

Address: 166 North Central Ave.

Family: married to the former Karen Kohlbrenner; one daughter, Charlotte, 6 months Occupation: energy director for Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) Inc.

Education: North Quincy High School, Class of 1979; bachelor's degree in resource management from State University of New York College of Environmental Science and Forestry in association with Syracuse University, 1983; master's degree in economic policy from Northeastern University, 1989

Public Service: served four terms as Ward 3 city councillor, 1988 to 1996

I do support having a major senior center located in the City of Quincy, and if it happens to be at Squantum Gardens, I will try to acquire funding for that....

I also will do my best to develop more senior housing. The one thing about Squantum Gardens is that it doesn't provide many units of senior housing. I firmly believe....that there's some large numbers of people in Quincy and Randolph who would like to sell their home if there were affordable, comfortable, secure options available to them.

Q. What do you think was your single greatest accomplishment as a city councillor?

A. I think that my advocacy for education was strong and consistent....A lot of good things that have taken place were in part spurred by my desire to improve the Quincy Schools.

A lot of people know me best for starting the city's recycling program, and I'm very proud of that as well.

Q. Turning to state issues, what is your position on the death penalty?

A. I'm against the death penalty. It's something that I'm tempted to support, just like everybody else, because oftentimes there's a crime committed that makes me wonder whether the person who perpetrated the crime deserves to live. But I feel the purpose of our criminal justice system should be to try to lessen the violence we have occurring in our society, and I think the record is showing across the world and also in this country that places that have the death penalty are more violent than Massachusetts.

Q. Do you support a cut in the state income tax?

A. I supported the cut that we had that lowered the rate for unearned income down to the same rate as earned income, (and) also substantially increased the personal exemption. I think that was, as people have said, the largest tax cut in Massachusetts history.

If there is an additional tax cut put on the table, I think the only kind I could support would be one that would benefit everyone equally, and the simplest way to do that is to once again increase the personal exemption. I think that we should be regularly increasing the size of the personal exemption, so that it keeps pace with inflation.

Q. Is there any area of the state budget you would like to see increased or decreased?

those key areas. So what I would do is prioritize the needs in my district, and there's a lot of them.

Q. If you're elected, who would you most like to see as governor?

A. I think we have some good (Democratic) candidates...I think they all bring something to the table. I would probably have to lean more toward Donnelly or Harshbarger.

Q. Ultimately, what do you see as the most important issue in the district?

A. Well, I think education is always a key issue; we should make sure we continue the funding for education reform. That's a key issue.

I think one of the things I offer that Larry (Chretien) doesn't offer is, I believe, I'm a more well-rounded candidate. He keys in on a few issues. I think you have to look at the entire needs of the community. You have to have a good working relationship with your ward councilors, with your community, with your business owners...

It's hard to say what the single most important issue is; they're all important. Obviously, education is a key issue now, but you have to be well-rounded, I think, and you have to work well with all the different components that make the city a great city.

Q. What would be the first legislation you would file on behalf of the district if elected?

A. Obviously, I'm going to file as many bills as I can and look for many ways to create grants up at that level to fulfill some of these needs of the city. I'd be focused on the major components: education, water quality, quality-of-life issues...

It (the first legislation) would probably be toward taxation, trying to find ways to stabilize the tax base, to give the taxpayers more services for their tax dollars.

One related issue involves tax inequity for boaters and users of recreational waterfront. A serious situation exists in and around Massachusetts harbors and bays because necessary dredging, seawall restoration and construction of public boat launches and piers is not being accomplished....(we need) a more dedicated revenue source to cover these important expenses.

Q. Why should people vote for you on Election Day?

A. I think people should vote for Bruce Ayers because I've shown that I'm a hard-working, aggressive city councilor; I've got the business background; I've proved that I'm accessible, I'm accountable.

I think that this district needs a city councilor and a businessman who has a more fiscally conservative background, more now than ever. Things are getting better. We need to keep tighter reins on the budget up at the State House.

You need to have someone who has a proven record. I've started my business here; I've grown my business. I got involved in the city because I wanted to make some positive changes in the north end of the city. Now I want to use my business background and my City Council experience at the State House to continue this philosophy.

Q. Finally, a couple of change of pace questions. What did you think of the Bill Clinton-Monica Lewinsky story?

A. Well, I'm disappointed with the President's performance with Monica Lewinsky. Obviously, it's morally wrong, and I'm disappointed with some of his actions, yes. I would obviously have to see who was running against the President (to determine) if I would vote for him (again). I am disappointed in the Monica Lewinsky situation, yes.

Q. Do you feel that the flag of the United States should be protected from abuse by law?

A. I am obviously for the flag amendment....Building handicapped vans for a living, I see veterans who fought for our country coming into my shop crippled because of their service to our country. I had a cousin who was killed in Vietnam; (there was also) my great-uncle Cyril Morrisette.

Campaigns are about issues and values, and I value our American flag very much, and I would support that flag amendment.

A. I think that we're going to have to make some reductions in aspects of state government; I don't know about any particular area. I think we're going to have to continue to work to make government more efficient by combining agencies. That sort of thing gives you administrative savings. I (also) think automation and the use of computers, over time, can continue to make state government more efficient.

An area I would definitely support increasing would be education. I think that in the long run, by the state government supporting education, people in Quincy and Randolph will do better. It will provide people with economic opportunity, and it will allow Quincy and Randolph to remain as middle-class communities.

Q. If you're elected, who would you most like to see elected governor?

A. I'm an ardent Democrat, and I could support any of the three Democrats who are running.

Q. Ultimately, what do you see as the single most important issue in the district?

A. Education is the number one issue in the state of Massachusetts, and in Quincy and Randolph. The economy is very harsh to people who do not have a solid educational background. More and more, in the 1990s and into the next century, what people learn will determine what people earn.

Quincy is just a very solid middle-class community, and in order to remain that way, we're going to have to do what other places are doing, which is investing solidly in education. I would rather have that come from the state budget than from our local property taxes. That's where my commitment's going to be if I'm elected.

Q. What would be the first legislation you would file?

A. I'll be looking to make some initiatives using the office that will benefit the district...to support legislation that would be appropriate to improving public education, and also I'll be looking to work with state environmental agencies to preserve Lot 23 and to clean up Wollaston Beach. Whether that requires legislation, I don't know.

There is legislation which I will consider sponsoring...If, by January, Quincy College does not have solid financial future projected, I will sponsor legislation that will have state involvement for Quincy College....I think the college has got to make a decision quickly whether it can float, with or without state assistance.

Q. Why should people vote for you next Tuesday?

A. I think I'm much better qualified. While both candidates have spent time on the City Council, I have other things that make me qualified. The first job that I ever had out of college was that I worked for a state legislator, Tom Brownell, who represented part of Quincy. I worked for him for four years...

I also have a college degree and a master's degree in economic policy, things that are also very relevant to the job...

The job I do at Quincy Community Action is very relevant. I serve, every year, over 3,000 households in the Quincy area, most of whom are elderly, disabled, or working but still having difficulty making ends meet, so I understand the problems people have. I manage a budget of $1.5 million. The experience I've had at Quincy Community Action will make me a better legislator.

Q. Finally, a couple of change of pace questions. What did you think of the Bill Clinton-Monica Lewinsky story?

A. Well, my wife and I are both very disappointed in the President. I think Congress should withhold judgment until they see Mr. Starr's report, and I think the American people should as well....(But) if the question is, would I vote for Bill Clinton again, the answer is no.

Q. Do you feel that the flag of the United States should be protected from abuse by law?

A. I love the flag, and I think that anyone who would dare desecrate the flag is somebody that I would never be associated with. However, I oppose a Constitutional amendment. Our country is the greatest in the world, primarily because our United States Constitution grants us with a Bill of Rights and freedoms no other country enjoys.

I respect people who have a different opinion, because they feel passionately about the country and about the flag....(but) I think the proper way to promote a love for the flag is through positive methods, such as the Flag Day Parade in Quincy which is a wonderful event that I participate in. I pledge allegiance to the flag.

Pipefitters Endorse Ayers

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers, candidate for state representative, has received the endorsement of the Pipefitters' Association, Local Union 537.

Ayers is running for the First Norfolk District seat being vacated by Rep. Michael Bellotti, who is running for Norfolk County sheriff.

Robert O'Toole, business manager and secretary-treasurer of the Pipefitters' Association, announced that the union's political education committee "has unanimously endorsed [Ayers'] candidacy for state representative."

On behalf of the union,

O'Toole promised assistance from Pipefitters' members and their families and pledged additional support whenever helpful to the campaign.

Ayers, in accepting the endorsement, praised the union for their strong commitment to community.

"The Pipefitters have always protected their members and have worked diligently to help provide a better quality of life for working families," Ayers said. "Strong families build strong communities and the Pipefitters' union is an excellent mentor who consistently represents these values."

Ayers said he believes the endorsement is the result of his support of worker initiatives over the past seven years on the City Council along with his promise to continue his advocacy as a member of the Legislature.

"Providing the tools for a better tomorrow has always been my focus in public office," he said. "Providing the tools for a better tomorrow has always been my focus in public office. Organization likes the Pipefitters' union have helped me to better understand exactly what tools workers and families need to get ahead. I sincerely thank them for all their past and continued assistance."

Morrissey Endorsed By Building Trades

Sen. Michael Morrissey (D-Quincy), candidate for re-election to the Massachusetts State Senate, has received the endorsement of the Building and Construction Trades Council of the Metropolitan District.

The three-term senator said he has worked hard to ensure that workers and their families are treated fairly in the workplace, and has worked to support Project Labor Agreement and increasing the minimum wage.

Most recently, Morrissey co-sponsored and helped pass legislation to "Close Gap" for women working on state-financed projects. As chairman of the Committee on Government Regulations, he worked closely with the electrical workers' union to provide labor protection and safeguards during the electrical deregulation process.

"I am pleased to receive the unanimous endorsement of this organization's 35,000 members," he said. "It is truly an honor being recognized by this prestigious organization."

BRUCE AYERS SUPPORTS EDUCATION, EVEN OUTSIDE THE CLASSROOM!

Bruce Ayers knows that education is one of the most important services government provides. That's why Bruce has worked hard to make sure every student's experience at school is a productive one. He has worked to foster greater community participation at Quincy schools and has consistently met with parents and students to make sure our schools have the equipment, materials and programs that students need to gain a well-rounded education.

Bruce also knows that not all education happens in the classroom. That's why he supports and has worked to provide funding for cultural and athletic after-school programs. As a North Quincy High School graduate, Bruce fondly remembers his days on the football team and realizes the training, discipline and sense of teamwork he learned there has been invaluable in his business and political career.

As your next State Representative, you can rest assured that Bruce Ayers will continue his work to provide a better education in the classroom. And he will also fight for more extracurricular funding so that students can learn the important lessons of life that aren't always possible to teach in the classroom.

Bruce Ayers receives "Outstanding Support Award" from North Quincy Head Football Coach Ken McPhee, the Assistant Coaches and the 1998 Football Team.

Won't Crooked Teeth Straighten Themselves?

By DR. FRED ATTARZADEH
Q. What is malocclusion?

A. This is a term dentists use to describe irregularities of tooth position and occlusion (the fitting together of the teeth when jaws are closed). It means a dental deformity which may lead to other disfigurement of the jaws and face.

Q. What causes this?

A. There are two general causes. One is inherited. Each person's jaw structure and the size of his or her teeth are handed down from parents. The second cause is acquired, or sometimes called "environmental." This would include the premature loss of primary teeth through decay or accident. It would also include an acquired habit such as prolonged thumbsucking. Often there is no single cause of malocclusion but rather a combination of factors both hereditary as well as acquired.

Q. Won't teeth straighten by themselves?

A. Irregular teeth rarely straighten themselves. Regular dental care started early is the best preventative measure. When caught soon enough, conservative procedures can be used which may eliminate the need for more complicated treatment at a later date. For example, it is important to retain primary teeth until permanent teeth are ready to erupt. If a primary tooth is lost too early, a space maintainer may be needed to prevent the adjacent teeth from moving into the empty space and thereby preventing more serious problems.

Q. How common is malocclusion?

A. There have been any number of surveys taken and the answer generally given is that approximately 50 percent of the children of any given age group need some form of orthodontic supervision. Orthodontics, incidentally, is the name used to describe the detection, prevention and correction of malocclusion.

Q. Can something so common be serious?

A. Generally speaking, yes. First of all, if the malocclusion is not severe, the resulting problem is not likely to be severe. On the other hand, if the malocclusion is moderately pronounced, then the answer becomes a more definite yes. Moderate malocclusion at an early age tends to become more strongly marked as the child becomes more mature.

Look at it this way. If your child did not walk normally, you would get him or her corrective shoes. You would recognize that there were physical disabilities as well as potential emotional problems. The same is true here. In the case of malocclusion, there are also health problems to consider. The failure to chew properly can result in three things. First of all, improper chewing places an extra burden on the stomach that may well show up in later life as a serious condition. Secondly, improper chewing may often prevent a person from selecting foods necessary for adequate nutrition. The third problem is that teeth improperly positioned generally are harder to clean and food particles lodge more readily between them. This results in more decay and gum diseases.

Q. Can all malocclusions be corrected?

A. No. In a great many cases, malocclusion can be entirely eliminated. In just about every case, the personal appearance and the function of the teeth can be improved. Living bone is not nearly as hard and unyielding as you might think. It can be molded by the continuous application of pressure and its ability to yield is put to work to correct malocclusion.

Q. What should be done now?

A. Well, your dentist is capable of outlining a course of action based on the conditions found. Examination, x-rays, and perhaps a plaster cast of the teeth will help the dentist determine the nature of the case and the treatment program that should be followed. An orthodontic program conscientiously followed will be well worth the time and expense in a better appearance and improved health.

How To Buy Kid's Shoes

(NAPS)—It is back to school time and that means taking children shopping for new clothes and shoes. When it comes to purchasing footwear for kids, a proper fit can help ensure healthy feet.

Because it takes more than 12 years for a foot to fully develop its shape, children need to be measured frequently. Improper fitting footwear in childhood can lead to adult foot problems. In fact, the National Center for Health Statistics reports that 25 percent of Americans have foot problems—often the result of wearing footwear that doesn't fit correctly.

The American Orthopaedic Foot & Ankle Society, the National Shoe Retailers Association and the Podiatric Footwear Association determined the following tips to use when fitting children, of any age, with footwear:

- New shoes: consider the purpose of the desired footwear, length of wear, etc.
- Socks: when trying on footwear, have the child wear the same type of socks that will be worn with the shoes being purchased.
- Posture: for the most accurate measurement, the child should stand straight with full weight equally on both feet.

- Length: measure ball length and toe length. Adequate toe room and proper fit at the ball of the foot are equally important.

- Shape: the shape of the footwear should reflect the shape of the child's foot.

- Good fit: when putting the shoes on the foot, the child shouldn't have to struggle to push it on but it also shouldn't feel too loose or wobbly.

At Fore River Shipyard Thousands Attend Quincy Family Day

Thousands attended the city's first annual Quincy Family Day on Sunday at the Fore River shipyard.

Mayor James Sheets said the city was more than pleased with the attendance. "We think the Family Day program was very, very successful," he said, "particularly the afternoon and evening events."

Sheets said the crowd at the all-day celebration seemed to especially enjoy the fish chowder donated by Aslanis Seafood of South Quincy and touring the USS Salem, the centerpiece of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at the shipyard.

"People raved about the chowder and were very pleased with their tour of the ship," said Sheets. "We gave out 31 gallons of chowder. And the weather was great."

The event also included performances by local favorites the Quincy Symphony Orchestra and The Fat City Band and nationally-known rock group Sha Na Na.

"Sha Na Na was packed," said Sheets. "It would be impossible for me to estimate the crowd."

The Salem had about 1,000 visitors during the event, he added. He estimated the entire attendance at the 12-hour celebration as being between 3,000 and 5,000.

The only problem at the event was with the organizations behind the kiddy rides, the mayor said. Sheets said several either arrived late or failed to show up entirely, a problem that will be corrected when the event

Burn this and get jail time.

Is this the way you see it, Larry Chretien?

Two violent destructive acts. With one big difference.

There's a law against destroying a mailbox. When somebody burns a mailbox, it's considered a federal felony. If they are caught, they go to jail for up to three years. And if convicted, they would probably be forced to pay sizable fines. But for another violent act of destruction - burning the American Flag - there's no law, no penalties.

In fact, the American people don't currently have the right to outlaw desecration of the American Flag. Evidently, that's how Larry Chretien wants it. As a City Councillor, he voted against a Resolution urging the U.S. Congress to pass the Flag Protection Amendment.

The Flag Amendment would allow each State Legislature to approve a Constitutional amendment restoring the power to enact laws protecting the American Flag, a right that was taken away by a narrow Supreme Court Ruling. A Constitutional Amendment is the only way to restore that right and allow the people of Massachusetts to make the final decision on how to protect this national symbol.

Burn this and get nothing.

BRUCE AYERS voted to urge Congress to adopt the Flag Protection Amendment and will actively support ratifying such an amendment as your State Representative.

But Larry Chretien doesn't think we should have the right to protect the Flag.

On September 15th, please vote for BRUCE AYERS in the Democratic Primary. With the Flag Amendment hopefully on its way to the Legislature, we need BRUCE AYERS as our State Representative.

REMEMBER ME?

In less than two weeks the voters in North Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Wollaston, Squantum and North Randolph will have the opportunity to select their next State Representative. As members of the Citizens Flag Alliance, we write this Open Letter to ask voters to take a look at what distinguishes BRUCE AYERS from his opponent.

A few years ago, the United States Supreme Court narrowly invalidated all laws, including those of Massachusetts, that prohibited physical desecration of the American flag. Since that time, a national coalition of patriotic and fraternal orders like the American Legion, Elks, Knights of Columbus and Sons of Italy have been working to secure an amendment to the U.S. Constitution that would provide specific protection for the flag. A clear majority of Americans, including 78% of those polled in Massachusetts, support this attempt to rectify the court's imprudent decision.

This effort is only a few votes away from securing Congressional approval for the amendment protecting the American flag. Once that is accomplished, it will head to each state Legislature in the Union for approval. As a member of the Quincy City Council, BRUCE AYERS demonstrated his support for the American flag by voting to approve a Flag Amendment Resolution. Bruce Ayers is needed at the State House to help shepherd this important matter through the approval process.

Unlike his opponent, BRUCE AYERS is a strong supporter of the flag and other veteran's issues. He has demonstrated the type of strong character and conviction that make us proud to sign this letter in support of his candidacy. We think his focused campaign about ideas and values is the reason why veterans and citizens support BRUCE AYERS for State Representative.

No Candidates On Reform Party Ballot

The state has printed ballots for a party that won't even be represented in next week's primary election. About 21,000 regular ballots and 10,000 absentee ballots (the numbers in Quincy are about 300 and 150 respectively) were printed for the Reform Party despite the fact there are no Reform Party candidates currently running for office, according to Jack McCarthy, chief of staff for Massachusetts Secretary of State William Galvin. McCarthy said although the cost is minimal—it only costs about $3,840 to print Reform Party ballots for the entire state and about $54 for Quincy alone—he said he understands it may sound strange that ballots are printed for an unrepresented party. Still, the law is the law, he said, and the Reform Party is the only official party in the state other than the Democratic and Republican parties, he said. "They have the right to have ballots, because they're a party," he said.

and has her sleep interrupted every morning. Randy Bergeson, general manager of BFI said he "looked forward to working with the board" to try to rectify the problem. In a related matter, Norman Goyette read a letter written by Ward 4 councillor Michael D'Amico regarding complaints from residents about the noise from BFI on Nightingale Ave. In the letter, D'Amico said the trucks are parked too close to the homes of the residents, and are only washed "once a week." He added that the promised landscaping was not done. Forrest said they had placed the repositioned trucks in different areas and are painting two trucks a month. He added that they are "very aware of cleanliness" and have installed deodorizing equipment in the rear of the trucks. He explained that the reason the landscaping was not completed was that the city was supposed to place curbing on the sidewalk and BFI was waiting for that to be done first.

Elvera DeYoung Tribute To Be Held Saturday

An Appreciation Day in honor of Elvera DeYoung of Quincy will be held Saturday at 1 p.m. at Welcome Young Park. The event will include the planting of a tree in her honor dedicated in appreciation of her "years of faithful service to the park and the neighborhood," according to Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers. Ayers said he has been working with the Park Department and members of the community and the Atlantic Neighborhood Association to "identify a lasting tribute that reflects her love for a greener, more beautiful city" and will install a plaque reflecting the dedication of the tree in her honor. All are welcome to attend the ceremony. "Mrs. DeYoung is a community hero and I am proud to plant this tree as a lasting reminder of her love for Welcome Young Park and the city," said Ayers.

Eric Joyce Completes Cadet Basic Training

Eric J. Joyce of Quincy has completed the cadet basic training program at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y. After completing the basic training program, cadets are accepted in the U.S. Corps of Cadets at the academy. Upon graduation from the academy, they receive a bachelor's degree and are commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Army. Joyce is the son of Janet M. Gilleran of 38 Malvesti Way. He is a 1997 graduate of The Pingree School, South Hamilton.

Finds Mistake On Ballots Draicchio Saves Election Workers From A Headache

Quincy Board of Registrars member Bill Draicchio saved a number of Massachusetts election workers from an unnecessary headache when he recently discovered a mistake on the ballots for the upcoming state primary election.

According to City Clerk Joseph Shea, Draicchio discovered that the ballots printed for the election were too light to be read by the optical scan system that Quincy and about "30 or 40" other communities in the state now use to count ballots.

Shea said if the mistake had not been discovered, "hundreds of thousands of ballots" would have had to be recounted by hand. A total of about 51,000 ballots were printed for Quincy alone, he added.

He praised Draicchio for his alertness in finding the mistake as early as he did—about two-and-a-half weeks ago.

"We probably would have discovered it before the election anyway, but Bill wanted to check them in a timely manner, and thankfully he was on the job," said Shea. "He sure saved us some grief."

As a result of the mistake, Massachusetts Secretary of State William Galvin had to have the ballots for all of the communities that use the optical scan system reprinted.

"I don't think he was too happy about that," said Shea.

Eastern Recognized As 'Blue Ribbon Bank'

Eastern Bank has been designated a "Blue Ribbon Bank" announces Kitty Heller, president of Veribanc, an independent bank research firm that assesses the financial health of over 25,000 federally-insured banks, thrifts, and credit unions.

The Blue Ribbon Bank award, it was noted, is for highly rated institutions that demonstrate exceptional attention to safety, soundness, and financial strength. It is the oldest national award presented to banks by private sector analysis. The award is based on Eastern Bank's strong performance for the quarter ending March 31, 1998 and previous quarters.

The financial strength required for a bank to be designated involves 20 different safety aspects of the institution's operations. These include its balance sheet, income statement, loan portfolio, compliance with federal requirements, off-balance sheet exposure and the condition of any affiliated banks. For the safety conscious customer, Veribanc's Blue Ribbon Award is called "the next best thing to a guarantee against failure."

As-of-March 31, 1998, Eastern Bank has regulatory capital ratios which exceed averages for all banks in Massachusetts and in the United States. In addition, the Bank's capital measures exceed benchmarks established by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) for an institution to be considered "well capitalized." Eastern also has exhibited strong asset quality in comparison with most financial institutions by keeping strong loan loss reserves.

"We are pleased to receive recognition as a Blue Ribbon Bank," said Eastern Bank President Stan Lukowski. "Eastern draws considerable strength serving the financial needs of the Greater Boston area. Because we are locally owned and operated, decisions are made here and dollars deposited in the bank are used to benefit this area through loans to our citizens and businesses. We believe that this continuing commitment to the people of Massachusetts will be the cornerstone of our banking success during the coming years."

Eastern Bank Corporation, a mutual bank holding company, and its wholly-owned subsidiaries, Eastern Bank and Eastern Bank & Trust Company, is a $2.5 billion full-service banking company with 43 offices in the Greater Boston area and a Corporate Lending office in Boston. Eastern's lines of business include consumer banking, trust, private banking, investment management, mortgage banking, consumer finance, commercial lending, asset-based lending, and equipment leasing.

Think we can't do better fighting crime and drugs?

You don't know Jack.

JACK CORRIGAN. TOUGH. INNOVATIVE. EXPERIENCED.

As a top Assistant District Attorney for nearly eight years, Jack Corrigan helped Bill Delahunt make the Norfolk County DA's Office one of America's most innovative and respected crime-fighting organizations.

Now Jack's running for District Attorney himself, and he's the only candidate with a plan to fight crime and make our neighborhoods safe from drugs and violence.

Keeping kids off heroin.

Jack Corrigan will redirect investigative resources, including wire taps, to aggressively prosecute the growing threat from heroin dealers. He'll push for tougher penalties for heroin traffickers, and he'll work to change the laws to permit mandatory, frequent drug testing of addicts on parole or probation, at their expense. Testing dirty will mean increasingly tough jail sentences.

And Jack will work for early identification and treatment of kids experimenting with heroin, before they are lost to addiction and crime.

Computerized crime fighting.

Career criminals know all about computers, but our DA's office is still in the stone age. Jack Corrigan will help police solve more crimes with a computerized Automated Fingerprint Identification System (AFIS) to quickly match crime scene prints with known felons. He'll also create a Criminal Offender Database to give police instant computer access to police reports, warrants, photos, prints, and other key data on suspects.

24 hour-a-day back-up.

Jack Corrigan will have trained prosecutors on call 24 hours-a-day to assist police with interrogations, search warrants and investigative assistance—and that will mean more convictions!

Community Prosecution.

Community prosecution programs — with prosecutors meeting regularly with residents and leaders to understand local problems — have lowered crime rates in other counties, and helped people reclaim their neighborhoods. Jack will make it work here!

Preventing juvenile violence.

Jack knows violent teenagers need tough treatment. But he also understands non-violent juvenile offenders can be straightened out...if we give them the support they need. To deal with the increasing lack of adult supervision, Jack will work to keep school gyms, computer labs, and libraries open longer. He'll also support adult mentoring programs to help disadvantaged kids from homes with drug and other kinds of abuse.

Shelter for battered women.

Jack Corrigan has pledged that as DA he'll create a new shelter for battered women and children from the first drug dealer's home he seizes. He'll also dedicate a portion of the office's drug forfeiture account to badly under-funded battered women's shelters.

To break the link between substance abuse and domestic abuse, he'll force convicted batterers to take random drug tests. Failing to test clean will mean jail for batterers on parole or probation.

The ideas and experience we need.

Jack Corrigan has the new ideas we need, and the experience to make them work!

Call now to find out how you can join Jack's fight against crime: 617/472-1140.

Chretien Receives Labor Endorsements

Candidate for State Representative Larry Chretien announces he has been endorsed by United Food and Commercial Workers Local 791 and Teamsters Local 379.

Chretien said, "I am proud to receive the support of Local 791 and Local 379. There is a big gap in pay and working conditions between workers represented by organized labor and those who are not, particularly in the industries in which members of Local 791 and Local 379 are employed. In the 1990s, it has become more important than ever for workers to be organized and for government to be on the side of workers.

"I have been endorsed by many more unions than my opponent. Furthermore, I am supported by unions representing workers in every aspect of our economy. While today's economy is obviously strong, it is harsh to workers who do not have the support of organized labor and their elected officials. If I become state representative, people who depend upon paychecks and pensions to make ends meet will have a friend in government."

Chretien has previously been endorsed by Bricklayers, Local 3; Electrical Workers, Local 103; Tunnelworkers, Local 88; Roofers, Local 33; Machinists, Local 264; Ironworkers, Local 7; Boston Newspaper Printing Pressmen's Union #3; Teamsters, Local 25; Painters, District Council 35; Sheet Metal Workers Local 17; Carpenters Locals 67 and 424.

Also, Boston Carmen's Union Local 589; the Quincy and South Shore Building Trades Council; Mass. Federation of Teachers; Mass. Teachers Association; Boston Teachers Association; Service Employees International Union Local 509; and the Commonwealth Coalition, a coalition of 28 labor unions, environmental groups, and other organizations.

Daniel Barrett Honored For Outstanding Achievement

Daniel Barrett, employed by Raytheon Electronics Division in Quincy as senior production control planner, was recently presented with the Carroll Society award for outstanding achievement in the workforce by a person who is visually impaired.

Barrett, employed by Raytheon for 16 years, is the first legally blind person ever employed in Raytheon's Quincy plant. He was nominated for the award by his employee for his excellent work performance, providing a positive example of overcoming barriers to achievement.

Barrett commutes daily to Quincy from his home in Marblehead where he lives with his wife and their three children. As a legally blind person, he uses a specially adapted 21-inch computer screen on the job to enlarge data, along with high-powered magnifiers to help read print copy.

He was selected for the Carroll Society award, along with six other visually impaired persons from throughout the state, for his ability to excel in the work place, in spite of limited vision, demonstrating the unlimited potential of the blind or visually impaired employee.

The Carroll Awards are conducted each year by the Carroll Center for the Blind, a private rehabilitation and training center and the Mass. Commission for the Blind to publicly acknowledge the achievements and contributions to the work force that are being made by persons who are blind or visually impaired.

Probation, Court Officers Endorse Bellotti

Local 254 of the Services Employees International Union, one of the largest unions in the state, has endorsed Michael Bellotti, Democratic candidate for Norfolk County Sheriff.

"Local 254, representing nearly 20,000 members in the Commonwealth, including 2,400 working for the Trial Court as probation officers, court officers, and building security officers, enthusiastically endorses your candidacy for the office of Sheriff of Norfolk County," said Local 254

Business Manager Edward Sullivan Jr. in a letter to the Bellotti campaign.

"This is a great endorsement for our campaign," said Bellotti. "The fact that public safety officers who work closely with the courts and with the Sheriff's Office are supporting our campaign tells me our message is being heard. It tells me that our message of accountability, innovation and collaboration for a re-invented Sheriff's Office is growing across Norfolk County."

REAL ESTATE

Old Tricks For A New Landscape

There's just something special about settling into a new home.

Everything is new to you and your family. The path from your bedroom to the kitchen has changed. And the view from the entryway window now features an entirely new neighborhood.

That means you'll have to take on a new and refreshing task of keeping your home's exterior looking inviting for your new neighbors and passersby. What are a few of the house-friendly landscaping tips that should keep your home looking new instead of old and outdated?

If you're moving into a brand new house, take note of the trees that you may now presently tower over. Make sure trees are planted far enough away from the house so they cannot damage your siding or fill your gutters with leaves and other debris. If it's in the early stages, you have the freedom to move it out of harm's way.

You can also move bushes now if it looks like they'll block crawl space vents in the future. It's a lot simpler to move trees and bushes in their early stages because their root systems haven't quite taken hold yet.

Now that you've placed your trees and vegetation at a more suitable distance from your home, take a walk in the rain around your house. Check to see if the water flows away from the house. If there are puddles present in low spots near the home, this problem is easily fixable. Wherever you see a puddle, dig a swale in the dirt berm, the nuisance-causing water buildup, to keep the water flowing away from your home.

You may want to go a step further by taking a step up to look at your gutters. Periodic cleanings of fallen leaves from your roof and gutters will help keep water from seeping into your crawl space and basement.

While you're at it, take a look at the trim paint on your house. Painters usually apply only a thin coat of paint on trim, so after one cold season, repainting may be necessary. It's a good idea to perform yearly checkups not only on your trim paint, but caulking as well. Look around the garage door. Inspect the outline of the siding.

Proper upkeep of your home's exterior should keep your home looking newer, longer.

Touring The Iberian Peninsula

By FRANK McCAULEY

Recently, Sandra and I continued our long-range plan to "Spend Our Children's Inheritance" by taking a 10-day trip to Spain and Portugal.

In previous years we toured England, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Germany as well as Italy. To overcome the six-hour time differential between the Eastern United States and Europe, most transatlantic flights leave in the early evening so that the 6 1/2-hour flight arrives in the morning European time.

Our tour, started in Madrid, the capital of Spain, a city of some 4 million people. In the next eight days we visited the Spanish cities of Avila, Salamanca, Seville, Cordoba and Toledo, along with the Portuguese capital of Lisbon. In addition we visited the shrine at Fatima in Portugal, where in the spring of 1917 the Blessed Virgin is said to have appeared on a number of occasions to peasant children.

On the day of our visit, despite a continuous rain, thousands of pilgrims congregated at the site where the apparitions were said to have occurred. Many of the pilgrims approach the site by walking on their knees. Lucia, the eldest of the three children, is still alive and lives in a nearby convent. The area adjacent to the Grotto is heavily commercialized with stores selling commemorative.

In contrast to the cities in the United States, the cities in Spain and Portugal and other European countries have histories that go back 1,000 years. In the cities of Cordoba, Seville and Toledo the Roman, Christian, Jewish and Moslem cultures from prior centuries are evidenced in the architecture of the buildings.

There is a line from the musical "My Fair Lady" that "the rain in Spain falls mainly in the plain." As a result of our experience with the weather, I would change that to "the rain in Spain falls mainly everywhere." During our trip every day we were treated to some showers (maybe it just seemed like every day!).

During the course of the trip we traveled in a large, comfortable air-conditioned bus. The tour director is the key to a successful trip. He or she has to make sure that everything goes smoothly, that the tourists know times of departure, that the baggage is accounted for and that everyone is on board before the bus continues on to the next destination.

Our tour director was Lucia, a 29-year-old native of Spain. From March to November, the tourist period in Spain, she works literally non-stop. Completing our tour on a Friday, she started with a new group the next day, Saturday. Lucia, a graduate of a Spanish university, is fluent in four languages, her native Spanish as well as English, French and Italian. The other member of the tour team is the driver of the bus. Our driver was a 25-year-old Spaniard with the Un-Spanish name of Oscar. Watching him navigate a large tour bus through the narrow streets in the cities was an exciting experience.

In addition to seeing the historical sites in the countries, meeting and interacting with our fellow tourists is an important part of any trip. Our tour group was comprised of 38 people who came from all over the world. Some of the countries represented were Australia, New Zealand, Sri Lanka (former Ceylon), Singapore, Hong Kong, El Salvador, Canada, England, as well as many parts of the United States. Some of our touring companions included Beverly and Patricia, cousins from Boca Raton, Fla. and Canton, Ohio, respectively, and Tony, a management consultant from Australia. Tony, who was a World War II RAF veteran, and I had many conversations about his experiences in the service.

As a student of government, I was interested in the political structure and laws in Spain and how they related to the laws of our country. Spain, a country of 40 million people, has an unemployment rate of 22 percent, one of the highest in Europe. A large part of the country is devoted to agriculture, cattle-raising and mining. We saw many bulls out in the countryside being fattened up for the bull ring. Bull-fighting is second only to soccer as Spain's favorite sport.

The voting age and the minimum age to obtain a driver's license are both 18. However, the legal age to drink and purchase alcohol is only 16! No license to sell alcohol is required. Wine is Spain's most popular beverage and costs less than Coca-Cola. Eighty-five percent of Spaniards own their own homes or condominiums. The average salary in Spain is $1,000 per month, which translates into $12,000 yearly. However, all workers in Spain receive double pay in the months of August (vacation month) and December (Christmas month), bringing up the average salary to $14,000.

In the area of education, all students must pass an examination to graduate from high school. This grade is average with the grades received in each of the four years of high school, to arrive at an overall average. Education officials then decide, based on the number of applications received for various college disciplines, the minimum average required to enter that field of education. The higher the number of applications for a particular educational field, the higher the minimum academic average required.

Spain is a limited monarchy, much like England. The present King, Juan Carlos, returned to Spain after the death of General Francisco Franco in 1975. He and the royal family have a palace in Madrid but spend most of their time at a residence just outside the capital. The actual governing of Spain lies with an elected President and the Cortes, an unicameral legislature.

Like in many European countries, medical care is free; however, it takes four or five months to get a doctor's appointment and sometimes year if you need an operation. This situation exists in a country where many graduates of medical school are unemployed. Because of serious budgeting problems, sufficient funds are not available to take care of the population's medical needs.

Serious crime (murder, rape, robbery) is not a problem in Spain or Portugal; however, tourists are constantly warned to protect their valuables against pickpockets and handbags snatchers.

In Madrid, Sandra ran afoul of one juvenile handbag snatcher, or rather the miscreant ran afoul of Sandra! Attempting to grab her handbag (a Mother's Day gift from daughter Julie Tympanick), he was driven off by Sandra who shouted at him (and I quote), "Get out of here you little S.O.B., you're not getting my handbag!" The would-be thief was last seen heading for the Portuguese border.

Altogether, despite the handbag incident, it was a great trip! Spain and Portugal, along with other countries, are great places to visit although we wouldn't want to live there.

There's no place like home!

14 NQHS Students Help Work On Habitat Houses

Fourteen North Quincy High School students recently returned from a five-day volunteer work session in Bridgeport, Conn.

The students served as Habitat for Humanity volunteers, working on four houses being built on the east side of Bridgeport.

Habitat for Humanity is a worldwide program devoted to providing housing for qualified families. The families must qualify with 500 hours of "sweat equity," working on their new home or another home in the program. They must also have a job and be able to carry the payments on the interest-free mortgage financed by the Habitat program.

The trip was sponsored by North Quincy High School and chaperoned by math teachers Ron Erikson and Kipp Caldwell and their wives Gloria and Nicki. The students are also advanced placement geometry students and leaders in the freshman class.

"The students worked very hard," said Caldwell. "They did pick and shovel work, moved rocks and trash, built a cement block retaining wall, and put down a sub-floor. They actually got to use some of their geometry skills."

"These students were a wonderful representation of their families and of North Quincy High School," added Erikson. "We are all very proud of them and what they did."

FOUR-WHEEL DRIVE

For optimum traction on slippery surfaces or off-road conditions, nothing beats four-wheel drive. Vehicles with part-time four-wheel drive use a separate shift lever, or dash switch, to "lock" the front and rear axles so they turn at the same speed. Fine for driving through mud or snow, the system should be turned off on dry roads to prevent tire scrubbing during cornering on dry roads. On the other hand, as its name implies, full-time four-wheel drive (available as either selectable or permanent systems) can be used all the time. Its center differential (or equivalent mechanism) allows the front and rear wheels to turn independently during cornering. In difficult conditions, the center differential can lock to provide excellent traction.

Next time you need work done on any system, including its drive system, bring your car, truck, or SUV into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Our ASE Certified technicians and our availability of parts will assure you of a job well done. We're proud of our staff and you can trust us to get you back on the road quickly. We're conveniently located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon.-Fri. 8am-6pm, Sat. 7am-5pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

HINT: All-wheel drive is much like four-wheel drive, with the exception that it has no low-range gear - making it largely unsuitable for off-road use.

McInnis' Achieve Rare Feat At Presidents Golf Course Father-Daughter Duo Notch Holes-In-One In Span Of A Week

By LIAM FITZGERALD

A hole-in-one in golf is quite a rarity, but for a father and daughter to accomplish the feat in the span of a week—at the same course, no less—is even more remarkable.

That's exactly what Jack McInnis of Quincy and his 14-year-old daughter, Jill, did at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy.

Filling in for an absent member during a league tournament on July 24, Jill used a sand wedge on the seventh hole (140 yards) and notched an ace as her father watched in amazement from the next hole.

"The timing was incredible, because I was in the group ahead of hers and I watched her shot go in," said Jack, 35, who works full-time as assistant manager t the Quincy Youth Hockey Arena. "She could've done it any time, but it worked out well that I was there when she did it."

"I was surprised hers went in, because it came up short of the green. It bounced up onto the green and just rolled in. It was her first hole-in-one, which made it even more special for me to witness it."

Also a talented hockey player, Jill will attend Tabor Academy in the fall and try out for the hockey team as well the golf team.

"She likes playing hockey and is a pretty good player," said Jack. "Tabor's a great school and they have a girls' hockey program. There isn't a girls' golf team, so if she plays, it will be with the boys. Hopefully she'll continue playing through college, because she's a lot further ahead than I was at her age."

A week before Jill's ace, Jack was playing at Presidents when he selected the sand wedge at the second hole (115 yards). Jack, who has been playing Fridays in the Elks golf league for 12 years, picked up his first-ever ace when his shot

JACK MCINNIS (right) of Quincy and his daughter, Jill, recently achieved a rare golf feat—a hole-in-one—within one week of each other at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy. "It was neat the way it happened, because holes-in-one are so rare anyway," said Jack. "For me to do it one week, then she does it a week later, that's amazing."

found the bottom of the cup. "It was neat the way it happened, because holes-in-one are so rare anyway," said Jack. "For me to do it one week, then she does it a week later, that's amazing."

Another family member was in attendance when Jack sunk his ace—his son, Jack, 9.

"Having him there in our group when I got mine," said Jack, "was a big thrill for both of us."

Known in local hockey circles for his rocket-like slap shot, McInnis also utilizes that strength on the golf course.

Last Saturday, he competed in the regional finals of the Remax National Long Driving Contest in Wellsey Island, N.Y. Unfortunately, a mishap with his regular driver put him at a disadvantage against tough competition.

"I broke my driver during warmups, the one I always use, and it just wasn't the same with the backup," said McInnis. "I was also in one of the strongest groups of the day, so that made it tough."

The 40-plus golfers were separated into 11 groups, with the winner of each group moving on to the shootout. Of the 11 finalists, the top three following the shootout landed a spot in the national finals in Nevada.

McInnis matched the drive of 328 yards that qualified him for the regional, but another competitor in his group launched a drive of 341 to advance to the shootout.

"It was a good experience, and I'm very glad I went," he said. "This was my first time at an event like that, and I can do better. I know I can hit with those guys. It just didn't work out that way, but I'm looking forward to giving it another shot next year."

Season Opener Saturday Raiders Look To Build On Last Year's Success

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Looking to build on the success of last year's first-ever tournament appearance, the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team opens its season this weekend, setting its sights on another postseason trip.

The Red Raiders' quest begins Saturday, when they visit Martha's Vineyard for a 1 p.m. non-league tilt. North Quincy plays Monday at 3:45 p.m. at non-league foe Norwood.

NQ's home opener is Wednesday at 4 p.m. against Old Colony League foe Silver Lake, a perennial contender for the OCL crown.

This fall, however, North head coach Paul Bregoli and his talented squad have set their sights on winning the OCL title, and with eight returning starters and a deep bench, that goal is not out of the question.

"We have a solid group back, with a lot of varsity experience," said Bregoli, now in his fourth year as head coach. "We're looking to build on last year's breakthrough season (8-6-4 record), and I think we can do that, given that talent we have coming back. I have a tremendous amount of flexibility, because all of the girls can play."

Five more seniors will play key roles in the Red Raiders' success. Returners Liz Bennett (mid, stopper) and Katie Ceurvels (outside mid, back) will be joined by Renee Gillan (outside back), Lauren Koch (forward, mid) and Rachel O'Hara (sweeper). Koch returns after a year away from the

"Winning the OCL is not out of the realm of possibilities. Silver Lake and Falmouth will be good, but they lost some talent and we proved we could play with them. We definitely should be in the hunt."

Leading the Red Raiders on their postseason drive will be senior captains Kristen Bowes (keeper), Dorothy Cronin (mid and stopper), Rachael Powers (sweeper) and Betsy Stone (forward). Bowes held opponents to less than a goal per game in the regular season as a junior. Powers is a four-year starter and Stone was NQ's leading scorer as a freshman and sophomore.

"Those are four solid kids we're looking at to lead us," said Bregoli. "They all played an important role last year and this year should be no different."

Even a few sophomores, all of whom saw varsity action a year ago, will see significant playing time this fall: outside backs Jen Conley and Stacy Szeszail, along with Kellee Conley (forward, mid).

team and O'Hara moves up to the varsity after a strong JV season.

North's talent doesn't end with the seniors, as six juniors will be counted on for their contributions to the squad: Ashley Murphy (forward), Caitlyn O'Donnell (outside mid, wing), Jill Nicholson (forward, mid), Maureen Holleran (outside mid), Kristin Coughlin (outside mid) and Lauren Awed (forward, mid).

Even a few sophomores, all of whom saw varsity action a year ago, will see significant playing time this fall: outside backs Jen Conley and Stacy Szeszail, along with Kellee Conley (forward, mid).

Bregoli was quite impressed with the number of girls who came out for the squad, which bodes well for the program's future.

"We had 52 girls come out, which is unbelievable," he said. "That includes 23 freshmen, so we'll be playing a 16-game freshman schedule. They'll see a lot of time on the field, which is how you continue to build a program. We're psyched; it should be a fun season."

Prior to joining Eastern, Coltin served as senior vice president in the Corporate Retail Services Group, and Quality Management Division at Fleet Financial Group in Boston. Previously, he served as regional manager of Fleet's Boston region and was responsible for sales, service and administration of 27 offices in the Metro Boston market-place.

A graduate of Bentley College and the Graduate School of Retail Bank Management at the University of Virginia, Coltin will be

QHS, Sheriff's Office Form New Partnership

Quincy High School and the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office have launched a partnership aimed at strengthening school attendance, helping at-risk students and fostering student leadership.

The partnership between Quincy High School and the Sheriff's Office creates three innovative programs in the high school: a Saturday Detention Program, a School Liaison, and a Leadership Camp.

"The programs are a concentrated effort to make school children aware of the significance of attendance school. Success later in life starts with attending classes," said School Supt. Eugene Creedon.

"The keys to student success are attendance, attitude and achievement," said Principal Robert Keuther. "With improved student attendance and a positive school climate we can then expect our student body to achieve at a higher level. This exciting opportunity to collaborate with the Sheriff's Office will help all students, especially those viewed as at-risk, excel in their education."

The Sheriff's Office, using non-taxpayer money, will provide a $6,000 grant to fund the Saturday Detention Program. It has already paid $7,000 to fund the leadership camp, held in early August at Stonehill College in Easton. In addition, the Sheriff's Office will fund a school liaison to work in Quincy High School to focus on aiding at-risk students.

"We all have a responsibility to help children succeed, and quality education is vital.

The grants to Quincy High School are an investment in the achievement of students," Sheriff Jack Flood said. "Partnerships such as this one combine the resources of public agencies and create a stronger, united front to deal with these challenges."

Representatives from the Quincy Public Schools, the Sheriff's Office and the City of Quincy gathered recently in the Quincy High School Pride Room to sign a partnership agreement. Those signing the agreement were Mayor James Sheets, Flood, Creedon, Keuther and Student Council President Leanne Martin.

The Quincy High School-Sheriff's Office collaboration is part of the "Design for the 21st Century" reorganization plan at the high school. Its goal is to make adjustments necessary to improve student achievement. The collaboration's three facts are:

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL and the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office recently signed a partnership agreement aimed at strengthening school attendance, helping at-risk students and fostering student leadership. Among those on hand were, from left, Patrick Bradley, Sheriff's Office superintendent; Jack Scanlon, Quincy High teacher; Leanne Martin, Quincy High Student Council president; Norfolk County Sheriff Josephine Shea; Quincy School Supt. Eugene Creedon; Quincy High Principal Robert Keuther; and Norfolk County Sheriff Jack Flood.

Leadership Camp
The camp, held Aug. 12 and 13, united students of various backgrounds to develop a common understanding of the expectations of respectful and responsible student leadership. This is essential to developing a strong school climate.

Saturday Detention Program

This program will reduce suspension programs both in-building and out-of-building during the school week. By placing students in detention on Saturday, they are punished on their time. The detention will last for two hours each Saturday morning and requires students to arrive prepared to work on class assignments.

School Liaison

The Sheriff's Office will fund a school liaison, who will be on site at Quincy High School to assist at-risk students and hold them accountable for class attendance. The liaison, working directly with the school principal, will collaborate with all Norfolk County agencies involved in the juvenile justice system as well as the criminal justice system. And the liaison will be the Sheriff's designee at various roundtables implemented by the school.

The school-sheriff partnership is the 73rd collaborative for Quincy Public Schools, whose other partners include businesses, community groups and public agencies. The Quincy Public School's network of partnerships is coordinated by Arthur Keough, director of community-school partnerships.

The partnership is the latest involvement of the Sheriff's Office in Norfolk County's public schools. The Sheriff's K-9 Unit has searched for drugs in schools across the county in collaboration with school administrators and local police, and the Unit is often invited to perform demonstrations in schools. The Sheriff's Office provides $28,000 annually to fund D.A.R.E. programs countywide. Thousands of students have toured the House of Correction and spoken to inmates, who urge them to avoid drugs and crime. Also, Sheriff's Office deputies have worked in undercover narcotics operations in schools.

Sheriff's Office funding for the partnership is derived from revenues of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, raised by leasing roof space at the House of Correction to communications companies.

"By issuing grants to schools and police departments, we can indirectly return the profits of this public agency to the taxpayers. These grants will prove to be an effective way to help communities better serve their citizens," Flood said.

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy Police Department will be strengthened by the addition of 22 new officers to its roster this week.

The group will be sworn-in by City Clerk Joseph Shea during a ceremony Friday at 10 a.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

Police Chief Thomas Frane said he is pleased to be able to welcome the new men aboard.

"It's terrific," he said. "I'm looking forward to all of the new people we'll have. We've been very well supported by the mayor (when it comes to staffing).

"It's an exciting time to be in this office. It's a fun time to be here, actually. It's great."

Harshbarger, Cellucci Win, 32.8% Voter Turnout Here Ayers, Keating State Rep., D.A. Winners

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers defeated former Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien by 589 votes in Tuesday's local primary election attraction to nail down the First Norfolk District state representative seat.

With no Republican opposition in November, the win assures Ayers of the seat Michael Bellotti left to run for Norfolk County sheriff.

State Senator William R. Keating of Sharon appeared to be the winner of the Democratic nomination for district attorney.

Keating carried Quincy with 45 percent of the vote and had 50 percent of the county vote with 80 percent of it counted as The Sun went to press.

Keating's vote in Quincy was 5,700, an 1,146 margin over Norfolk County Commissioner William O'Donnell's 4,554 or 35.95 percent. John J. Corrigan had 2,392 for 18.89 percent.

The three were running in those positions with most of the county votes counted.

Keating will face Republican incumbent Jeffrey Locke in the November final election. Locke received 2,032 votes in Quincy Tuesday.

Ayers, 36, polled 3,572 votes or 54.86 percent in the 12 Quincy precincts in the First Norfolk District.

Chretien, 37, had 2,937 or 45.11 percent of the Quincy vote and topped Ayers in the single Randolph precinct by 46 votes, 272 to 226.

Only 32.87 percent of Quincy's 51,454 voters turned out.

Quincy Republicans gave Acting Gov. A. Paul Cellucci a close nod over Joseph D. Malone, 58.96 percent to 40.51 percent. Cellucci topped Malone here by 525 votes, 1,678 to 1,153.

But while Atty. Gen. Scott Harshbarger rolled to the Democratic nomination for governor state-wide,

BRUCE AYERS

WILLIAM KEATING

Quincy remained true to an old friend, former Congressman Brian J. Donnelly.

Donnelly topped Harshbarger and Donnelly's vote here was 5,643 or 41.88 percent to Harshbarger's 4,758 (35.32 percent) and McGovern's 3,013 (22.36 percent).

State Senator Warren E. Tolman who won the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor also won here.

Tolman defeated Dorothy A. Kelly Gay by a vote of 6,782 (59.48 percent) or 4,595 (40.30 percent).

But Jane M. Swift, who captured the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor state-wide was edged here by Janet E. Jeghelian, 1,351 (51.49 percent) to 1,262 (48.09 percent).

Dist. Atty. Thomas F. Reilly topped Lois G. Pines here in the race for the Democratic attorney general nomination. Reilly had 7,304 votes (55.10 percent) to Pines' 5,938 (44.79 percent). Reilly was the projected state-wide winner as The Sun went to press late Tuesday.

With 39 percent of the Fourth District Governor's Councillor vote in, Quincy businessman Daniel J. Flynn was leading the five-candidate Democratic field including incumbent Christopher A. Iannella, Jr.

Flynn got off to a big start in Quincy with a vote of 7,391 or 57.72 percent. Iannella was second with 3,019 (23.58) followed by Clare M. Schroeder, 1,589 (12.41 percent), Brian D. O'Reilly, 472 and Jacquelyne Payne-Thompson, 325.

Democrat incumbent Peter H. Collins was running far ahead of challenger John W. Fallon, Jr. for the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County Commissioner. Collins' vote in Quincy was 9,046 (78.55 percent) to Fallon's 2,451 (21.28 percent).

"We're thrilled to have the opportunity to serve the constituents of the First Norfolk District," said Ayers. "We're going to start putting together an agenda as soon as possible. I'm going to get down to some hard work, and I look forward to meeting with the Speaker of the House to lay down some plans."

Ayers said the key to his victory is the way he interacts with the voters.

At Quincy High School Quarry Hill Project Hearing Tonight

The City Council and Planning Board will continue a joint public hearing tonight (Thursday) regarding a proposal by Boston developer Congress Group Ventures to build more than 1,600 apartments on Quarry Hill.

The hearing will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the Lloyd Hill Auditorium at Quincy High School.

On Sept. 10, the hearing was recessed because it was too crowded for the City Council Chambers at City Hall, which seats fewer than 100 people. The school auditorium seats 500.

The project, proposed for the 75-acre High Point development property, would have 1,391 units of luxury apartments and 250 units in an assisted living facility. The $200 million project would be the largest residential development south of Boston.

The proposal has raised some conflict-of-interest questions regarding two City Council members who have property interests in the area.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond said he will not vote on the plan or attend any meetings because he owns undeveloped land off Curtis Street, which is next to the eastern border of the development property.

Councillor Timothy Cahill has said he has not yet decided whether he should

'Bridging The Gap'

First-Time Offenders Program At Salvation Army

The "Bridging the Gap Between Youth and Community Services" program has been implemented at The Salvation Army in Quincy, announces Maj. Robert Klenk, corps commanding officer.

The program is a unique and innovative Salvation Army youth program that targets first-time juvenile offenders, ages 12-18, and strives to keep them from having any further encounters with the law.

The Quincy Salvation Army's youth referrals will come from the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office and the Youth Probation Office at Quincy District Court. Communities served include Quincy, Milton, Randolph, Holbrook, Braintree, Weymouth and Cohasset.

Those communities have a combined population of 300,000, of which 735 are young delinquents committing a variety of crimes from substance abuse to violent crime. Twenty-nine percent of first-time offenders re-offend within 90 days of the original offense.

The effort is the first program in the greater Quincy area to target first-time offenders.

"We know the program works, as it has been running successfully in Springfield and Holyoke for two years and one year respectively," said Klenk. "These two sites offer tangible, measurable proof that the program is effective. Of the 100 students served by the program, 100 percent remained in school and none have had further encounters with the legal system."

The Salvation Army's program has received tremendous support from the legal system and other community agencies, organizations and schools who have been seeking to collaborate on a program that addresses the community-wide concern.

Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke said, "The Norfolk County District Attorney's Office is pleased to partner with The Salvation Army in bringing services to at-risk youth in the Quincy area. The District Attorney's Diversion Program was created by me to provide immediate services to first-time offenders, while holding them accountable without the need for a formal prosecution.

"The Salvation Army's 'Bridging the Gap' is a highly successful after-school program, educating troubled youth in a variety of subject areas including substance abuse, life skills, self-esteem, and anger management. One hundred percent of the youth entering 'Bridging the Gap' will originate from the District Attorney's Diversion Program. With 130 youths in the Diversion Program from Quincy in the last eight months, I am proud to join forces with The Salvation Army to bring 'Bridging the Gap' to Norfolk County."

The 12-week life skills curriculum is based on the philosophy that young people will make good decisions about their lives if they are given positive guidance and support. The program educates the participants in topics such as education, employment, violence, anger management, self-esteem, decision-making, substance abuse and sexual issues. Additionally, the program offers group and individual counseling, tutoring, site visits, recreation outings and a mentor program for all graduates.

Lt. Col. Gilbert Reynders, Salvation Army Massachusetts Divisional

Commander said, "I am delighted that our teen intervention and prevention program will now benefit the Greater Quincy area. It is our hope to replicate the 'Bridging the Gap Between Youth and Community Services' program in all 31 Salvation Army Worship and Service Centers throughout Massachusetts."

Initial startup funding for the program has come from internal Salvation Army resources. Additional funding from foundations, corporations and individuals is required to expand the program and guarantee its success.

In addition to financial resources, the program needs volunteers to offer tutoring and to act as positive role models for the graduates.

For more information on the program, call Klenk at 472-2345.

Delahunt Opposed Quick Starr Report Release

Congressman William Delahunt has urged his House colleagues to respect historical precedent from the Watergate hearings to ensure the fairness of upcoming deliberations over the Bill Clinton-Monica Lewinsky story.

Delahunt made his comments last Friday, the day the Kenneth Starr report was released to the public.

Delahunt expressed deep reservations about the decision to immediately publish 445 pages of the Starr report before it has been examined either by the President or the Congress. In the only recent precedent, several weeks of closed hearings preceded the release of any such documents, he said.

A former prosecutor, Delahunt serves on the House Judiciary Committee.

The full text of Delahunt's statement:

"Mr. Speaker, two days ago, after months of speculation, leaks and revelations, the report of the Independent Counsel was delivered to the House of Representatives. If this resolution is approved this morning, the report will be in the hands of millions of people around the globe by 3 o'clock this afternoon.

"I certainly agree that the report should be released. That is not even an issue. It will be released. The only question is when and how it should be done. For in exercising the responsibilities that the Constitution has thrust upon us, we must be sure that we proceed in a manner that observes the principles of fundamental fairness that are at the heart of that document.

"Only then will the American people accept the results, whatever they may be. Only then will we begin to restore the shaken confidence of the nation in its political institutions.

"In that regard, Mr. Speaker, I consider the resolution before us today to be our first test. For in deciding the terms under which the highly sensitive material contained in this report should be released to the public, we must weigh carefully the benefits of immediate disclosure against the damage this might do to the fairness of investigation.

"If the resolution is agreed to, the entire 445 pages of the report will be posted on the Internet this very afternoon. Not a page of it will have been examined beforehand by any member of the committee. Not one page will have been seen first by the President and his attorneys.

"Some have argued that we should release the report because the essence of it has already been leaked to the press and appears in this morning's editions. If that is true, it is to be deplored, and the Independent Counsel should have to answer for it. But we should not endorse the unauthorized disclosure of pieces of the report by prematurely releasing the rest of it.

"Some have argued that

Amsterdam Ave., Milton St. Restoration To Begin In Fall

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott announce the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) will be restoring Amsterdam Ave. and Milton St. this fall.

Last winter, the MWRA repaired the 48-inch water pipe, which services the city.

"The repair of the water pipe was crucial to the continuation of drinking water to the city," said Morrissey.

As part of mitigation with the City of Quincy on the project, the MWRA agreed to pave the two roadways. In addition to paving Amsterdam Ave. and Milton St., the MWRA will install new curbing portions on the roadway and replace grass and trees that were disturbed by the repair work.

"This has been an ongoing process between the city and the MWRA working together to ensure safe drinking water and improvements to the area," said McDermott.

The schedule has final paving to begin in September and grass seeding immediately afterwards. The MWRA will coordinate tree replacement with the Quincy Parks Department.

Grass and tree replacement is the final phase of the project to ensure that the paving does not damage the grass and tree work, Morrissey and McDermott said.

Concourse Committee Meeting Sept. 23

The Quincy Center Concourse Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) will meet Wednesday, Sept. 23 at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The working session has been scheduled as a follow-up to a recent three tour walking tour of the area where Phase 2 of the concourse project will take place. Committee members agreed that a number of major decisions must be made before the CAC accepts preliminary engineering design plans.

Participants in the recent site inspection included city councilors, traffic control officials, Earth Tech engineering design specialists, business representatives and CAC members.

The group made a detailed study of street intersections, crosswalks, property and parking area takings, safety islands, traffic signals, and speed limits in the vicinity of nursing homes and high-rise senior housing facilities. Of particular concern were exits from commercial establishments and the South Shore YMCA.

Phase 2 involves a roadway from the east side of Hancock Street, McGrath Highway, and Revere, Elm, Mechanic, Spear, Brackett and Newcomb streets.

CAC Chairman David Ezickson encourages all CAC members to attend the Sept. 23 meeting to participate in the decision-making process before engineering plans are finalized.

Happy 100th, Frank

Frank Anselmo must know where the Fountain of Youth is bubbling.

The former long-time school committeeman turns 100 next Tuesday. And he's still spry and sturdy as he hits the century mark.

"I feel like a kid of 70," he says. "No pains. No aches. No crutches. No wheelchair."

As for the Fountain of Youth, he has his own version of it. Ask him to what he owes his longevity and he has a simple formula:

"No smoking. No booze. Watch what you eat. Get a little exercise."

He says he once tried one of his father's stogies when he was a kid, got a little dizzy from it and has never had a cigar or cigarette since.

He noted that his father, who liked to smoke, died at age 69.

Anselmo says he doesn't drink but allows himself "a glass of wine now and then."

He says he takes three vitamin pills a day and thinks Vitamin E does the most for him. He also takes a daily shot of cod liver oil. The vitamin pills and the cod liver oil on an empty stomach, he stresses.

He likes to eat. "But I never eat anything made of white flour. I gave up pasta."

What does he do for exercise?

He says he gets it walking—from his apartment in one of the wings at 1000 Southern Artery where he lives to the dining room which he says is in the furthest wing from his apartment.

"I think I cover 10 miles a day," he says. Anselmo says there's another thing that help keeps him younger than his years. "I have a clear conscience."

He keeps up with what's going on in Quincy and in the country, especially Washington, via TV.

"A clear conscience is what that guy in the White House doesn't have," he says.

"His puffy eyes tell me that he's deteriorating from the inside because he doesn't have a clear conscience."

Anselmo is a veteran of both World War I and World War II and proud of it. "If there's a World War III," he says, "I'm ready to go."

Anselmo was elected to the school committee in 1961 after retiring as superintendent of the Quincy Post Office. He was 63 at the time, an age when most people are ready for retirement, not starting a new career.

Anselmo was still an active and outspoken member of the School Committee at age 93 and believed at that time to be the oldest elective office holder in the state and maybe the country. He left the school committee in 1991, serving 29 years.

Anselmo has been a generous benefactor to Quincy College with donations totalling over $100,000. The library there was dedicated in his honor.

On Sunday, he will celebrate his birthday at a three-shift buffet party at 1000 Southern Artery. He's generously hosting it and inviting all the residents there.

"Well," he shrugs, "I can't take it with me."

And, as he approaches his personal century mark, he plans to be around for while.

Happy 100, young feller.

ANOTHER FORMER SCHOOL Committeeman is celebrating a milestone. Charles Sweeney turned a young 82 on Monday.

Charlie served on the School Committee 22 years and is now a member of the Board of Voter Registrars.

SWEENEY

He stays in shape walking at the South Shore Plaza at 7 a.m., playing golf, still has his skis and now and then climbs Mount Washington—on foot.

"He needs a little push to get him up there now," kids his good friend and fellow walker, Dave Becker. "But he's really in good shape."

Charlie keeps his mind sharp watching Jeopardy on TV (and answering more questions correctly than some of the contestants) and counting his winnings at Foxwood's.

And he enjoys spinning around town in his apple candy red convertible.

"I'll probably keep him," says his better half, Betty.

FORMER NORTH QUINCY High School Principal Peter Chrisom will be honored at a "retirement gala" Thursday, Oct. 8 at the Sheraton Tara, Braintree.

The retirement party will start at 6 with a social with dinner at 6:30. Tickets are $40 per person.

police respectively and will not have to go to the academy.

Two other officers who joined the department by "lateraling" from the MBTA Police last week, James Dentrement of Quincy and Gregory Mar of Newton, also will not have to attend the academy.

Franc said his department currently has 150 patrol officers. Most of the new officers are being brought in to replace 17 department members who are retiring through next May, he said.

The police department budgets for 150 officers, he noted, and each position above that number will be paid for mainly with $25,000 in federal grant money annually for three years. (The starting patrol officer's salary is $29,327 a year.) Beyond that, the department will have to work them into the police budget, Franc said.

Two promotions also will take place in the Quincy Police Department this week. Sgt. Robert Perchard, 56, of Quincy, will be sworn-in to the rank of lieutenant today to replace the retiring Lt. Neil MacDonald.

Officer John Sullivan, 46, of Hanover, will be sworn-in to the rank of sergeant at the same time to fill the position left open by Perchard.

Jack Jouett is the Paul Revere of the South, but without the poet-publisher. In 1781, he learned of a British plan to capture Thomas Jefferson and rode 40 miles to warn him.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1930's POSTCARD is a view of the beach at the Atlantic end of Quincy Shore Drive. The yacht clubs are barely visible in the distance on the left. Most of the beach and the boulevard were created by filling in coastal marshes. This is one of the few sections that didn't require filling or a seawall.

What's At Stake? Moral Values, That's What

Editor, The Quincy Sun: "President Clinton is innocent, or he's guilty. One or the other."

"If he's innocent, a lot of time and money have been wasted and a man's reputation smeared. Those peddling the lies should be exposed and somehow dealt with."

"If he's guilty, he's not the kind of guy I want to see in the White House. He should resign."

I'm quoting from an editorial that appeared on Thursday, April 2, not in The New York Times or in The Wall Street Journal, but in the "Sunbeams" column on the editorial page of our own Quincy Sun...under the byline of Henry Bosworth, publisher.

He continued thusly: "No man is indispensable. The country survived after Presidential greats Washington, Lincoln and Franklin Delano Roosevelt. And will survive after William Jefferson Clinton."

"A lot of people, according to the polls, apparently don't care how a president personally behaves. These are good times; why rock the boat?"

"But one man didn't create today's booming economy. And one man won't change it. And there is something more at stake here than the dollar bill. It is moral values."

"Without moral values, this great country is going to erode into moral decay like the Roman Empire. It may already be on its way down. For the longer these White House accusations go on, the more the country hurts."

"It's been called 'The White House Soap Opera.'"

"Well, let's hope we have an ending--and soon."

"And that will be never see a sequel."

"Amen" to those words of wisdom and kudos to you, Henry.

Let Us Accept His Apology--And Resignation

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Let us accept his apology and, at the same time, let us accept his resignation which should be forthcoming soon.

Bill Clinton can no longer occupy the White House owned by all the American people--a house that was given to him for a limited amount of time, assuming that his behavior while there would be beyond reproach. He has forfeited his right to remain in that historic house.

For the sake of our children and grandchildren whom Bill Clinton has demoralized thoroughly, let him go quickly and quietly. Show him the exit, and make sure it isn't a revolving door.

Phrase Serves To Objectify Women

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In the Sunbeams column about the dangerousness of crosswalks in the City of Quincy (Aug. 27), I was struck by Mr. Henry Bos-worth's use of the phrase "a pretty young thing in a short skirt."

The use of this phrase serves to objectify women. I hope this was not the intention; however, it was the result.

The point could have been effectively without this offensive reference. Mr. Bosworth, please join us in the '90s!

Cemetery Taking For City Hall Site Voted Down

By PAUL HAROLD

The City Council overwhelmingly voted down a proposal that would have taken over historic Hancock Cemetery as the site for a new city hall. The only vote in favor was by Ward 1 Councillor David Crowley who sponsored the plan.

The City Council hearing was similar to one held by the Planning Board nine months ago, with many Quincy families strenuously voicing their opposition. Among those opposed were Delecevere King and former mayor Joseph Whiton who said that the molding bones of Quincy's founding families should not be bulldozed.

SCHOOL PROPOSED FOR VETERANS HOUSING

Mayor Charles Ross recommended that the Washington School be used as temporary housing for veterans and their families.

The school had not been used for a number of years because of lack of students. During the war it was leased to the Fore River shipyard.

School Committee Vice Chairman A. Wendell Clark saw no particular objection to the housing proposal, although City Councillor Carl Anderson was still pushing for the re-opening of the building for school purposes.

MEAT SHORTAGES HIT HOSPITAL

Meat supplies were running low this week throughout the South Shore, with area hospitals particularly hard hit. Quincy City Hospital Director Dr. Ensio Ronka said that they had only a few days supply of meat (beef and pork) and were substituting with poultry and fish.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Haddock, Peppers, Supreme

Recently, we dined at a restaurant with our friends Marge and Paul, who noticed that his favorite seafood entree had been deleted from the menu.

So last week when they came over to our place for dinner, I surprised them and made it for them. It consists of a delicious blend of haddock made with tomato sauce and peppers.

Fish with Peppers, Tomato and Onions

- 1 1/2 pounds haddock or scrod (at least 3/4 inch thick)
- 2 medium green peppers (cut)
- 1 medium onion (sliced)
- 2 or 3 cups tomato sauce
- salt and pepper to taste
- 2 tablespoons olive or vegetable oil

In the hot oil, saute the onions and peppers for a couple of minutes and then add the tomato sauce. Cook covered until peppers are tender. Place the fish on the top and on low heat, cook gently until the fish is done. Turn easy as the fish has a tendency to flake.

I served it over thin spaghetti with grated cheese. Our guests told me it was "exactly" as they had remembered it from the restaurant. For that compliment, I gave them the leftovers to take home! (Marie D'Olimpio has written a cookbook containing many recipes printed in The Quincy Sun.)

The book is available at the Fruit Basket (near Star Market), Previte's Market on Sumner Street, Nanci's Barbershop, Elm Street, Baintree, the Cherry Gift Shop at Quincy Hospital, Harvest Moon Restaurant, Front St., Scituate and Curry's Hardware, Copeland Street.

QUINCY HISTORICAL SOCIETY committee members plan the "Harvest Festival of Wine Tasting" to benefit the society to be held Tuesday, Sept. 22 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Common Market Restaurant, 97 Willard St., West Quincy. 'Lowell Mill Girl' At Adams Shore Library

Sharon Kennedy will present her one-woman show, "Mary Margaret O'Connell: Lowell Mill Girl" Tuesday, Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St.

The historical reenactment, designed for adults, young adults and older children, tells the story of a young Irish-American mill worker in Lowell in 1847.

Mary Margaret is 15 years old, and she speaks directly to the audience about how her parents immigrated from Ireland and settled in "The Acre"—the Irish section of Lowell. She describes the details of her life in Lowell: the pigs she chases through the streets, the little house her father built using an empty flour barrel for a chimney, the childhood sicknesses she survives, the spelling lessons in the basement of St. Patrick's Church, and her mother's work washing floors in the big Yankee houses "across the bridge."

Kennedy, an accomplished storyteller, regularly performs four original historical pieces at libraries, schools, museums, festivals and other venues. She has performed several times at the Thomas Crane Public Library, most recently during the Summer Storytellers Series when she shared stories from her new CD, "The Patchwork Quilt and Other Stories from around the World."

A Natural Teaming For John Pacella, Sean Hayes Eugene Thomas Salon Opens In Quincy Center

By LIAM FITZGERALD

For John Pacella and Sean Hayes, owners of Eugene Thomas Salon in Quincy Center, opening their own hair salon was just a matter of time.

With over 30 years of experience in the hairstyling field between them, the two recently decided to go into business together.

"We had been thinking about it for a few years," said Pacella, who worked with Hayes for eight years when both were instructors for a large hairstyling chain. "And we just felt the time was right."

Located at 1459 Hancock St., the salon's doors opened just four months ago, but already the owners say the response from the local community has been overwhelming.

"It's been excellent," said Pacella, senior colorist at the salon. "We've had a great response from Quincy people. People will stop by, come inside and see what we're about. It's something different for Quincy Center, and it's fun."

The idea behind the salon's art deco contemporary design, which has drawn raves from passers-by, originated from the numerous salons on Newbury Street, a popular Boston shopping district.

"We wanted to bring more of a Newbury Street atmosphere to Quincy Center," said Pacella, who lives in Randolph. "Our salon is more of a downtown Boston shop than anything else. We had an artist decorate it in art deco contemporary, and it certainly has attracted a lot of attention."

Location is also important when opening a business, and the partners couldn't be more pleased with the salon's site.

"This is a great location," said Hayes, the salon's senior stylist and a Weymouth resident. "You have the T station close by and parking garages on both sides. It's central to Quincy Center and very visible to the public. Plus, there's a lot of foot traffic going by the shop every day."

Along with the three decades in the field that the partners bring, the staff is comprised of hairdressers with years of experience in their profession.

"We have a great staff, and we're very particular about who we want working here," said Pacella. "You have to be a very motivated individual, because we expect the best from our employees."

"We're bringing a higher standard of hairdressers to Quincy Center," added Hayes. "We are looking into new color and new hair-cutting techniques. We specialize in wedding parties, showers, proms, back to school, and also do manicures and pedicures."

"For back to school, we're offering $15 off a massage and 10 percent off any chemical service, such as hair coloring or perming."

Nicole Cullinan, a color specialist and updo artist, emphasized the importance of education, to keep the staff informed of the latest trends and techniques.

"We all go to classes and shows and participate in some form of education," she said. "It's a team effort here, with everyone working together and helping each other. We offer a full range of services, and we're also working to add more to what we have. All top-quality products are available here as well."

Among the products are Paul Mitchell, Joico, Rusk and KMS. As an Elite salon for Framesi, the salon carries all three lines from the Milan, Italy company. Pacella cited Framesi's color line as the best on the market.

Also on the staff are Michelle Tran, Luanne McCollum and Stacey Chais and Luanne McCollum. Tran, a native of Saigon, Vietnam, is an advanced haircutter with specialty skills in Asian hairstyling. McCollum is a stylist/colorist at the salon. Chais, previously employed at Garden Botannica, is the front desk manager and retail specialist.

Recently added to the staff were Mary McLellan, Mike Sweeney and Anna Noyes, all licensed massage therapists. Different types of massage are offered, including Swedish massage, craniosacral therapy, myofascial release therapy and progressive deep tissue massage.

McLellan's specialty is craniosacral therapy, while Sweeney is a master of "reiki," an old Tibetan healing energy which helps promote emotional, physical, spiritual and mental health, according to a pamphlet available at the salon. Both are also registered nurses. Noyes performs massages for pregnant women.

"People have been very excited about massages," said McLellan. "The benefits are plentiful. Along with stress reduction and inducing relaxation, massage improves the body's health by increasing circulation and helping with healing when recuperating from an injury."

"It also improves body posture and helps maintain muscle health, especially for athletes. People have remarked on how long they can feel the effects of a massage. In general, it just feels good."

McLellan added, "We all knew the owners for a long time, and this was the type of salon we wanted to be affiliated with. We're always looking for new ideas, and the owners give us a lot of freedom to practice in our own styles."

The salon is open Monday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. For an appointment, call 479-8887. Walk-in service is also available.

Regarding future plans, the co-owners are excited about what lies ahead for the shop.

"We're doing a major expansion this winter," said Pacella. "We want to expand the massage and facial room downstairs and become the first bi-level shop in Quincy. It will be an exciting time for us, and the expansion will help us serve our clientele even better."

Wollaston Beach Cleanup Saturday

State Rep. Michael Bellotti, in conjunction with the Ward 5 Community Association, will sponsor a Wollaston Beach cleanup Saturday at 10 a.m.

Volunteers are asked to meet in front of the Squantum Yacht Club at 9:45 a.m. Bellotti and Ward 5 Community Association President Doug Gutro will coordinate the cleanup. There will be coffee and donuts for those who participate.

The cleanup coincides with the statewide Coast-sweep '98 program, now in its 10th year. Along with Bellotti and the Ward 5 Association, co-sponsors of the event are Jean LeBlanc of the Boston Harbor Association, Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) Wollaston Beach Supervisor Glen McCauliffe, and Tony's Clam Shop.

This is Bellotti's fifth cleanup and the second year he and the Ward 5 Association have teamed up for the event.

"I am happy to continue the process of cleaning up Wollaston Beach," he said. "With the help of people like Doug Gutro, Jean LeBlanc, the MDC, and all the volunteers who have helped with the cleanups over the last several years, Wollaston Beach will soon become the beach it once was for everybody to use and enjoy."

For more information, call Gutro at 328-7982 or Bellotti at 722-2582.

Those who cannot participate but want to contribute to the cleanup effort can purchase a "Clean It Now" baseball hat by calling the Ward 5 Community Association or Tony's Clam Shop.

Council On Aging Will Receive $85,076 Grant

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin announce the Executive Office of Elder Affairs has awarded Formula Grants to the state's 347 Councils on Aging.

The legislators said the Fiscal Year 1999 distribution amount will be greater than anticipated and will include $85,076 for the Quincy Council on Aging.

"This year, the strong economy and unexpected additional revenues has allowed the Legislature to increase the amount once again, thereby ensuring and continuing the services provided to the Commonwealth's senior populations," said Morrissey.

In Fiscal Year 1994, the Legislature increased the Council on Aging formula from the governor's recommendation of $3.50 to $3.70 per person. For Fiscal Year 1999, the Legislature increased the formula base to $4.65 per person, a 27 percent increase. The Council on Aging awards are administered and distributed by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs.

"The Quincy Council on Aging will receive a total of $85,076 in Fiscal Year 1999, which is a $17,381 increase from last year," said Mariano.

The funds can be used for a variety of programs and services to the senior community, such as the op-

SICKLE CELL ANEMIA AND STROKE

Stroke occurs in seven to eight percent of children who suffer from sickle cell disease, and stroke is one of the leading causes of mortality from this type of anemia. The rate of stroke recurrence after the initial stroke, once theorized to be as high as 90 percent, has been reduced to under 10 percent by the use of repeated blood transfusions. The next goal in the treatment of sickle cell anemia, however, is to predict and prevent that first stroke since even one can cause irreversible brain damage or death. Researchers are seeing promise in the use of a high-tech diagnostic tool called transcranial Doppler (TCD) ultrasound to identify children whose arterial blood flow places them at increased risk for stroke.

We are all concerned about our children, and we all want to know that they are protected as much as possible from illness. Developing a relationship with a physician you can trust can go a long way to dispel those fears. AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550, office hours by appointment.

P.S. Trials are now underway combining TCD ultrasound and transfusion for detection and prevention of potential strokes.

Before entering the High Point project many of our members attended meetings and asked tough questions. The development plan has been revised many times in order to address concerns raised at public meetings and group painting sessions. We requested and received assurances regarding traffic impacts, off street parking, environmental clean up of the site, drainage and open space requirements.

We know as the plan moves through the public process there will be other concerns that will need to be and should be addressed. However, we are concerned that in the event this project is not issued a permit, what will follow. We have been informed that the owner will be left with little choice but to turn the land over to a developer who will apply for a comprehensive rezoning of the site for up to 2,000 units of affordable housing.

Under the law the Comprehensive Permit process can circumvent local approvals and be permitted by the state. As state leaders pursue we are not opposed to affordable housing, however, we do not believe that 2,000 units of affordable housing clustered on the same site, with having little or no neighborhood input is the best use for the site.

We encourage you to attend the meeting.

Best wishes all,

But above all, please encourage your City Councillor to vote in favour of the permit.

Thank you

Quincy ArtsFest Saturday, Sunday

The City of Quincy and the Quincy Art Association will host the first annual Quincy ArtsFest on Saturday and Sunday.

The art and photography show will be held in the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex, Merrymount Parkway (Rte. 3A), Quincy. Admission is free.

Quincy ArtsFest will feature paintings and photographs from the region's finest artists and photographers. The show will feature live entertainment and art demonstrations for children throughout the weekend. Hours are Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The juried art show will feature over 125 paintings from some of the region's finest artists. The Quincy ArtsFest "Best of Show" was won by Edwina Caci for her work "Mermaid."

The juried photography will feature more than 115 photos, including a variety of color, black and white,

"The Quincy Art Association would like to thank our judges for their help in reviewing the more than 150 paintings that were entered into the juried art show. Based on the high quality of work, the real winners will be the people who come to the show and enjoy the enormous talent of our participants," said Anet Paglierani of the Quincy Art Association.

Judges for the juried art show were: Ann Belson, cultural affairs coordinator for the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston; Beth Neville, former director of the Milton Art Museum; and Jennifer Wood-Patrick, president of Art-Advisory Boston. The children's art show was judged by children's book illustrator William Beyer.

The photography show was judged by Greg Derr, photographer for The Patriot Ledger and George Loring, proprietor of Loring Studios in Hingham.

In addition to the juried art and juried photography shows, there will be a children's art display and a Quincy Art Association member's show. In total, there will be over 300 works of art and photography on display.

"I envision our parks as more than a place to play sports; they can be the center of community activity and enjoyment for a variety of events and programs," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department.

"The City of Quincy's Recreation Department is proud to co-sponsor this event. We often emphasize the importance of athletic talents while the artistic talents are overshadowed. The Quincy ArtsFest will allow us an opportunity to appreciate the talents and recognize the diversified skills of our local artists," said Barry Welch, director of the Quincy Recreation Department.

Along with the City of Quincy and the Quincy Art Association, corporate sponsors for the event will include: the Stop & Shop Supermarket Company, Kinko's, Frantic Framers and Presidential Camera.

"Our sponsors help make this show possible. Without their assistance, we could not conduct a show of this quality and magnitude. They are to be commended for their willingness to participate in such a worthwhile community event," added Koch.

Quincy ArtsFest will feature a variety of live entertainment throughout the weekend. On Saturday at noon, the Riverside Theater Works will perform renditions of Broadway tunes. On Sunday at noon, The Forbes School of Irish Step Dancing will give a performance. The Quincy Choral Society will perform on Sunday at 2 p.m.

The Quincy ArtsFest Committee includes Welch, Koch, Paglierani, Dave Murphy of the Quincy Park Department, and John Black and Liz Haywood-Sullivan, both of the Quincy Art Association.

the President already knows what is in the report because he is the subject of it. This argument suggests, at best, a poor understanding of what goes into a prosecutor's report.

"Some have argued that we should go ahead and release the report because there are still some 2,000 pages of supporting material that will not be released without committee review, and this will be sufficient to prevent irreparable harm to lives and reputations. They cite Mr. Starr's request that we treat certain information in the supporting material as confidential, apparently inferring that the information in the report itself does not require such treatment. Yet Mr. Starr did not say this. And even if he had, it is for this House to determine what information should be disclosed. We should not abdicate that responsibility to the Independent Counsel.

"Apart from whatever damage the abrupt disclosure of the report might cause to innocent third parties, it will clearly be prejudicial to the President's defense. If the Independent Counsel has done his job, the case he has constructed will be a persuasive one. Prosecutors have enormous power to shape the evidence presented to the grand jury.

And—at least at the federal level—they have no obligation to apprise the jurors of exculpatory evidence. The case will seem airtight. Yet until the evidence his withstood cross-examination and the allegations have been proven, they remain nothing more than allegations.

"Presidents, no less than ordinary citizens, are entitled to the presumption of innocence. They are entitled to confront the charges against them. Yet, if we adopt this resolution, by the time President Clinton is accorded that right, the charges against him will have circled the globe many times. They will be all the public reads and hears. They will take on a life of their own, and the case will be tried, not by Congress, but in the court of public opinion.

"Given these risks, why rush to judgment, Mr. Speaker? After so many months, what possible harm can come from allowing the counsel for the President a few days to review the report so that both sides of the story can be told?

"In the one historical precedent we have to look to, that is precisely what was done. Twenty-four years ago, a Republican President was under investigation by a Democratic House. President Nixon's lawyers were permitted to participate in seven weeks of closed sessions, as the Judiciary Committee conducted a confidential review of Judge Sirica's grand jury materials prior to their release. The counsel to the President was even allowed to cross-examine witnesses before their testimony was made public.

"Whatever the differences may be between the current controversy and the Watergate affair, President Clinton should receive the same due process protections accorded to President Nixon in the course of that investigation.

"If the people of the United States are to accept our verdict—whatever it may be—they must have confidence in the fairness and integrity of our deliberations. That—far more than the fate of one particular President—is what is at stake."

Habitat Houses Dedication Sunday

The first three South Shore Habitat for Humanity homes in Granite Village, Bower Rd., Quincy Point, will be dedicated Sunday.

The ceremony, which will include a Day of Prayer service, will begin at 2 p.m. Guest speaker will be Dennis Bender, director of communications for Habitat for Humanity International.

The event is being observed as the International Day of Prayer and Action for Human Habitat, a day of worship that concludes Habitat for Humanity's annual "Building on Faith" week when churches are asked to put their faith in action by helping build decent homes for those in need.

The three families moving into the homes are:

• Stephen and Colleen Jacques and their four children, who will move into the house co-sponsored by Maxwell House, Christ Church of Needham and the Boston Life Underwriters' Association. Mr. Jacques is an EMT/paramedic who works for Fallon Ambulance in Quincy.

• Marie Niamkey and her two children, who will move into the "House That Jill Built," South Shore Habitat's first all-women-built house. She is a nursing assistant and seamstress.

• Dereck and Robin Ingemi and their three children, who will move into the house sponsored by St. Stephen's Episcopal Church of Cohasset. They applied for Habitat housing on two previous occasions and finally succeeded on their third attempt.

The three families have waited nearly a year to move into their new homes.

Since its founding in 1976, Habitat has built houses around the world, providing 300,000 people with affordable shelter. The program is not a giveaway, as families must commit to working hundreds of hours of "sweat equity" as a down payment on a no-interest, 20-year mortgage.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity, one of more than 1,700 local Habitat affiliates around the world, was formed in 1985 to respond to the housing needs of the South Shore. The agency has renovated or built homes that now house 15 families. Four more families in Sharon and Quincy this month, and more South Shore projects are planned.

Council On Aging Will Receive $85,076 Grant

eration and maintenance of senior transportation services. The Quincy Council on Aging can use the money to cover the administrative costs for Asian outreach and senior service programs.

"One of the greatest benefits of this award is allowing the Quincy Council on Aging the flexibility to create and support programs seniors need," said Tobin.

The Executive Office of Elder Affairs formula is based on the number of seniors in a community. The Legislature changed the formula to multiply the number of persons who are 60 or older from $3.70 to $4.65, and also has increased the minimum award per municipality from $2,000 to $2,400.

"One of the important aspects of this program is that no community's Council on Aging will be denied support from the state," said Bellotti. "In Quincy's case, there are 18,296 persons 60 years or older multiplied by $4.65 is a total of $85,076."

The population figures are based on the 1990 census.

"The Legislature's increase in this important program reflects our commitment to help communities offer services to our senior population," said Morrissey. "We will continue to work towards ensuring the continuation of important programs and services that seniors need."

A Fixed-Adjustable Rate Mortgage May Be An Option

By CAROL BULMAN
You've been shopping for a home for some time now. You have done the wise thing and had a "mortgage specialist" determine the mortgage you can afford based on your income and monthly obligations, and savings. When you had this "pre-qualification" done you told the mortgage representative that you were not a big risk-taker and would only consider a fixed rate mortgage.

You did not want an adjustable rate mortgage, which would have the potential of an interest rate change in the future.

A good, sound plan—or is it? Yes, as long as the market does not move away from you. That is, as long as the interest rates stay in the general vicinity of where they were when you were pre-qualified. But, like New England weather, you can't always count on interest rates staying stable.

As you continue your house hunting, you have kept in mind the amount of mortgage for which you qualified. You add the down payment you have to work with, and keep money freed up for closing costs.

Finally, you find a home! You negotiate a price with the owner and eventually, while keeping your "affordable" price in mind, you and the seller settle on a figure. The forms are signed, and you're on your way...

Now you contact the mortgage specialist who pre-qualified you six weeks before and give him or her the good news. But there's a detail you hadn't anticipated. The rates have gone up more than a full percentage point since you last talked! This could increase your payment enough to put you out of the qualifying range for the home you have just agreed to purchase. Big trouble? Not necessarily.

Fortunately, there is another group of mortgage products available to a borrower. These alternatives offer the security of a fixed rate mortgage for a predetermined period of time, yet with lower interest rates.

Too good to be true? You decide. These "fixed/adjustable rate mortgages" stay fixed for a period of time, then automatically, and at no fee to the borrower, convert to a one-year adjustable rate mortgage. There are normally several variations from which to choose, including three, five, seven and even a 10-year fixed rate, all of which would convert automatically to a one-year adjustable rate mortgage after the stated time period.

This loan is still "amortized" over a 30-year period (which means the payments are spread over 30 years), but offers the fixed portion of the loan as much as 1.5 percent below that of a traditional fixed rate. The loan converts to a one-year adjustable rate, typically with protective interest rate caps of 2 percent annually plus 6 percent over the life of the loan.

So yes, there is an alternative to the fixed rate mortgage—a viable option which is becoming more popular to the frugal, yet conservative home buyer today.

Computer Network For Schools Completed

The city has completed the computer network for the Quincy Public Schools, announces Mayor James Sheets.

The project will link all schools with the citywide network, Sheets said, and has provided every classroom in the city with four data, one cable and voice capability. Each school also has been wired for a computer lab.

"I believe we are the only school system of our size in the Commonwealth that has every classroom technologically accessible by telephone, cable television and computer," he said. "We're happy with what we've done for the schools. And I'm very proud of the City Council and the School Committee for their support."

The project began with the passage of a $1.6 million technology bond in July 1995 that provided for the wiring of each classroom for data as well as six personal computers for each school.

With the renewal of the city's cable television contract in June 1996, provisions were made for MediaOne to provide supplies for wiring each classroom for cable. That was then combined with the data wiring.

In addition, each administrative area has been wired for data and each principal's office with cable. Each administrative area will be provided with a personal computer connected to the city network, allowing each school to connect for administration functions such as attendance, grading, student records and e-mail.

A FOGGY NOTION

Recent research helps us further understand why driving in foggy conditions has the potential to be so hazardous. According to Welsh researchers, drivers think they are driving far more slowly than they actually are in foggy conditions. As a result, they are likely to increase their speed dangerously. This sense of moving slowly in fog likely happens because the fog reduces the drivers' perception of contrast. Previous studies have shown that the perception of speed is guided by contrast in the environment. As the fog decreases contrast, objects outside the car seem to go by more slowly. To complicate matters, when it is foggy, drivers are reluctant to turn their attention away from the road and onto their speedometers.

Drive according to the weather conditions, and keep your car in top condition to meet any type of weather. (Cont'd from Page 1) do the same thing, because his parents and sister-in-law own homes on Packard's Lane and Churchill Road, also on the eastern edge of the property. He has asked City Solicitor Stephen McGrath for a legal opinion. Residents and city officials also are concerned about the impact on traffic, drainage and the contaminated site. Some residents have said the project is too large for a neighborhood of mostly single-family homes.

Congress Group President Dean Stratout said the project will meet all requirements and improve drainage and water pressure in the area.

The project would have as many as 27 red-brick apartment buildings, most of them two and three stories high, with some as tall as six or eight stories. The 1,391 one- and two-bedroom units would rent for $1,200 to $1,800.

If both Raymond and Cahill abstain from the vote, it could affect the project's chances of success, since six of nine councillors must vote in the affirmative for it to receive a Planned Unit Development (PUD) permit. The council must vote on the proposal within 90 days after the hearing is closed.

However, City Council President Peter Kolson and Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, whose ward includes the site, have said there likely will be at least one more session after tonight's.

Cultural Council Receives State Grants

State Rep. Stephen Tobin and Arthur Keough, chairman of the Quincy Cultural Council announce that local public programs in the arts, humanities, and sciences will receive grants awarded by the Massachusetts Cultural Council (MCC).

The grants go to the cultural organizations and schools, helping the community's cultural life to thrive and increase art education.

"These local grants play a significant role in our community's cultural and economic life," said Tobin. "This funding continues a tradition of public support for culture in Massachusetts."

The Organizational Support Program provides multi-year operating support for organizations with track records of excellence and public service. Beechwood Community Life Center received $2,000 to help provide and integrate multipurpose, multicultural community services, and First Night Quincy received $6,410 which will be used to broaden and deepen the public's appreciation of the arts through a multicultural, multidisciplinary New Year's Eve celebration.

"These organizations are to be congratulated not only for their success in a statewide competitive process, but also for being an essential resource to our community's quality of life and economic well-being," said Keough. "Public support ensures that the cultural and educational opportunities provided by these institutions are available for everyone."

The Event and Residency Program provides grants to school artists into the classroom for short-term and longer-term residencies. Broad Meadows Middle School received $390 which will be used for a performance and workshop by the musicians of Chantrelle which introduce students in Grades 6-8 to the French influence on American music.

"By collaborating with artists, these schools are providing innovative learning opportunities for students and exploring new ways to address the requirements of education reform," said Tobin. "Arts in education help students develop the skills they'll need in their future employment."

For more than 25 years, the MCC has been committed to improving the quality of cultural education throughout the Commonwealth. Studies prove that in-depth participation in cultural programs by schoolchildren enhances cognitive and work skills, builds creative and critical thinking skills, reduces truancy and dropout rates, and encourages self-esteem, according to Keough.

"I want to publicly express my gratitude to the residents who generously volunteer their time to work on the local council in order to make quality cultural programs available in our town," said Keough.

Organizations and individuals interested in applying for grants should contact 376-1322 for more information. Statewide deadline for all local cultural councils to accept applications is Thursday, Oct. 15.

Quincy Begins Season Friday At Randolph

DoRosario, Kelly Lead Presidents Into Battle

By LIAM FITZGERALD
The last time Quincy High School's Nathan DoRosario carried the ball, he scored the game-winning touchdown on Thanksgiving Day 1997 against rival North Quincy High School.

Now the Presidents' starting fullback, DoRosario looks to build on that success when he takes over the reins from 1,000-yard runner Shaun Faherty (nine TDs as a senior last season). "We're looking for Nate to provide a solid running attack," said fourth-year head coach Peter Chella. "He is a straight ahead, powerful back who will knock down defenders. He's that type of runner, but he's quick and can go outside."

DoRosario, a senior co-captain, will make his first start when the Presidents open the season Friday at 7 p.m. at Randolph in a non-league tilt. Though only a 5-5 team a year ago, Chella believes Randolph poses a serious threat to Quincy.

"They don't have great numbers, but they have a lot of speed," he said. "And they can hurt you badly if you make a mistake. I'm very concerned with this game. I have a tremendous amount of respect for their coach, Jeff Perkins. He's a smart coach who gets the most out of his players."

Surveying his own team, Chella noted the departure of a number of starters to graduation and the resulting youth and inexperience of the current squad.

"We're a young team, with eight or nine underclassmen starting or playing important roles on both sides of the ball," he said. "We'll make our mistakes, but we'll improve as we go along. The young players are learning as they go and I've seen some progress, which is gratifying."

Among the new starters is junior quarterback Dan Kelly, a starting linebacker a season ago who also plays point guard on Quincy's basketball team during the winter. Kelly has impressed his coach with his strong, accurate arm and his scrambling ability.

"Danny's going to be a good one, and he's only a junior," said Chella. "He's got a great arm, is very athletic and makes things happen. He can run well and throw the deep ball with accuracy, a dimension we haven't had in a while."

Sophomore Mark Robertson will back up Kelly. Senior co-captain John Katsarikas will play half-back and see action as a wide receiver, along with senior co-captain Mike Lencki. Both excel off the field as well as members of the National Honor Society.

Junior tight end Jeff Peterson will be a target for Kelly's passes, as will junior wide receiver Nick DiStasi. Other juniors vying for playing time include full-back Chris Regens, halfback Tim Pezzulo, wide receiver Andy Tam and tight end Mike Kelly.

Junior guard Mike Chenette and senior tackle Sean Fitzpatrick return to anchor the offensive line. They will be joined by junior center Eric Wass, junior guard Roy Patkey and junior tackle Chris Ricupero. Seniors Matt and Tom Agnew will start on the offensive or defensive line.

On the other side of the ball, the defensive line will include Fitzpatrick, Patkey, Wass and the Agnews, among others. DoRosario and Chenette will be the linebackers and Lencki, Katsarikas and DiStasi will man the defensive backfield, with assistance from a number of capable backups.

DiStasi and senior Bill

Barrett will take care of the punting duties, and are available for extra points and field goals. When he's not playing quarterback, Kelly can do a portion of the kicking. DoRosario may also be used for kickoffs.

A few changes were made in Quincy's coaching staff when defensive coordinator Bob Keuther became the school's new principal. Bill Reardon, an assistant defensive coach, moved into Keuther's position. Quincy also hired Kevin Carey, a former QHS football captain, to coach the freshman team. Dan Morrell, freshman coach last year, joins the varsity staff.

Regarding the Old Colony League, Chella picks Bridgewater-Raynham as the overwhelming favorite, with competition from Barnstable and Falmouth. He sees Quincy in the middle of the pack with the rest of the league.

This fall, Quincy players will remember former quarterback and co-captain Kevin Moore by wearing stickers bearing the initials "KM" on their helmets. Moore remains hospitalized in a coma following a May car accident.

At the home opener on Sept. 26 at 10 a.m. against Catholic Memorial at Veterans Memorial Stadium, the team will remember Moore at a ceremony, with his family in attendance.

"The entire team visited him at Braintree Hospital following a scrimmage," said Chella. "As far as I am concerned, he is always with us."

Quincy's 11-Year-Old Team Ends Season On Positive Note

The Quincy 11-year-old travel baseball team concluded its season by winning the Brockton baseball tournament.

In the championship game, Quincy scored four runs in the fifth inning to defeat host Brockton, 5-1. Tournament MVP Dean Sandonato pitched four strong innings and helped his own cause with a two-run double.

John Folino came in on relief and shut out Brockton over the final two innings to pick up the win. Paul Lennon (two hits) and a key bunt to spark the fifth inning rally. Nick DeVico and Steve Straz also collected hits and played well defensively.

In the semifinal game, Dave Jaehning pitched four strong innings as Quincy knocked off Brockton, 11-5. Nick Malvesti picked up two key hits for the winners. Bret Martinson, Mike Arrafat and Bobby Newcomb also contributed hits to lead Quincy.

Justin Thorley tossed a complete game, striking out 11 to spark Quincy to an 11-1 triumph over Abington in the opener. Kevin Richardson paced Quincy's offense, going 4 for 4. Chris Marinelli, Jaehning and Sandonato each notched two hits.

The first annual Marie Curry Walk will be held Sunday beginning at City Hall and ending at The Summer House, Marina Bay.

Registration will be at 8 a.m. and the walk begins at 9:30 a.m. Proceeds will benefit The Marie A. Curry Fund, which provides free

RED RAIDERS FOOTBALL '98

NQ's Season Opener
Friday At Stoughton

For Youthful Raiders, Only Time Will Tell

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Facing a tough early schedule is not exactly what North Quincy High School head coach Ken McPhee had in mind, especially after losing 20 seniors from last season's 4-6 squad.

"We're young and inexperienced, and we hit the iron right off the bat," said McPhee, beginning his 17th year at the helm. "It's a rough stretch, but we hope to eke out a couple of wins. It's going to take some time, but I think we'll get better as the season goes on."

With only nine seniors on the roster, including three starters on both sides of the ball, the Red Raiders open the season Friday at 7 p.m. at Stoughton in a non-league battle. What impressed McPhee most about Stoughton (6-4-1 in 1997) was its enormous offensive line, which returns four of its five starters.

"Their quarterback (Neil Houghton) is good, but they're huge up front," he said. "They are bigger than us, and we're not small. All we can do is be prepared and see what happens."

Following the opener, North faces Whitman-Hanson and Old Colony League foes Falmouth and Barnstable, two contenders for the league crown.

North will once again be led offensively by senior quarterback and co-captain Chris Bregoli, in his second year as the signal caller. As a junior, Bregoli tossed eight touchdown passes and ran for another and will be relied on to create scoring opportunities for the Red Raiders.

"Chris has done a nice job getting a grip on the position," said McPhee. "He's got an adequate arm; he's also very athletic and quick and can avoid the oncoming rush."

Joining Bregoli in the backfield will be senior tailback Kevin Shaw, junior tailback Steve Minukus, junior fullback Brian Deputa and sophomore fullback

Dean Zoia. The quartet replaces Mike Powers and Jay Turner, who last season as seniors combined to score 11 touchdowns, more than half of North's offense.

"Powers is almost irreplaceable, and Turner also had a good year, but you have to re-tool and do the best you can," said McPhee. "It'll be running back by committee. Shaw has the most experience, so he'll be in there a lot. Minukus has had a strong preseason, so he'll get his time along with the other backs."

Senior tight end Frank McNamara, a co-captain, has impressed McPhee with his work ethic in the preseason and figures to be one of Bregoli's prime targets. Bregoli hooked up with

Junior wide receiver Jody Bravo, a member of the varsity as a sophomore, will start alongside freshman Pat Bregoli, younger brother of quarterback Chris. Wide backs will be juniors Ryan Murray and Mike Reidy.

The key to North's offensive success lies in how soon the inexperienced offensive line gels as a unit, according to McPhee. The completely revamped line will consist of junior tackles Joe Donahue and Neil Rosenberger, junior center Bill Griffin, senior guard Steve Powell and junior guard Paul Skarzynski. Junior guard Joe O'Connell will also receive his share of playing time.

Defensively, North's line will feature senior co-captain Adam Tiro and senior Craig Bigham at the end positions, along with tackles Donahue, Skarzynski, Griffin and Rosenberger. One of North's strengths will be its line-backing corps, including McNamara and junior Brian Deputa, and outside line-backers Reidy and Murray. Cornerbacks Bravo and Pat Bregoli will keep opposing receivers at bay as will safety Minukus.

The Bregoli brothers will also be involved in special teams, with Chris doing the kicking and Pat returning punts and kickoffs. Deputa will be the Red Raiders' punter.

Surveying the OCL,

McPhee cites Bridgewater-Raynham as the favorite to run away with the league title, followed by Barnstable and Falmouth.

McPhee's coaching staff includes Pete Chrislorn Jr., Tom Carter, Sean Glennon, Dave Joyce, Mike Clifford, Joe Sullivan and newcomers Tim Seay and Liam Higgins. Seay takes over as freshman coach and Higgins, a former NQHS star quarterback, returns to the program he guided to the Super Bowl in 1992.

"Pete and Tom are doing a great job getting both lines ready for the opener," said McPhee. "Liam brings enthusiasm, youth and knowledge of the technical aspects of the game and is a welcome addition to the staff."

Improving Red Raiders Tie Up Milton, Braintree

The North Quincy High School boys' soccer team, the largest in several years, opened its 1998 campaign with back-to-back, hard-fought ties.

The Red Raiders (0-0-2) hosted last season's Old Colony League champion, Silver Lake, yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. and visit Taunton Friday at 4 p.m. in another OCL tilt.

In Monday's home opener, North battled back to tie non-league foe Milton, 1-1. Senior goalkeeper Robbie Bell played a strong game to keep North in striking distance.

Milton scored just minutes before the half, but North rallied to knot the game at 1-1 when senior co-captain Kevin Walsh headed the ball by the Milton goalkeeper. Joe Flynn made the throw-in as Walsh went towards the net for the ball.

North had an opportunity to win the game late, as junior Zack Winderl played the ball toward the empty net, but a brilliant defensive play on the goal line by a Milton defender cleared the ball out of play.

In last Thursday's season opener at Braintree, Bell played a tremendous game in goal for NQ, making 18 saves. Among his saves were a number of scoring opportunities for Braintree.

North's defense, consisting of senior co-captain stopper Matt O'Mahoney, outside backs Bill O'Toole and Mike Petrucci, and sweeper Rick Loughmiller, played well in front of Bell. Sophomore Tim Lombard also contributed to the defensive effort.

Braintree dominated the first half, pressuring the NQ goal but coming up empty as Bell turned away shot after shot. The second half was more closely contested as NQ got its share of scoring chances. The midfield was anchored by Walsh and juniors Steve Rochon, Billy Miller and Joe Flynn. Strikers were David Rochon and Graham McShane. Other varsity players are T.J. Bell, Brian Deshler, Kevin Shea, Mike Panajoti, Mike Regan, David Constantine and Shawn Jafarzadeh.

"Having struggled to get just a few wins the last several years, this team's start gives me some optimism about what we can accomplish this year," said third-year NQ head coach Robert Dean. "I'm hoping we really make a mark in the league in the next few years."

Between the varsity and JV teams, the program has 43 players. The coaching staff includes assistant coach Rich Hanlon, also in his third year, and coaching intern John Jarvis.

Proceeds from the fundraiser will benefit the QHS boys' and girls' soccer programs.

North's Offense, Defense Shine In Two Early Wins

The North Quincy High School girls' soccer team opened the 1998 season with two straight shutout victories, the result of a balanced offensive attack and an impenetrable defense.

The Red Raiders (2-0-0) hosted Old Colony League foe Silver Lake yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m., then welcomes OCL opponent Taunton to Teal Field Friday at 3:30 p.m.

"We have to beat Silver Lake this year if we are to have a shot at winning the OCL," said NQ head coach Paul Bregoli. "They won their first two games and are strong against this season."

"We're off to a good start and the girls are playing good soccer right now. We have to continue to build on that. That's the key—playing well the entire game. If we keep doing that, we'll be tough to beat."

North picked up its second win Monday, blanking host Norwood, 8-0, in a non-league contest. Senior goalkeeper Kristen Bowes earned her second shutout.

North senior sweeper Rachael Powers blasted a 40-yard shot over the goalkeeper's head for her first career goal. The unassisted tally broke a scoreless tie 30 minutes into the game.

Later in the half, sophomore Kellee Conley received a pass in stride from senior co-captain stopper Dorothy Cronin and scored the second goal. Soon after, senior co-captain forward Betsy Stone passed the ball to senior Liz Bennett for a goal. Junior Jill Nicholson closed out the scoring, taking a pass from senior Lauren Koch and scored.

North's second half goal scorers, with assists in parentheses, were: junior outside mid Maureen Holleran (sophomore outside back Stacey Szeszuli), Koch (Stone), Stone (Szeszuli) and junior forward Ashley Murphy (Holleran). Koch's goal was her first varsity score.

"It was nice to have the scoring spread around," said Bregoli. "It makes it difficult for opponents, because we have a lot of girls who can score."

In the season opener last Saturday at Martha's Vineyard, Stone broke a scoreless tie with 15 seconds remaining in the game, sending North to a 1-0 triumph. Stone took a direct kick from 20 yards out and sent it into the top left corner.

Outshooting the hosts 18-5, North had plenty of scoring chances but could not capitalize. Bregoli was impressed by the dominant defensive play of Powers and the effort by sophomore outside back Jen Conley.

North's JV team also shut out the Vineyard, 2-0, on goals by freshmen Ali Lacey and Jackie Koch.

Proceeds To Benefit Local Causes, Groups 6th Annual Degan Race Attracts 1,800 Runners

Sunday's sixth annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race drew over 3,000 participants, including a record 1,833 runners, and raised money for a number of causes. The amount raised was not available at press time.

Among the recipients of the donations is a fund for Kevin Moore, the Quincy teenager who remains hospitalized in a coma following a May car accident.

"Everything went very well, and we're thrilled by the number of people who turned out," said Rick Fitzpatrick, brother-in-law of Degan, the late U.S. marshal who was shot and killed in the 1992 siege of Ruby Ridge in Idaho.

Among those who participated were "Degan's Devils," members of the Marine Wing Support Squadron 474, who compete annually in memory of Degan, their fallen reserve commander.

Among those in attendance were Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke, Congressman William Delahunt, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, state Rep. Michael Bellotti, City Councilors Timothy Cahill and Paul Harold and John O'Connor, Citizens Bank regional president for the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts.

Our Facade Remains Circa 1800s. Inside, We're All Set for 2000.

When the Blackmur residence was purchased by Dennis S. Sweeney in 1929, Quincy had a new place to pay its respects. At the time, residents liked the intimate parlors and separate visiting areas.

They still do. But today, some families prefer a larger, more modern visiting area. Other issues, like handicapped and elderly access, have become important, too.

That's why we recently added 1,645 square feet to our Elm Street location. From the front of the building, you won't notice the change. But, inside it means a much larger room and a more accessible entrance.

All, without disturbing our historic roots.

A Thought For The Week

Everyone knows "You can't take it with you" and that it is wise to provide ahead for a constructive way to leave your property. There are a number of reasons why a valid and up-to-date Will is important to you and your loved ones.

The advantages of a Will are extensive. The Will insures that your wishes will be known and determines to whom, how and when your property should be distributed. To make out a Will with a lawyer's assistance assures that you - and not your State - will direct the distribution of your estate.

"Do-it-yourself" Wills - either oral or handwritten - can be dangerous. Self-drawn Wills are responsible for considerable litigation and in some States are not considered legal. A self-drawn Will frequently produces results far different than those originally intended by the testator or maker.

If you have no Will, now is a good time to make one. If you have a Will, now is a good time to have it reviewed in light of current circumstances...

Your Horoscope
by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You won't exactly be pleased with a friend who keeps you waiting in the wings. The unreliability of others is a definite concern in general. The weekend favors romance and cultural interests.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) There could be a few false starts before you get a handle on a current assignment. Concentration may be difficult to achieve until late in the week. By week's end, though, you've managed to accomplish much.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You may stall for more time rather than answer someone's question right now. Try to be on time for appointments. After dark is your best time for fun pursuits and get-togethers this week.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's just not a good week for shopping or financial transactions in general. Someone could try to sell you a bill of goods. Studying and bookkeeping are favored for the weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A mix-up in appointments could occur now or someone fails to return your call. Confusions make it hard to confirm plans, though things improve for the better eventually. A weekend of fun socializing cases your stress.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Unexpected developments at home could cut into time you had planned to spend at job pursuits. Still, you'll meet with a bona fide chance to improve income and status. Don't pass this opportunity by.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You may find the behavior of a close tie somewhat bewildering. Singles should be wary of insincere types. Get-togethers with friends are favored during the weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You may not accomplish as much as you'd like on the job this week. Distractions and escapist tendencies need watching. The weekend favors quiet pursuits at home.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Lines of communication between you and a close tie could be garbled. Still, the accent is on fun and entertainment in general. You will be proud of a child's accomplishments.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Though you'll be pleased with your progress on the job now and delighted with the potential for increased income, be wary of those who take advantage in financial transactions. A potential business transaction needs further research before making a commitment.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There are liable to be changes in plans and mix-ups in communications now. Other people either are ambiguous or not telling the truth. Couples, however, understand each other and romance is renewed this weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You seem to be torn in two directions this week. Both career and home demand your attention at the same time. By the weekend, however, you'll be able to spend relaxing times with family.

that I will have the opportunity to succeed Michael Bellotti is my style of government," he said. "By being accessible and accountable, you're able to bring the government to the people, and that's where it should be."

Ayers thanked his family, friends, campaign staff and other supporters, including Ward 4 City Councillor Michael D'Amico, Citizens Flag Alliance State Chairman John "Jake" Comer, and local veterans groups.

Of his opponent, who conceded the election Tuesday night via telephone, Ayers said, "Larry ran a hard race, he's got a lot of good supporters, and he brought a lot of important issues to the forefront."

He added that he plans to serve out his fourth term as Ward 6 councillor, which will end in January 2000.

Chretien, who called Ayers and congratulated him shortly after the results were announced, cited two main factors in Tuesday's outcome.

First, Chretien noted Ayers' home base in Ward 6. All five precincts in Ward 6 are part of the First Norfolk District. Chretien's base in Ward 3, which he represented as a city councillor, has three precincts in the district.

"He (Ayers) had a couple of extra precincts which I thought we could overcome."

Chretien also noted the incumbency factor. "I've also been out of the city council for three years and I underestimated the effect that would have on this race," he said.

Chretien added, "I'd like to thank everyone who volunteered, supported and voted for my candidacy."

Keating said Quincy gave his candidacy the "impetus" for victory Tuesday.

"I want to thank the people of Quincy. This is the first time in decades that Quincy will not have a candidate for Norfolk County district attorney. I want to be that person for the City of Quincy and I think Quincy responded tonight."

"The turnout has been tremendous. It's the strength of Quincy that gave us the impetus for this election. I spent more time campaigning in Quincy than I did in any other community in the country. And I'm very grateful for Quincy's support."

Three Quincy Democratic incumbents, state Sen. Michael W. Morrissey and state Reps. A. Stephen Tobin, Second Norfolk District, and Ronald Mariano, Third Norfolk District, ran unopposed. With no Republican opponents they are assured of re-election in November.

Morrissey polled 10,966 votes here Tuesday, Tobin 4,316 and Mariano 1,507.

Republican incumbent Jack Flood of Quincy and Democratic challenger Michael Bellotti of Quincy were both unopposed for the Norfolk County sheriff nominations. Bellotti's Quincy vote was 11,169 and Flood's 2,078.

Despite Layoffs And Cutbacks

Hope Seen For Future Of Hospital

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Despite recent layoffs, Quincy Hospital Director Jeffrey Doran and City Councillor Francis McCauley have expressed confidence that the financially-struggling hospital should be able to make it through its current economic problems.

The comments were made during Monday night's council meeting at which Doran updated councillors on the city-owned institution's recent woes.

The hospital, which announced last week it is cutting 120 employees by closing its maternity ward and pain clinic, still is expected to lose $3.5 million next fiscal year, Doran said, and will lose $9 million this year.

Still, while Doran came short of guaranteeing the hospital will survive, he said officials there have developed a "framework" that will allow it to go on and even expand certain services.

Doran said Quincy Hospital has become a victim of realities in the healthcare industry that affect all community hospitals, adding that the employees who are being cut "will be sorely missed."

JEFFREY DORAN speaks at Monday night's City Council meeting.

"The hospital family has been through a very emotional time," he said. "It was a very, very sad and overwhelming experience, but we have to stare the cold reality in the face."

"Community hospitals stand on the lower end of the economic food chain for healthcare dollars."

$150,000 Goal For Next Year Marie Curry Walk Raises $80,000

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The first annual Marie Curry Walk held on Sunday greatly exceeded expectations, raising about $80,000.

And the goal for next year is even higher.

Robert Curry, owner of Curry Hardware and after whose late wife the walk is named, said organizers have set a goal of $150,000 for next year's walk. The event raises money for mammogram screenings and heightens awareness of the dangers of breast cancer.

But while he said raising that amount for the 1999 walk "could be possible," he said he first wants to catch his breath after the success of Sunday's event, the goal for which was $50,000.

"It was a great community day," said Curry. "We had a lot of fun. It's done for an important cause, but what we really wanted was for it to be a community event, and it was."

Hundreds of local residents took part in the 5-mile walk, which began at City Hall and ended at the "Summer House" in Marina Bay.

Curry praised the two groups that spearheaded the drive to organize the walk: the Quincy Hospital Health and Education Foundation and, especially, the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women.

"They deserve the lion's share of the credit," he said of the commission.

He also expressed his gratitude to the two major sponsors of the event—Citizens Bank and Quarry Hill Associates—as well as the countless other groups and individuals, including Mayor James Sheets, who contributed in a number of ways.

"Everybody we asked for help was there for us," he said. "The mayor said he had a spectacular time."

On a personal note, Curry, who is remarried, thanked his wife Cheryl, son and daughter-in-law Sean and Tara, and daughter Julie for participating in and helping with the walk.

"They really put their hearts and souls into it," he said. "I think the kids really felt they were doing something for their mom, which they were."

Encourages Parents To Vote, Too

Quincy's Highly Acclaimed Kids Voting Program Now A Model For The State

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Quincy's Kids Voting program, which began as a way to teach youngsters the process of voting by actually doing it now is credited with encouraging their parents and other adults to vote also.

Students from kindergarten through high school will go to the polls for the fourth time in the election Nov. 3.

The results of their vote will be published in The Quincy Sun, The Patriot Ledger and broadcast on Radio Station WJDA.

Quincy's program, which started in 1995 has become the model for other communities in the state.

Next Tuesday has been designated as "National Kids Voting Day," an annual day of celebration for the Kids Voting Program.

Each school will participate in the celebration. The plan is to teach children to be lifelong voters and also to motivate their parents to vote.

Harold Crowley, coordinator of the program told a group of educators and sponsors at a gathering last Thursday at the Quincy Elks that the program began in Costa Rica and then was instituted in Arizona.

He said it actually began in Quincy in 1995, and credited Mayor James Sheets who helped expand the program to Brockton.

Eugene Creedon, superintendent of schools called the program "wonderful" and added it is a "great advantage for future citizens of Quincy."

Creedon, who chairs the steering committee praised the committee, teachers, teacher coordinators and City Clerk Joseph Shea for their support in the program.

Mayor Sheets told the group that he initially received a call from the Patriot Ledger and spoke to Scott Low and William Ketter about the program. He said the voting is "not a kid thing, but an adult thing" and "so beneficial to children in the city and especially for some parents who do not vote."

Sheets said kids emulate what adults do, and on voting day, since the ballots are tallied, "the young people can see if they voted for the same candidate as their parents did."

Betsy Webb of Plymouth was recently appointed as Massachusetts Director of Kids Vote. Her name was among 85 applicants.

In addressing the group last Friday, Webb said that Kids Voting is now in 40 states including the District of Columbia. She said that in Quincy, Plymouth and Stoughton, there are 25,000 children who will vote from kindergarten through Grade 12.

Creedon and Crowley presented awards to the following sponsors: Quincy Rotary Club, Presidential Systems, Quincy Boat, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance, Keohane Funeral Home, Bank of Canton, Impressions Plus, Henry Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun, The Patriot Ledger, John McGilvary, South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Stop & Shop Supermarkets, Arbella Insurance, South Shore Regional Education Foundation, Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates.

Before voting day, packets of material will be distributed to each Kids Voting teacher including a Quincy Street Index, a Kids Voting button, a Kids Voting bumper sticker, and a Kids Voting Poster.

MAJOR SPONSORS honored at the Kids Voting kickoff dinner included The Patriot Ledger (represented by Pat Degiso), Stop & Shop Supermarkets (Liz Chase-Marino), and Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates (John McGilvary).

OTHER SPONSORS honored at the Kids Voting kickoff dinner included The Quincy Sun (represented by Henry Bosworth), Presidency Systems (Raj Solalappan), Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co. (Kevin Meskell), Impressions Plus (Paula Rowe), The Bank of Canton and the Quincy Rotary Club (Don Gohli), and Q-Vote (Marcia McCarthy).

Board Trying To Dim Bright Lights Problem

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

In a final attempt to solve the problem of bright lights from Friendly's shining in a neighbor's home, the license board suggested replacing the neighbor's windows with a different kind of glass.

The suggestion to replace the windows of Mrs. Eva DeLeyse who lives across the street from Friendly's at 218 Independence Ave., was made by board member Fire Chief Thomas Gorman at Tuesday's meeting.

Gorman said the glass could be such that the "neighbor could see out, but nothing would shine in."

Friendly's manager Lisa Smith said because of a couple of break-ins, it was recommended by the police to leave two lights on all night.

She said that the lights usually go out a half hour after the closing time of 11 p.m., except for the two lights in the rear.

Shea thought the light on top of the Friendly signs seems to be the problem.

The recurring problem has been before the board for several years and according to chairman Joseph Shea, who visited the neighbor's home said,

"even with the shades pulled down, it doesn't help."

Through the years lighting experts have been called as well as copies of illumination schedule from consultants but all according to Shea has "not been sufficient, isn't working."

Shea said he plans to give Smith a long file on the problem to give to her supervisor and request the change of windows. Smith will report back to the board at the Oct. 20 meeting.

22 New Officers Sworn In

Biggest Police Manpower Increase In 27 Years

By MICHAEL WHALEN
More than 150 friends and family members attended the swearing-in of 22 new Quincy Police Department officers last Friday at City Hall.

Officials said the event marked the largest jump in manpower for the department in 27 years.

The group was sworn-in by City Clerk Joseph Shea during a ceremony in the City Council Chambers.

Offering their congratulations were Police Chief Thomas Frane and Mayor James Sheets.

Frane spoke briefly, saying how proud he is of the new officers.

"I'm excited to have 22 new policemen here," he said. "I am really happy for them and for their families. I've looked forward to this anxiously."

To those who were sworn-in he added, "I look forward to helping you guys achieve your goals."

Sheets told the group, "We truly know what this means to each and every one of you, and we're very pleased to be part of it today."

The mayor also told the recruits that Quincy residents feel safe because of the "outstanding job" done by the police department, and their joining the department will make possible the expansion of the city's community policing program.

"That means we are about to mount another assault against crime," said Sheets. "Each of you is becoming part of a great team."

Also in attendance were Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke, City Council members, and a number of police officials.

The 22 new officers are:

William O'Brien, 27; Terence S. Hack, 27; John R. McGowan, 24; Robert Pearson, 51; Timothy B. Kaes, 26; Michael A. Brandolini, 41; Michael B. Ward, 28; Sean F. Duggan, 28; Jason S. MacIsaac, 26; Michael O'Brien, 32; John M. McGovern, 31; Keith A. Wilbur, 32; James M. Flaherty, 23; Michael J. O'Brien, 25; Jeffrey P. Brooks, 27; Michael J. Flaherty, 24; James M. Sullivan, 29; Ralph J. Willard, 28; Lauren J. Lambert, 26; Dennis M. Maloney, 31; Christopher C. McDermott, 27; and Donald G. Sautter, 29.

Nineteen of the new officers are Quincy residents. Brandolini and MacIsaac are from Weymouth and Sullivan is from Hull.

Twenty of the new officers began attending the 22-week Norwood Police Academy this week and should be on the streets by mid-March. The other two, Sullivan and Maloney, are coming to Quincy from the Hull and Harvard University police respectively and will not have to go to the academy.

Two other officers who joined the department by "lateral" from the MBTA Police two weeks ago, James Dentrement of Quincy and Gregory Mar of Newton, also will not have to attend the academy.

Frane said last week his department currently has 150 patrol officers. Most of the new officers are being brought in to replace about 17 department members who are retiring through next May, he said.

The police department budgets for 150 officers, he noted, and each position above that number will be paid for mainly with $25,000 in federal grant money annually for three years. (The starting patrol officer's salary is $29,327 a year.) Beyond that, the department will have to work them into the police budget, Frane said.

Two promotions also took place in the Quincy Police Department last week. Sgt. Robert Perchard, 56, of Quincy, was sworn-in to the rank of lieutenant last Thursday to replace the retiring Lt. Neil MacDonald.

Officer John Sullivan, 46, of Hanover, was sworn-in to the rank of sergeant at the same time to fill the position left open by Perchard.

TO TRANSPORT OR NOT

There are many people who live some distance from medical centers that are capable of performing life saving primary angioplasty (a minimally invasive procedure for removing a blocked blood vessel) for patients with acute myocardial infarction. Because of this, there has been ongoing speculation about the advantage versus risk to the patient to move one at this critical juncture from a community hospital or clinic to a center equipped to perform angioplasty. In a five-year study of 104 candidates for primary coronary angioplasty, half were originally treated at the larger medical center and half were transferred there from community hospitals. The results showed no difference in clinical outcome. Keeping up with the medical research that affects you is our job. That's one of the reasons you come to us—to learn what findings might affect your health and well-being. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment. P.S. The researchers also concluded from the above-mentioned study that safe and expedient transportation will facilitate more widespread use of primary coronary angioplasty.

The Next Ward 6 Councillor?

Never a dull moment in politics.

The state primary is over. The Nov. 2 final is still to come.

And, already eyes are turning to next year's city election. And the obvious question:

Who will be running for the Ward 6 city council seat Bruce Ayers will be leaving at the end of his term?

Ayers, of course, defeated former Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien for the First Norfolk District state representative seat. And with no Republican opponent, he has no one in his way in November.

He says he will finish out his council term which ends in December, 1999.

"The people elected me to a two-year term and I owe it to them to complete it," he says. "And I don't want to put the city to the extra expense of a special election to fill an unfinished term."

So, who will be running for the seat next year?

Two names automatically pop up as potential candidates: Brian McNamee and Joseph Newton, both of whom ran last year.

McNamee edged Newton by 11 votes in the preliminary election but lost to Ayers in the final.

And, there's a third name very much in the picture:

Tracy Wilson, who made an impressive debut last year as runner-up in the school committee race. She is definitely interested in the Ward 6 seat.

Anyone thinking of running for the seat can stop worrying about another name: Dan Flynn.

Flynn made a strong bid for governor's councillor in the Fourth District last week, taking the runner-up spot in a five candidate field only 4,777 votes behind incumbent Christopher Iannella of Boston.

Flynn easily topped Iannella in Quincy, 7,391 to 3,019.

As a resident of East. Quantum St., would he consider the Ward 6 city council seat next year?

"No," he says. "I'm keeping my options open but it would be for something at the state level. It could be for governor's councillor again."

Is Ward 6 a positive no for him?

"I would say so," he says. "My wife and I just bought a house in Milton."

MIKE BELLOTTI had to be pleased with last Tuesday's results. He was the top vote-getter on both the Democratic and Republican ballots in Quincy.

Running unopposed for the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County sheriff, he piled up a vote of 11,169.

BELLOTTI

Jack Flood, the Republican incumbent, also unopposed, had 2,078. An indication he will have to do some work here.

Runner-up for top vote honors in Quincy was Congressman William Delahunt with 11,071-97 votes behind Bellotti. He was also unopposed.

FLOOD

IT WOULD SEEM that Dist. Atty. Jeffrey Locke will have to do some wooing of unenrolled voters to come out of Quincy in good shape in the November final election.

Locke, running unopposed on the Republican ballot, polled 2,032 votes here. Sen. William Keating who won the Democratic nomination in a three-man field had 5,700, runner-up William O'Donnell 4,554 and Jack Corrigan, 2,392.

LOCKE

GOOD NEWS FOR unenrolled voters who cast either a Democratic or Republican ballot last Tuesday. City Clerk Joseph Shea reminds them that this year they won't have to re-register as unenrolled.

In the past, if you took a Democrat or Republican ballot you became a Democrat or Republican and then later had to re-register back to unenrolled.

But not this year. You were counted as voting Democratic or Republican but remained unenrolled. No need to make a trip back to City Hall.

This came about by legislation Secretary of State William Galvin filed to make it easier for the unenrolled to vote in primary elections and spare city and town clerks offices extra registration paper work.

But there's a little bad news, too. Shea says this new legislation applies only in Massachusetts state elections and not in Presidential elections.

SHEA

A SHORT-AND nice story: Quincy District Court Clerk Arthur Tobin's sister, Carol Labadie who was fatally injured when struck by a car last month had also been a victim of breast cancer.

In memory of his sister, for his 10 granddaughters and all the women staff members at the court, Tobin was among those in the Marie Curry Walk Sunday.

He had three pledge sheets at the courthouse and in a short time had $11,000 pledged.

His wife, Shirley, and Patricia Hannon, wife of former Mayor Walter Hannon, did their part registering the walkers in front of City Hall.

When asked about the walk, Tobin said: "You know, there are still a lot of nice people in the world. And you can find a lot of them at Quincy District Court."

TOBIN

NICE TO SEE Jeanne Reardon, clerk of City Council Committees back at City Hall.

Jeanne underwent surgery in June and spent most of the summer recuperating at home.

REARDON

But she's back on the job as the right arm to the nine councillors. And they are glad to have her back.

The longest cantilever bridge in the United States is the John Barry Bridge, in Chester, Pennsylvania. It spans the Delaware River and measures 1,644 feet.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN EARLY 1920's postcard published by the Hotel Taylor in Houghs Neck. Previously, the hotel was known as the Fenmore, The Crystal Lake and the Pandora. It was built in 1900. It was called the Taylor until its demise in the 1930's. The hotel was the center of activity at the resort end of Houghs Neck. Its guests had access to a wide range of social activities and natural attractions. This site was later used for the Great Hill School but is now a public park.

READERS FORUM

The American Flag And 'We The People'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
A Constitutional amendment to protect the flag from burning, desecration, defecation, etc. is truly about free speech—the most precious speech of all. It's about the right of we the people to speak and be heard and heeded on an issue that is of great importance to them. The Citizens Flag Alliance, which represents 128 organizations throughout the country and totals 20 million in membership like the Elks, Eagles, Knights of Columbus, Sons of Italy, Moose have come together to remind our elected officials that The Constitution does not say, We the press, We the Supreme Court or We the Congress but it does say WE THE PEOPLE.

Seventy-eight percent of the citizens of Massachusetts, consistent with every other state poll, 49 state legislatures who have passed non-binding memorializing resolutions (including Massachusetts) and the U.S. House of Representatives, on two occasions, with the positive votes of Representatives Moakley, Kennedy, Delahunt, McGovern, Neal and former Reps. Donnelly, Blute and Torkildsen have clearly indicated the importance of a flag protection amendment through their support of the issue.

First of all, a law has been tried and found to be unconstitutional, so before another law can be passed, it would require an enabling amendment to be passed first. More importantly, this amendment will not protect the flag. It does nothing to either protect the flag or impinge on anyone's constitutional rights. What it does is return to WE THE PEOPLE the freedom to pass laws to protect the flag, laws that were on the books for over a hundred years in 48 states and was taken away by the Supreme Court in 1989 after many other

Supreme Court decisions had shown it was illegal to desecrate the American flag.

When a teenager in Wisconsin lowered an American flag from the pole at a public golf course, defecated on the flag, he then placed the flag on the steps of the clubhouse. This conduct is clearly an act of delinquency rather than freedom of speech, but the state's flag desecration law was ruled unconstitutional and he was exonerated due to the 1989 Supreme Court ruling.

There have always been limits on freedom of speech, and the court has held that they are legitimate exceptions of the guarantees held in the First Amendment. Some notable examples follow:

1. Citizens may not confront a local political leader with epithets, slander or libel, which is punishable.
2. One cannot stand naked on a soapbox in a public park and deliver a political speech.

3. One cannot hold a press conference on the steps of the Capitol without a permit.

4. One cannot demonstrate within a certain prescribed distance from the Supreme Court.

5. One cannot use profanity or obscenities on the public airways.

6. One cannot tell bomb jokes at an airport check-in counter.

7. One cannot burn a cross on someone's front yard or on a public street.

8. One cannot yell fire in a crowded movie theatre.

As seen from this partial listing, there are many exceptions to unbridled free speech, and the vast majority of Americans believe that flag burning and desecration should be one of them.

College Loan Program Available For 1998-99

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and officials from the Massachusetts Education Financing Authority (MEFA), a not-for-profit state agency, announce that low-interest rate loans are still available for the 1998-99 academic year.

"The MEFA Loan Program is designed to help families who don't receive enough financial aid from traditional sources and who need assistance financing college costs," said Morrissey.

This year, for the first time, MEFA also is offering low-cost loans to Massachusetts residents attending out-of-state colleges and universities.

A further advantage of the MEFA Loan is the availability of the Home Equity Option. If a person's loan is secured with the equity in his or her home, the interest may be tax-deductible, which could reduce the effective rate to as low as 4.6 percent.

For more information, call Morrissey's office at 722-1494 or MEFA at (800) 449-6332.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Eggplant and Red Peppers

I used to tell my husband that his mother made vegetables taste as good as any meat. Even better. Last week our daughter Ann Marie made this fantastic combination of vegetables that was equalled. And the best part of it all, they were roasted!

Eggplant and Red Peppers

6 red peppers (sliced)
1 medium egg plant (cut in quarter inch long slices instead of round) enough olive oil to cover a cookie sheet
salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Place the eggplant on the bottom of a cookie sheet. Place the peppers on top. Season and roast for about 10 minutes. Turn and bake until vegetables are tender.

They were served as a delicious side dish with hot crusty bread. They can also be kept in a container and used for sandwiches during the week.

(Marie D'Olimpio has written a cookbook containing many recipes written in The Quinncy Sun.)

The book is available at the Fruit Basket (near Star Market), Previt's Market, Summer Street, Nanci's Barbershop, Elm St., Braintree, Harvest Moon Restaurant, Front St., Scituate, the Cherry Gift Shop at Quincy Hospital, and Curry's Hardware, Copeland Street.

WHEN GOUT GOES FOR THE BIG TOE

Gout is a form of arthritis that often affects the big toe. The cause of the painful condition, however, is actually found far from the feet, in the kidneys. There, the body processes uric acid, formed when the body breaks down waste products. If too much uric acid is produced, or if the kidneys can't get rid of it properly, the uric acid that accumulates in the blood deposits itself as crystals around joints. The pain and inflammation of a big toe with gout can be disabling. Although a gout attack typically subsides after a week or two, it is likely to recur without careful treatment, and permanent joint damage may result. Medication may be prescribed to ease the symptoms of an attack. Certain lifestyle changes may help keep gout from reappearing, including drinking plenty of water, keeping weight normal, and minimizing alcohol intake.

If you are suffering from these or any other foot related complaints call us at (617) 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Pkwy., Suite #18, Quincy and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

P.S. About one million Americans suffer from recurrent bouts of gout.

Council Honors Anselmo On 100th Birthday

Former School Committeeman Frank Anselmo, who turned 100 on Tuesday, was honored by the City Council Monday night.

The council unanimously passed a resolution introduced by Councillor Francis McCauley that commended Anselmo for his contributions to the city and congratulated him on his birthday. Anselmo was unable to attend the council meeting.

McCauley and Councillor Paul Harold presented the resolution to Anselmo Sunday at a luncheon Anselmo hosted for all of the residents of the 1000 Southern Artery senior citizens complex where he lives.

McCauley, a colleague of Anselmo's on the School Committee, noted Monday night that Anselmo began his political career at age 63 and served 29 years on the committee until his retirement in 1991. He said Anselmo was very popular with his constituents.

"Frank Anselmo had the ability to move a crowd. He was dynamite, a remarkable man," said McCauley.

FRANK ANSELMO, former School Committeeman and a veteran of World War I and World War II, was honored Sunday at a luncheon he hosted for fellow residents of 1000 Southern Artery. Anselmo turned 100 on Tuesday. With him are his daughters, from left, Francine Sempar of Colorado, Barbara Willet of Boston, and Phaedra Thomas of Leominster.

Harold said Anselmo should be recognized as a veteran of both World War I and World War II, adding he is one of only a few remaining survivors of the first world war.

Others who paid tribute to Anselmo included Ward

2 Councillor and Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin, who both also served with him on the School Committee and Council President Peter Kolson who said, "We want to congratulate him on 100 years of giving."

CITY COUNCILLORS Paul Harold (left) and Francis McCauley flank former School Committeeman Frank Anselmo at the luncheon he hosted for fellow residents of 1000 Southern Artery on Sunday, two days before his 100th birthday. McCauley was a colleague of Anselmo's on the School Committee.

AMONG THOSE ON HAND to honor Frank Anselmo (second from left) on Sunday were 1000 Southern Artery resident Walfred Thomas, former School Committeeman Charles Sweeney, who served on the committee with Anselmo, and Anselmo's daughter Phaedra Thomas.

WILLIAM B. RICE EVENTIDE HOME

Where Security and Friendship Go Hand In Hand.

Miriam Addison is proof positive that you're never too old to make new friends. She first met Gayle Davis after moving to Quincy's Eventide Home, where Gayle is a loyal volunteer.

Miriam came to Eventide from her Quincy home, after living alone became too much to handle and she needed nursing care.

Gayle began volunteering at Eventide after moving to Massachusetts from Maine 14 years ago. Miriam also lived in Maine for a time.

"Can you believe that we both started our first jobs at Union Mutual in Portland, Maine?"

Gayle asks. "What a small world!"

When Miriam expressed a desire to go shopping, Gayle responded and they became instant friends.

"We just gelled," Miriam says. "We discovered the Talbots outlet together."

"And don't forget about your favorite lunch spot overlooking Hingham Bay," adds Gayle.

Miriam Addison recently celebrated her 100th birthday, surrounded by family and friends at home, Quincy's Rice Eventide Home.

Board Grants Auto Repair, Gasoline Licenses

The license board Tuesday granted Unique Automotive, 100 Penn St. an auto repair license and a permit to store 100 gallons of gasoline in the tanks of 10 vehicles being repaired on the premises.

They also granted Paul's Performance Transmissions, at the same site an auto repair license and a permit to store 60 gallons of gasoline in the tanks of six vehicles.

Both businesses are on the Express Lumber property owned by Robert Ronayne.

Ronayne said the building which will house the two auto repair shops will be 2,080 square feet and cost approximately $60,000.

Ronayne told the board that there will be "no wrecks" displayed on the property and that the place will have a "fenced in area."

He said he had landscaped the property and planted flowers around the building and said it made an "industrial building look pretty."

Chairman Joseph Shea told Ronayne that Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico had called him and suggested a neighborhood meeting. However, Ronayne said he had spoken to D'Amico and had already notified all abutters.

Plans for the opening of the repair shops will be Dec. 1.

Kolson Opposes Renaming Broad Meadows School

By MICHAEL WHALEN
City Council President Peter Kolson says he is against a proposal to rename the Broad Meadows Middle School after its late principal, Harry Beede.

The proposal was made in July by the Quincy Retired Teachers Association (QRTA). Any name change would have to be approved by the School Committee.

Beede, who served the Quincy Public Schools for 34 years as a principal and teacher, bequeathed $1.27 million to the QRTA for student scholarships when he died in 1996.

Kolson said at Monday night's council meeting he wants the name unchanged because Broad Meadows has "one of the prettiest names in the city" and, as a Blue Ribbon School, has achieved a deserved reputation for academic excellence.

"It's been Broad Meadows since 1957," he said. "It's a great, great school."

Councillor Francis McCauley agreed.

"I don't think we should just change school names willy-nilly," he said.

Kolson suggested he and Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, chairman of the council's Education Committee, write a letter asking the School Committee to reject the proposal if it is placed on its agenda.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon, the committee secretary, told The Sun in July the committee has no plans he knows of to discuss the proposal.

Harold Seeks Pay Hike For Election Workers

City Councillor Paul Harold is calling for an increase in the hourly wages paid to Quincy's election workers.

The council unanimously passed a resolution introduced by Harold Monday night calling for the pay hike.

Harold said the city's 210 election workers earn about $90 per election, while the statewide average is about $125. City Clerk Joseph Shea said the workers are paid $6 an hour for their services.

Harold's resolution calls for the workers to receive an appropriate raise "as soon as possible" and for a bonus to be provided those with 10 or more years of service.

Bridge To Be Renamed For Joseph Harold, Sr.

Sergeant to Second Lieutenant.

Harold was born in Dorchester, moving to Quincy in 1951. He was married to the late Marguerite Burke. He died in December of 1994 when struck by a car on his way to church at Our Lady of Good Counsel in Merry-mount.

He was the father of the late Joseph Harold Jr. and Marybeth Harold. He is survived by his son Paul who is a Quincy City Councillor and William of Coronado, Calif. and seven grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Governor Weld signed the legislation naming the bridge for Harold. It was sponsored by former Rep. Stephen Karol of Attleboro and Sen. Michael Morrissey of Quincy and co-sponsored by legislators from Quincy, Dorchester and the South Shore.

Among those who will participate in Sunday's ceremonies are Secretary of Transportation Patrick Moynihan, MBTA General Manager Robert Prince, Jr. Mayor James Sheets, Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Joseph Sullivan (chairman of the Transportation Committee), DAV state commander Russell Henderson and Councillor Paul Harold.

The 1,200 foot bridge was designed by Sverdrup and built by Modern Continental Construction Company. It was completed in 1994.

Councillor Harold who served on the Transportation Committee during his tenure in the state senate said. "The naming of the bridge is a son's tribute to his father. It's a way of recognizing his life's work with the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) and ensures that his name will be perpetuated. At the same time, the bridge naming recognizes the work of the entire membership of the Massachusetts Department (DAV) and the vital work they do for veterans and their families."

Five Projects Opposed By Quincy & Wollaston Park Assns.

Five proposed projects in the city are opposed by the Quincy Citizens & Wollaston Park Associations.

Secretary Dorothy C. Kelly said members voted against the five matters at the September meeting.

The five:

- The HighPoint housing and luxury apartments development on Quarry St. because it is "too big."
- Draining Swingle's and Granite Railway quarries "because polluted water and silt are adversely affecting Furnace Brook and Black's Creek."

• Closing off the parking are at Furnace Brook Parkway because "residents want the parking area left open so they can enjoy short walks in Merrymount Park and the open-space view of Black's Creek and the water fowl." Kelly said hundreds of people have signed petitions to keep the parking area open to motorists.

• The planned court probation office on Revere Rd. at the Hancock parking lot because it is "not a suitable location."

• The construction of an office building in the Hancock parking lot because "it should be kept open for downtown shoppers and visitors."

CHECKING THE OIL

Today, the responsibility of changes, can greatly extend the life of your car. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be well informed about every engine. Finding the dipstick is a simple matter of locating a looped wire or plastic handle (often painted red) on the side of the engine. The dipstick should be removed, cleaned with a cloth, and reinserted into the engine. After it is pulled out once more, the dipstick should be observed to note the oil level. If the level is between the "add" and "full" markings at the end of the stick, it is fine. If the oil level is below "add," sufficient oil should be added to reach the "full" line.

MEMORIES BOARD allowed participants in the Marie Curry Walk to write their signatures and messages in tribute to cancer victims.

First Marie Curry Walk Raises $80,000

Curry added that his late wife, who died of breast cancer in 1995 at age 52, would have been more than pleased with the results of the walk.

"Marie would have been awful proud of it," he said. "But she was so shy, she probably would have been embarrassed, too."

The Curry family started a fund in Marie's memory at Quincy Hospital shortly after her death.

As part of Sunday's event, the family also sent their love to the family of Judy Giordani, who died of breast cancer last Friday. Giordani was a close friend of Marie's who comforted her when she was ill.

At press time, Curry said the money raised from the walk totaled over $79,000, with several checks still to be counted.

"I really see us exceeding $80,000, and that's just wonderful," he said.

Curry said a "thank you" function will be scheduled in the near future for those who made key contributions to the walk.

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS walks with Tara Curry, Sean Curry, Cheryl Curry and Robert Curry during the first annual Marie Curry Walk to fight breast cancer.

FORMER MAYORS Arthur Tobin and Walter Hannon and City Councillor Daniel Raymondi were among those in the Marie Curry Walk.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS ARE PASSED out by volunteers to walkers at the end of the first annual Marie Curry Walk on Sunday.

McCauley, chairman of the council's Hospital Committee who also serves on a task force that is working to find another healthcare institution to partner with Quincy Hospital, agreed.

"What is going on at that hospital is not peculiar to Quincy Hospital," he said. "That's what's happening to the industry as a whole."

McCauley, a former mayor after whom one of Quincy Hospital's buildings is named, added, "The 23-member task force is working extremely well together, and we've made a lot of progress. I believe we're on the right track."

Councillor Paul Harold echoed similar sentiments about the economic environment that has shaped Quincy Hospital's current situation.

"A lot of these decisions are being made by insurance groups, not hospital officials," he said.

The hospital is about to review four "serious proposals" for potential partnership, Doran said. Those are from three hospital networks—Partners Healthcare System, Boston Medical Center, and Rhode Island-based Lifespan—and South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

A proposed 1996 merger with Carney Hospital in Dorchester, a Catholic institution, fell through because Cardinal Bernard Law disapproved of abortion services provided by Quincy Hospital.

The City Council would have to approve any merger, and could also vote to cede the city's control of the hospital to a private partner.

However, when Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi told Doran about a 1996 council vote calling for any merger to keep the hospital's status as one of two city-owned hospitals in the state, Doran said he was unaware of it.

"That will need to be factored into our deliberations," he said, adding that he will provide the council with as much information as possible about the four merger proposals.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said the city should allow the hospital to keep making its monthly $500,000 payments to bond insurers who hold the institution's $66 million debt, adding that probable cuts in federal Medicare reimbursements will increase that burden.

Doran noted that the hospital still has a $17 million cash reserve that will total $13 million beginning next year, although he is unsure how long the hospital can continue to depend on that.

The hospital task force is expected to make a recommendation on Quincy Hospital's course of action by the end of the year.

'Medical Watch' Program On Breast Cancer

The September "Medical Watch" program, a production of Quincy Hospital, focuses on the topic of breast cancer.

Host Kate Gifford, PA, will interview Delphine Lui, MD, a radiologist in the Women's Imaging Center at Quincy Hospital, to learn about risk factors, prevention, detection, and treatment options.

The program can be seen on Quincy Access Television Channel 3 in September. It will also air on Media One Channel 10 in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

Council To Review Civil Service Process

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymond wants to ensure that the selection of police officers through the state's Civil Service examination is being conducted in proper manner.

The council's Public Safety Committee, which Raymond chairs, will meet Monday, Oct. 5 at 5:45 p.m. to discuss the matter. Among those who will be invited to address the committee are Quincy Personnel Director James Chicino and Police Chief Thomas France.

Raymond said he became concerned about the process after speaking to a disabled veteran who took the exam and claimed others were hired before him, despite the fact such veterans are supposed to go to the top of the waiting list if they receive a passing grade.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico said he, too, believes the matter is an important one and agreed that the Oct. 5 meeting should be held.

Chiropractic Topic At Squantum Gardens

The Quincy Department of Elder Services and Indek Chiropractic will present "Chiropractic and Your Health" at Squantum Gardens Community Center, Saratoga St.

a healthier life with arthritis and how to avoid unnecessary medications.

$170,000 Appropriated For Yacht Clubs Dredging

The city will pay nearly $170,000 for its share of the cost of a dredging project that will take place at the Squantum and Wollaston Yacht Clubs.

The City Council appropriated $169,973.96 from the city's current expenses account for the work Monday night.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said the amount represents one-quarter of the total cost of the project. The state will pay the other three quarters, he said.

Ayers said the work is much needed, particularly because of the numerous activities at the clubs, including Quincy Bay Race Week.

He added that it has been a long time coming.

"The dredging hasn't been done since 1985," said Ayers.

Presidents Host CM Saturday At Stadium

Quincy's Strong Start Topped By Randolph

Peter Chella, head coach of the Quincy High School football team, knew there would be days like this, with nine new starters on offense and defense.

"We've got a lot of young kids starting for the first time, and we made a lot of mistakes," he said, following a 22-6 non-league loss to host Randolph last Friday night. "We weren't reacting the way we should, and gave them too many opportunities. We're young, so we're not going to panic. We'll just work through our mistakes and move on."

Seeking to rebound from the season-opening setback, the Presidents (0-1) host Catholic Memorial Saturday at 10 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. CM, a member of the Catholic Conference, dropped its opener, 26-0, to East Bridgewater. None of that fazed Chella, who noted CM's preseason success and their talented players.

"They play in a tough conference and lost some players, but we'll have our work cut out for us," he said. "They have a big tight end (6-6 Matt Walsh), a good quarterback (Andy St. Martin) and a tough defense. We'll have to play well if we want to win."

In the defeat at Randolph, the Presidents jumped ahead in the first quarter when Nick DiStasi caught a 31-yard touchdown pass from Dan Kelly. The scoring strike capped a 10-play, 72-yard drive on Quincy's second possession. During the drive, co-captain Nathan DoRosario (90 rushing yards) rushed for 26 yards on three carries. The extra point failed and Quincy led, 6-0, after one.

Randolph took the lead for good in the second quarter, sparked by a key defensive play. Sean Sullivan intercepted a deflected pass at Quincy's 23-yard line. A few plays later, junior tailback Brit Keel scored on a 15-yard run and Justin Marceline's extra point pushed the hosts ahead, 7-6, at the half.

On the first play of the second half, Keel (13 carries, 132 yards) dashed 51 yards to Quincy's five-yard line, setting up a one-yard sneak by Sullivan two plays later. Randolph led 15-6 after a successful two-point conversion attempt.

The Blue Devils increased their lead later in the third when Cliff Flucas scored on a 13-yard run, capping a six-play, 77-yard drive. Marceline's extra point closed out the scoring.

Though the Presidents were unable to score after the opening quarter, Chella was impressed with Quincy's rushing attack, led by DoRosario, co-captain John Katsarikas (50 yards) and Kelly (30 yards).

"Our offense was a little better," he said. "We ran the ball well, and Nathan played a strong game both ways. (Mike) Lencki and Katsarikas, two of our co-captains, played their hearts out. Danny Kelly is a great competitor and a talented quarterback. Once he gets comfortable with the position in general, we'll be much better. Hopefully we'll show a lot of improvement by the second half of the season."

Girls' Youth Hockey Program Seeks Interested Players

women's varsity swimming and diving team.

trations in special education psychology and math and will graduate next spring.

Presidents Shut Out Taunton; Host OCL Foe Falmouth Today

SOCCER

The Quincy High School girls' soccer team sandwiched a victory between two setbacks as the 1998 season got underway.

"We've had some great matches so far to begin the season," said Quincy head coach Robin Welinsky.

"We've added some great new players this year, including sophomore goalkeeper Kerry Eaton. She's a great addition to the team."

The Presidents (1-2) host Falmouth today (Thursday) at 4 p.m., Silver Lake Friday at 4 p.m. and visit Plymouth South next Monday at 4 p.m. All three are Old Colony League matches.

Last Friday, Quincy visited OCL foe Barnstable and lost, 8-0, to the Red Raiders.

During the first half, Welinsky made a goalkeeper change, inserting senior Crystal Kazolias, who made 11 saves in the second half.

In their OCL opener last Wednesday, the Presidents picked up a key 4-0 triumph over host Taunton. Eaton turned away 14 shots and junior Kelly Raymer played a strong defensive game.

Junior Amy Papile was the top offensive player, notching three goals, and sophomore Pam Sullivan scored an unassisted goal, shooting the ball over the goalkeeper's head and into the back of the net.

"We had an incredible match against Taunton," said Welinsky. "The kids really played hard and focused on their game. Kelly is focusing on what has to be done and is doing a great job running the defense."

Junior Kaitlyn McLaughlin had an assist and fellow starter Makena Cahill, a freshman, also played an important role.

"Makena has been doing a great job," said Welinsky. "Her enthusiasm and energy is great to see."

Quincy dropped the season opener, 2-0, to host Randolph last Monday.

Other members of the squad are co-captains Leanne Martin, Julie Gibbons and Kimberly DiBona, along with Jen Grogan, Kerin Griffin, Kristin Phillips and Nicolette Phillips.

Manets, Apaches, Mustangs Win Youth Football Openers

The Quincy Youth Football League kicked off its season Sunday, with a rematch of last year's co-champions, the Houghs Neck Manets and Quincy Point Panthers, among the clashes.

The Manets and Panthers tied, 6-6, in last fall's title game, but the Manets prevailed this time, winning 18-16. Quarterback Josh Giordani sparked the Manets to victory.

Matt Ramponi, Ryan Greene, Chris Bolter and Kevin O'Connell led the Panthers offense. The Panthers took an early lead, but the Manets took the edge in a see-saw battle. The Panthers took the deficit with a late score on an interception, but time ran out as they crossed midfield on their next possession.

Anthony Sandomato, Greg Morton and Kevin Hanson also played well for the Panthers.

This Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium, the Panthers take on the North Quincy Apaches at 1 p.m. in the first game of a triple-header. The Squantum Storm battle the Milton Mustangs at 2:30 p.m., followed by the Manets against the West Quincy Elks at 4 p.m.

In other action, three touchdowns by running back Ryan Farnham and a key defensive stand lifted the Apaches over the Storm, 20-15.

Late in the fourth, the Storm were driving downfield but the Apaches held off the comeback attempt. After a touchdown-saving tackle by Apache linebacker Matt Francis, the Storm had a first down at the Apaches' 18 with just over three minutes to play. Preventing the Storm from moving the ball, the Apaches took over on downs with 1:50 left and ran out the clock.

The Apaches got off to a quick start, recovering a fumble. Farnham capped off the drive with his first TD. The Storm countered with a scoring drive and went ahead, 7-6. In the second quarter, Farnham notched his second score on a 65-yard run.

Leading 12-7, the Apaches added to it in the third as quarterback Kevin Holleran led the offense downfield and Farnham scored on a 15-yard run. Holleran connected with Dave Buttomer for the two-point conversion.

The Storm did not give up, coming back with another TD and two-point conversion to cut the deficit to 20-15. An Apache turnover gave the Storm one final shot, but the Apache defense withstood the rally and came out on top.

Holleran also played well defensively, coming up with two key interceptions to halt Storm drives. Other defensive standouts for the Apaches were Buttomer, Chris Trestti, Steve Farrell, Kenny Tansey, Anthony Wall and Chris Marinelli. John Coughlin ran the ball well, Tim Coughlin excelled at wide receiver and line-man Tim Chieccio, John Zerigan, Jeff Green, Marinelli, Farrell and Buttomer played well.

In other action, the Mustangs defeated the Elks.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Much has been written and said about optimism and pessimism. Here are a few that we especially like:
"An optimist laughs to forget; a pessimist forgets to laugh."

"The optimist proclaims that we live in the best of all possible worlds; the pessimist fears that is true." — James Branch Cabell

"A pessimist sees only the dark side of the clouds, and mopes; a philosopher sees both sides and shrugs; an optimist doesn't see the clouds at all—he's walking on them." D.O. Flynn.

"Your morning thoughts may determine your conduct for the day. Optimistic thoughts will make your day bright and productive, while pessimistic thinking will make it dull and wasteful. Face each day cheerfully, smilingly and courageously, and it will naturally follow that your work will be a delightful accomplishment." — William M. Peck

Don't have an attitude of accepting life as it is... Be optimistic - and further develop what is good and eliminate what is bad; and for the really good life, dream on with the intentions of making them come true...

Your Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A tendency not to pay attention or to be lazy can interfere with job progress this week. You could receive a surprise invitation for travel. Social life is a plus, but wait for the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's best to maintain a low profile in business. Continue working on a project, but take few into your confidence now. You don't want to display your hand prematurely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll certainly make a good impression socially this week, but it would be wise to get involved with a friend's wild financial scheme. Popularity is on the rise. Take advantage of this over the weekend.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Advice you receive could be misleading. A certain measure of confidentiality is needed regarding a financial concern. Out-of-the-way shops lead to good buys this weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Creative work is favored over business pursuits at present. Be careful that you don't put your foot in your mouth by saying something inappropriate to a higher-up. The consequences could be disastrous.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's not a good time to lead a friend a valued possession, but it's a great time for beginning a home decoration project. Your sense of beauty is to the fore. Spill your appearance as well.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Creative types will enjoy a week of new inspirations. Absent-mindedness could be an early problem. There's a decided accent on romance and fun activities later this week.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Don't take on a do-it-yourself project unless you know what you're doing. You may receive a job assignment that can be done from the home. Intuition leads to career gains.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It could be love at first sight for those receptive to romance. Be careful not to spend foolishly if shopping later in the week. The weekend favors romance and stepping out.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Romance may come through the job. Social connections prove helpful to you in business, but you could get careless now about some important details. Be alert.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You could misplace something at home. Partnership interests are highlighted in general this week. Singles could meet with romance quite unexpectedly. Travel is a plus.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Judgment may be way off when it comes to shopping and the use of credit this week. However, in business your original ideas put you a step up the ladder of success. Enjoy the accolades you receive as a result.

Chiropractor Offering New Spinal Treatment

Dr. Robert J. Clark, a Quincy chiropractor, has recently added the SEMG, a new hi-tech analytical instrument to his office.

The SEMG (Surface Electromyography System) is a computerized instrument which administers a painless, non-invasive test that helps detect abnormal muscle activity surrounding the spine. According to Dr. Clark, abnormal muscle activity can be associated with subluxations or other forms of spinal dysfunction.

Spinal dysfunction can result from work injuries, car accidents, sports injuries and everyday occurrences such as bending the wrong way, poor posture, stress, slipping and heavy lifting. Many times this abnormal function does not initially create pain or discomfort until it has progressed to an advanced stage.

Dr. Clark said he is enthused the SEMG system will help him detect problems before they become symptomatic. The system will be beneficial in that it will assist him in measuring the effectiveness of his adjustments and overall care, he said.

Dr. Clark added that he is excited about staying on the leading edge of chiropractic care by offering the service, he has a commitment to, provide the highest quality chiropractic care possible, and he feels the SEMG system will enhance that goal.

RESIDENTS FILLED the auditorium at Quincy High School last Thursday night for a public hearing on the proposed Highpoint luxury apartments project in West Quincy. About 500 people, including a number of unions workers, attended. The project was opposed by three councillors who said it is too big for the neighborhood.

500 Attend Public Hearing WQ Apartments Project Opposed By 3 Councillors

A plan to build 1,641 units of luxury apartments on a former quarry site in West Quincy appears to be in jeopardy.

Three of eight City Council members—Councilor Timothy Cahill, Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico and Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin—said at a public hearing last Thursday night at Quincy High School they will not vote for the $200 Highpoint project.

Residents and union workers filled the auditorium at the high school, which seats 500, for the hearing. Those from the neighborhood voiced opposition, while the union members backed the proposal.

Cahill accused Cambridge-based Congress Group Ventures, the group behind the project, of misleading state agencies about the impact of the Quarry Street project when it sought and won a state environmental waiver this spring. D'Amico and Durkin also said the project is too big for a neighborhood of mostly single-family homes.

The councillors also voiced concerns about traffic, hazardous waste and other issues.

Their opposition could kill the project. Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond has said he will not vote on the matter because he owns an undeveloped lot off Curtis Street, on the eastern edge of the 75-acre Congress Group parcel. Six of nine councillors must vote in the affirmative for the project to be passed.

If fully built, Highpoint would be the largest residential development south of Boston. It would include 1,391 one- and two-bedrooms apartments in buildings three to eight stories high, and a 250-unit assisted living facility.

Apartments would rent for $1,200 to $1,800 a month. The development would bring about 2,500 more residents to the area, and double Quarry Street's current traffic volume of 9,200 vehicles a day.

The public hearing was recessed and will be continued Tuesday, Oct. 13 at 6:30 p.m. in the Quincy High auditorium.

Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, whose ward includes the project site and Council President Peter Kolson said two or three more rounds of hearings may be held to make sure all issues pertaining to the project are addressed.

Opposition Mounting State May Reconsider Juvenile Court Site

Opposition is mounting against the state's plan to bring the new, separate division of the statewide Juvenile Court Department to the former Grossman's building at 152 Parkingway, Quincy Center.

Among those who are against the plan are Mayor James Sheets, Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott, Councillor Francis McCauley, the Quincy Council on Aging, and numerous local residents. The building is the old W.T. Grant department store.

The opposition has grown to the point that state officials are reconsidering their decision to put the juvenile courthouse downtown, according to Roseanne Pawelec, a spokesperson for the state Division of Capital and Planning Operations (DCPO).

Pawelec said officials will meet as soon as possible to discuss their next move.

McDermott told The Quincy Sun that while he initially backed the proposal when he first saw it last year, several factors have caused him to change his mind.

"I'm absolutely against where it's going now," he said in a recent interview.

McDermott said when he first became aware of the Construction Start Expected By Spring Groundbreaking For Concourse Seen This Month

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A groundbreaking ceremony for the first phase of the planned Quincy Center Concourse will be held by the end of the month, according to Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor said the ceremony "definitely" will be held in October, immediately after the state hires a contractor to build the $12 million roadway.

Construction will begin by next spring or even sooner, he added--depending on when the contractor can get started--and be completed by the fall of 2000. The second phase will begin immediately after the first is finished, although it is unknown when it will be completed, Sheets said.

The first phase of the concourse is designed to link Hancock Street and Burgin Parkway to help ease traffic congestion and make access to the city's downtown business district smoother.

The second phase, according to preliminary designs, would run east from Hancock to Mechanic Street, widening Mechanic and sections of McGrath Highway and Revere Road and connecting the roadway to Southern Artery.

The design plans for the second phase, which have been proposed by the Concord-based engineering firm Earth Tech, are less than 25 percent complete.

Sheets said he was "surprised" at concerns raised by members of the Quincy Center Concourse Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) last week regarding a possible demolition of the American Legion Post at Mechanic Street and Revere Road and other aspects of the proposed design plans.

The mayor said the Post has been given the option of either selling its property to the city--in which case city officials would help it find a new home--or having the road built around it, leaving it untouched.

Other concerns raised included the following second-phase proposals: the purchase and demolition of three two-family homes on Mechanic Street and three businesses in a Hancock Street building, elimination of four private parking lots

Cellucci To Speak At Marshall Ceremony

Acting Gov. Paul Cellucci is expected to be the keynote speaker at a dedication ceremony and open house to be held Sunday, Oct. 25 at the Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School in Quincy Point.

Mayor James Sheets and other officials also will be on hand for the event.

The ceremony will begin at 1 p.m. and last about an hour. The school will remain open to the public until about 4 p.m., according to School Supt. Eugene Creedon.

"We're very, very excited to be having the dedication day," said Creedon. "We're looking forward to the dedication."

Cellucci's presence at the school, which opened last month, will make the event even more special, he noted.

PAUL CELLUCCI

"We're delighted to have the governor here," he said. "It's an honor for the City of Quincy and for the school system."

Sheets added, "We're thrilled we've reached the point now that the dedication will happen. This dedication really just highlights a whole new renaissance that's happening in Ward 2. This is a great time.

"I'm also pleased the governor will be able to make the dedication ceremony."

Although Cellucci's appearance could not be confirmed at press time, a staff member at the mayor's office said she is "75 percent sure" the governor will attend.

Creedon said the dedication will have an added dimension in that it is not only a ceremony for the school but also a tribute to Clifford Marshall, the late Norfolk County sheriff from Quincy for whom the building is named.

"We've named school buildings after people before, but it was always after

Pro/Am Bicycle Race Runs Into Opposition

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Voicing strong opposition to a request from the Atlantic Cup Classic Pro/Am Bicycle Race to conduct their second annual race, Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association told the license board Tuesday that the city "absolutely can't close down at 2 p.m." as it did last year.

Paul Salvucci, representative, told the board that the race would begin May 18 and travel to six cities with Quincy's arrival to be Friday, May 21 ending in Harvard Square on Saturday morning, May 22.

Referring to last year's race which was on a Saturday, Manning said businesses in the city especially restaurants such as Mando's were virtually "shut down." She added about the same time, persons coming out of work from the Stop & Shop Company also faced the same dilemma. She noted that "this year, it's on a Friday."

Chairman Joseph Shea asked Salvucci to refresh the board's memory as to what their route was used last year. Salvucci told the board that the race which benefits the Heart Fund, began at City Hall, around the Church of the Presidents, down to Cottage Ave. and went around "59 times."

Manning said she spoke to Tony Siciliano director of Emergency Management who verified her fears and noted that barriers were put down as early as 2 p.m.

Manning, although supportive of the Heart Fund suggested the possibility of another route that would be "less intrusive." She mentioned that around the Milton Academy, there is a running track that could be pursued.

Shea applauded Salvucci for applying early for the permit, and added it would give the board time for a meeting in October. He said he plans a meeting within two weeks with Salvucci, Siciliano, Police Chief Thomas Frane and someone from the "T."

on Mechanic Street and 40 spaces in the nearby Hancock Parking Lot, addition of a median strip to Revere Road and McGrath Highway between Southern Artery and Washington Street, and turning Mechanic Street into a two-level road with lanes in each direction separated by an inclined median strip.

Sheets said almost all aspects of the concourse plan are open to change and always have been.

"We're not going to move forward until people who are directly affected are satisfied," he said. "I thought we understood that two years ago."

License Board Briefs

The license board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

*Granted a one day beer and wine permit to St. John's Church Parish, 21 Gay St. for their "Annual Harvest Dinner Dance" Saturday, Oct. 17 from 6:30 to 12:30 p.m.

*Granted a common victualer license to Muhammad S. Anjum, owner of the Corner Mart on 171 West St pending approval of a water meter reading that hasn't been done for three years and the plumbing inspector.

*Granted a request from Speedy Auto Service by Monro, 500 Southern Artery and 706 Adams St. for a Repair Shop License. Jaycee Corrigan will manage Southern Artery and Ed Grady will manage Adams St. Timothy Blais will oversee both businesses.

the fact," he said. "For instance, the Bernazzani Elementary School was originally the Furnace Brook School for years before it was renamed."

Creedon added that Marshall is fully deserving of the honor, calling him "a very significant person in the community."

The new Marshall School cost $10 million to build, although Creedon noted that 63 percent of that total will be reimbursed by the state.

The school was built to relieve overcrowding at the Sterling Middle School in South Quincy. Students who last year attended the Point-Webster Elementary School—which is slated to reopen as a middle school next September—attend Marshall. Middle school students from Quincy Point who currently attend Sterling will attend Point-Webster beginning next year.

In addition to those changes, the school system also has set in motion a 10-year, $73 million plan that eventually will result in a new Quincy High School, the closing of the current Central Middle School which will be moved to the existing Quincy High, and other work at all of the Quincy Public Schools.

Kendrick Ave. To Be Closed For Water Main Project

Water main construction on Kendrick Ave. will require the road to be closed to automobile traffic between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. for four working days today (Thursday) through Tuesday, Oct. 6.

While the work is in progress, residences and businesses in the Penn's Hill area will be provided with a detour route for the four construction days. The road will be opened at the end of each construction day and during the weekend.

Ward 2 City Councillor

Daniel Raymondi said while the work will provide a temporary inconvenience, it is part of a $1.2 million plan to improve water pressure and quality throughout the entire Penn's Hill area that eventually will include a new pumping station, sidewalk and road repairs, and new trees.

"It's an extremely worthwhile project," he said. "When it's completed, the entire Penn's Hill community will benefit from a new water delivery system."

Residents will be asked to seek an alternate route to Franklin St. and Quincy Ave. other than Kendrick Ave. Police officers will be located at several key intersections to help facilitate traffic detouring around Kendrick Ave. There will be a detour in place that utilizes Water St. instead of Kendrick Ave. to travel from Franklin St. to Quincy Ave.

School System Receives $14,000 Truancy Grant

Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke presented a $14,000 grant to School Supt. Eugene Crendon on Tuesday.

The funds will be used to continue several truancy prevention programs established during the 1997-98 school year with funding from the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office.

The programs include tutoring, mentoring, and counseling services for at-risk students as well as programs aimed at increasing and parent involvement and efforts to reduce truancy.

This second year of truancy funding was made available by the Governor's Anti-Truancy Initiative through an Edward Byrne Memorial State and Local Law Enforcement Assistant Grant administered by the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office.

"The relationship between truancy and crime is clear and unequivocal," said Locke. "Last year, we confirmed through innovative school programs that we can prevent crime by insuring that our youth are in school and not roaming the streets during school hours."

"I am proud to continue my work with the local school and police departments in this juvenile justice effort."

TEACHING AN OLD DRUG NEW TRICKS

Thalidomide, a drug made infamous for causing severe birth defects in over ten thousand babies in the 1950s when it was prescribed to ease morning sickness in pregnant women, may hold promise for other legitimate uses. Though officially shelved by the FDA in the 1960s, there are now indications that it may be used safely (when not contraindicated by pregnancy or potential pregnancy) for certain conditions. It is being shown to be an effective pain reliever for both AIDS and HIV sufferers, and it eases symptoms in conditions such as lupus, multiple sclerosis, and rheumatoid arthritis. Some early studies have also shown that Thalidomide may have potential for both brain and prostate tumor treatment, macular degeneration, and diabetic retinopathy.

We see keeping up with the latest research to be part of our job, because it is our desire to give you the best medical advice possible. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. The FDA's first sanctioned use of Thalidomide in U.S. markets will be for the treatment of complications of leprosy.

A Powerhouse Named Jim

When you think of Quincy's political powerhouses down through the years several names automatically jump out of the city's history at you.

Names like Thomas Burgin, Charles Ross, Amelio Della Chiesa and James McIntyre.

They occupied the mayor's office between the 1930s and the 1960s and when they ran for that office, they not only ran against their opponents but usually over them, too.

But today we may have the big powerhouse of them all: James A. Sheets.

The "A" is for Andrew. But waiting mayoral hopefuls are wondering if it also stands for "Always." Like in always will be mayor!

They seem to be in for more waiting.

Sheets is now in his fifth term and could be on his way to becoming Quincy's all-time mayoral longevity champ.

By the time he calls it a career he could easily set a political record that might never be equaled or broken.

At the completion of his current term in 1999 he will have served 10 years in the mayor's office. That would be one year longer than any other mayor under the Plan A form of government. Ross holds that title now with nine years.

Della Chiesa served 12 years—eight under Plan A and four under Plan E. But the chief executive under Plan E was a city manager and the mayor was more a ceremonial head elected from the city council by his colleagues and who presided over the council like a council president does today.

Burgin served seven years and five months as Plan A mayor, leaving office to join the Navy in World War II. He later served two years as Plan E mayor.

McIntyre had six years but was also state senator. He gave up the mayor's office to become counsel to the Massachusetts senate and remained a powerful figure on Quincy's political scene.

But Sheets could dwarf them

25% Turnout Seen For Election

By PAUL HAROLD

A 25 percent voter turnout was predicted for next week's preliminary election that would nominate 14 candidates for city council out of a field of 35, and 12 candidates for school committee from a field of 19.

In November's election, seven councillors and six school committee members would be elected.

Under the Plan E Charter, all candidates were elected at-large.

However, for the first time in six years, candidates would be elected by a plurality of votes. Under the original Plan E, the proportion representation (PR) system of voting was used. Under PR, instead of voting with an "x" next to the candidates' name, voters ranked their choices by putting the numbers one, two or three, etc. next to the candidates' names.

While the elections were non-partisan, the candidates fell into two general groups, those in support of Plan E-manager government and those who favored the Plan A-mayor form of city government.

Following the Mass, an open house was held at the Rock Island Rd. home of Osterman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Osterman.

Osterman was the first diocesan priest from Houghs Neck.

World War I Was An 'Epoch-Making Event'

[The following letter to Quincy Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley was submitted by the author for publication.]

Dear Mr. Bradley,
As I am sure you are aware, November marks the 80th anniversary of the end of World War I, an epoch-making event in world history whose ramifications are still being felt.

Union Congregational Church was deeply affected by the war. Sixty-two young men of the parish including the pastor, the Rev. William Bingham Ayers, served in our armed forces. Three of them, including Capt. Raymond B. Melendy, for whom Melendy Square in Wollaston Center is named, were killed.

Accordingly, we would like to purpose a special Sunday Service of Remembrance to be held in our sanctuary during our regular Sunday worship service at 10 a.m. on Nov. 8 of this year. We would like to invite your involvement and input as well as the involvement of the wider city of Quincy.

As a former naval officer

Thanks Those Who Voted

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am writing in response to a newspaper article printed on Sept. 16. Based on the figures from the Secretary of State's Office, the average voter turnout on the South Shore was 28 percent. This means less than one-third of the registered voters on the South Shore actually took time out of their busy schedules to vote on Sept. 15.

Thank you to everyone who voted! In my opinion, voting is something everyone should do and here is why.

First, I was very upset to read the quote by Scott Sherlock when he said, "It's a sad state, I'll admit, but state politics doesn't affect my day-to-day life." If anything, I feel this could be furthest from the truth. State politics involves the day-to-day aspects of everyone's lives because it is the state and local politicians who resolve the different issues in their home states. That is why we have state and federal laws in the United States.

Second, I feel that people should not use the excuse of the Presidential scandal for not voting. There is good and bad in everything, even politics. Not all politicians are bad. Take a look at the members of the Quincy City Council. The City of Quincy could not have a group or more caring individuals. Granted, we may not always agree with them, but I feel they do what they think is best for the city.

Finally, we as Americans have the privilege to be able to go to the polls and not have to fear prosecution, or being harmed, as in other countries. It does not matter if you vote Democratic or Republican as long as you vote. I know some people who have actually gone into the voting booth and not voted for any of the candidates on the ballot. They can do this because it is their right.

In conclusion, I would like to say "thank you" to everyone who made Election Day possible. I would also like to ask the registered voters in Quincy to please vote on Tuesday, Nov. 3 in the general election.

4,000 Attend First Quincy ArtsFest

The first annual Quincy ArtsFest was held recently at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex in Merrymount Park.

The show was co-sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department, the Quincy Park Department and the Quincy Art Association. According to Quincy ArtsFest organizers, more than 4,000 people attended the event.

The show featured more than 300 different paintings, photographs and children's artwork. Some of the South Shore and Greater Boston's finest artists and photographers participated in the Quincy ArtsFest.

"The first annual Quincy ArtsFest was a tremendous success," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Quincy Park Department. "This show allowed local families to enjoy our parks as a center of community and cultural activity. The tremendous talent of our participants combined with the beautiful weather and sylvan park setting to make for a perfect weekend."

Quincy ArtsFest also featured a wide variety of art demonstrations. Ginger Betty's Bakery conducted an "edible art" program which allowed children to decorate their own gingerbread cookies with frosting and candy. Members of the Quincy Art Association also gave painting and sketching demonstrations for children and adults throughout the weekend.

Live entertainment featured at the show included the Riverside Theater works, singer Joe Laubohm, the Forbes School of Irish Step Dance, and performers from the band Velvet Krush.

"Based on the success of the first Quincy ArtsFest, it is my goal to continue working with the wonderful people from the Quincy Art Association to make this show an annual event," added Koch.

QUINCY ARTSFEST was held recently at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex in Merrymount Park. Numerous local artists and photographers participated in the first annual event, including Quincy Art Association Acting President Anet Paglierani.

ADMIRING THE WORK at the Quincy ArtsFest are Quincy residents Kelly Reilly, 9; Colleen Reilly, 3; and Julie Reilly, 7. More than 4,000 were in attendance, according to organizers.

25 Winners, 101 Honorable Mention

Meet Quincy's 'Neat Neighbors'

The Quincy Park Department announces the winners of the first annual "Neat Neighbors" contest.

Twenty-five winners were chosen at random from more than 160 qualifying entries. Each of the winners will receive a prize of either a rhododendron, a holly bush or a weeping pussy willow.

This year's winners are listed on the accompanying chart.

"The City of Quincy would like to recognize those who have worked hard on their lawns, gardens and properties to help achieve a cleaner and greener Quincy," said Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments Executive Director Thomas Koch. "All of our winners were nominated by friends and neighbors who truly appreciate all the hard work and pride that these people put into their properties."

The city has increased

THOMAS KOCH

"Recognizing people who work hard to beautify their yards and their neighborhoods."

the scope of the Cleaner, Greener Quincy program to encourage people to focus on private properties as well. In May, the Park Department sponsored the first "Yard Care Conference." Experts in the fields of tree care, composting, turf care and gardening were on hand to answer questions from residents.

"When Cleaner, Greener Quincy was started nine years ago our parks, playgrounds, beaches and open space areas needed some work," said Koch. "Now that our public land is clean, we hope to shift the focus of the program to recognize those people who work hard to beautify their yards and neighborhoods. I would like to congratulate all of our winners and also those who made our honorable mention list."

Nominations for the Neat Neighbors Contest were open from Memorial Day until Sept. 11. Residents were allowed to call the Park Department and nominate a friend or neighbor for the contest. After meeting a minimum cleanliness requirement for the contest, 25 winners were chosen randomly.

Also Receives 2nd Quincy 2000 Loan Schuerch Corp. Awarded Ambulance Co. Contract

Schuerch Corp. of Quincy has been awarded a contract by American Medical Response (AMR), the nation's largest ambulance service, to manufacture and supply the patented SchureSlide to AMR.

AMR has approximately 5,000 ambulances nationwide and the SchureSlide will become standard equipment for all of those vehicles, according to officials.

In conjunction with the announcement of the contract, Quincy 2000 Economic Development Specialist Ann Fisher announced Schuerch Corp. recently received its second loan from the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool.

"This is by far the largest contract Schuerch Corp. has ever secured," said Peter Schuerch, president. "This contract will assist us in taking the company to the next level. This contract and AMR's recognition in the industry will enable our company to market the SchureSlide directly to every ambulance company throughout the United States."

Schuerch Corp. is involved in the design, development, and production of medical and surgical supplies. The company will use the loan funds awarded by lying down. For AMR, Schuerch redesigned the Quincy 2000 to purchase materials for the production of the SchureSlide.

"I would like to thank Quincy 2000 and the 10 local banks for approving our second loan," said Schuerch. "In addition to the purchase of inventory, this loan will finance our national marketing campaign to educate all EMS providers on what AMR has learned: the SchureSlide will greatly reduce the risk of back injuries on EMS employees and provide better comfort for the patient."

The marketing campaign will include every general medical, surgical hospital and outpatient surgical center as well as Army, Navy, Air Force and VA hospitals across the country.

"Our SchurMed Surgical supply catalog and web site, www.schurmed.com, is the direct marketing arm of Schuerch Corp.," said Schuerch. SchurMed also markets other manufacturers' products, he added.

Schuerch developed the SchureSlide after working in the operating room at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth. The purpose of the SchureSlide is to reduce back injuries of medical personnel and increase patient comfort during patient transfer.

Using the SchureSlide, medical personnel can easily shift or transfer patients in any position, sitting up or original SchureSlide for use in ambulances.

Schuerch said AMR previously had never had a product like the SchureSlide despite the need for a compact, lightweight transfer device. The SchureSlide Ambulance Model will now be standard equipment for AMR, he added.

Other products manufactured by Schuerch Corp. include a foot used to position the operative leg during total knee replacement surgery and an arthroscopic leg holder used during the knee arthroscopy procedure.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino said, "With the assistance of the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool, Schuerch Corp. can now move aggressively forward with a national direct marketing campaign of all the company's products."

The Quincy 2000 Loan Pool is a $5.4 million loan fund capitalized by 10 area banks. The Loan Pool awards loans ranging from $15,000 to $150,000 for both new and existing Quincy-based businesses.

For more information, call Quincy 2000 at (617) 847-1454.

For Senior Citizens

Marina Place Under Construction

Marina Place, located at Four Seaport Drive in Marina Bay, is well into its construction of a 110-apartment independent and assisted living residence.

The residence will offer seniors a full range of affordable living options, including service-enriched independent and assisted living in a seaside setting.

Senior Living Residences, LLC, the management company that will oversee daily operations of Marina Place, has announced that Patricia P. Garre, R.N., Ph.D., has been selected as executive director. Garre, a Quincy resident, comes to Marina Place from Welch Home Health Inc., where she was director of clinical services, responsible for all home care clinical operations and services.

Garre's previous served as assistant administrator of clinical operations/chief operating officer of Vencor Hospital in Boston and clinical/administrative supervisor at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute. A licensed nursing home administrator and registered nurse, she holds a Ph.D. in health policy.

Robert F. Larkin Jr., president of Senior Living Residences said, "We are very pleased to have Pat on board. With her extensive experience in managing health care services for seniors, and her knowledge of the South Shore health-care community, she is an excellent choice for Marina Bay."

Assisted living is an apartment style housing and health care alternative for seniors who may no longer find it safe or desirable to live alone, or who may need a helping hand with some daily living activities and medication management.

Garre said that assisted living at Marina Place will provide its residents with "attractive apartments, personal care, weekly house-keeping, medication reminders and monitoring, companionship, social and cultural enrichment, fitness activities, and gracious dining."

She added that Marina Place will include a Memory Impairment Care Program for individuals with dementia and early-stage Alzheimer's.

Marina Place is located in the heart of Marina Bay, with water views of the Boston skyline and easy access to the Southeast Expressway and public transportation. It has 110 private apartments, a variety of community rooms, and outdoor spaces including a large patio, garden and walkways.

Priority applications for residency are now being accepted for Marina Place, scheduled to open in February. For more information, call (617) 770-3264 or 1-800-854-0576.

Registration for the hike is 9 a.m. to noon; the cook-out begins at noon and lasts until 4 p.m. All hikers and past or present Habitat volunteers are invited.

Habitat For Humanity Blue Hill Hike Saturday

Friends of South Shore Habitat for Humanity will hike the Blue Hills Saturday, Oct. 3 to raise money for the nonprofit, ecumenical ministry dedicated to building simple, affordable homes in partnership with South Shore families in need.

Home are sold to these families at no profit through long-term, interest-free mortgages. Payments are recycled through a Fund for Humanity, which helps to build additional houses.

South Shore Habitat is a volunteer organization and fund raising is vital. Without it, the 19 families Habitat has partnered with to build their homes may never have been able to own a home of their own.

The goal this year is to raise $20,000 with the Hike for Habitat. Hike packets, which include information and a pledge sheet, can be picked up at any Tedeschi's Food Shop along the South Shore or mailed directly by calling (781) 843-9080.

Each hiker will receive a Habitat T-shirt or hat after completing the hike. Prizes will be given to the individuals who obtain the most pledges. At the end of the hike, a volunteer appreciation cookout is planned at the Blue Hills site.

BankBoston Awards $5,000 Grant To Neighborhood Housing Services

BankBoston has recognized the work of Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services (NHS) in providing housing for special needs populations in Quincy, Boston and the South Shore.

The bank has awarded a $5,000 grant to NHS in support of a Transitional Housing Project being done in collaboration with DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) for victims of domestic violence who have lost all their resources. The funds will be used in the development of a six-unit, two-building project that will provide safe and secure housing for battered women and their children.

In 1997, BankBoston awarded a $10,000 grant to Quincy NHS to help fund the Veterans Home, a residence for homeless veterans.

"BankBoston's response to the enormous need for this type of housing marks the continuation of the partnership between BankBoston and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services.

As a concerned member of the community, BankBoston is proud to provide assistance to victims of domestic violence as they begin to rebuild their lives," said Thomas Lyons, chief operating officer in BankBoston's South Region.

Founded in 1981, Quincy NHS was developed as a non-profit organization to revitalize neighborhoods through offering housing rehabilitation services and affordable loans for homeowners who were ineligible for conventional financing. As Quincy NHS rehabilitated houses across the city, board members recognized the opportunity to collaborate with other non-profits working to provide shelter to the disadvantaged in the area. In 1993, board members expanded the mission of Quincy NHS to include the purchase, development and management of housing for special needs populations. Since then, Quincy NHS has developed three units of transitional housing for battered women in collaboration with DOVE.

In 1996, DOVE turned away 238 women and 477 children due to a lack of housing facilities. In 1997, Quincy NHS purchased two buildings with a total of six units. Adding six units is a small, but necessary, step in providing safe housing for victims of domestic violence, according to Quincy NHS officials. Adequate parking is available, along with backyards for the children to play. A public park and community center are nearby. The buildings, located in a residential neighborhood, are on a bus line and not far from an MBTA station.

For more information about this project, contact Norman Grenier, executive director of Quincy NHS at (617) 770-2227 or write to Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, 300 Newport Ave., North Quincy, MA 02171.

Checklist For New Home Buyers Experts Say You Need To Look "Under The Hood"

(NAPS)—Thinking of buying a house? Here are a few pointers to help you choose a home that keeps you and your family comfortable year-round.

One common cause of homeowner after-the-sale complaints is problems with a home's comfort "engine," its heating/cooling system and operating accessories. An expert from a leading manufacturer of home comfort systems recommends that you "kick the tires" and take a careful look "under the hood" before closing the deal.

"Modern homes are really a challenge to keep comfortable," said Steve Arnholt, Honeywell director of home comfort marketing. "People want lots of space, lots of windows, vaulted ceilings, high ceilings and interesting floor plans. A bare-bones heating/cooling comfort system often just can't do the job." The most common complaints include areas in the home that often feel too hot or too cool, poor ventilation and air quality and humidity problems. A bare-bones comfort system may also reduce a home's resale value, Arnholt said.

Upgrades that pay for themselves

By contrast, an upgraded comfort system, with options that can significantly improve comfort, convenience and efficiency, may be an almost free home improvement in the long run.

It may add one to two percent to the price of a home. However, many upgrades can pay for themselves many times over in energy savings and by helping preserve and protect the structure and contents of a home.

How can you tell if a home's comfort system is up to the job? First, ask questions of the builder or seller. If necessary, get an opinion from a quality heating and cooling contractor. The following checklist, from the Perfect Climate® system experts at Honeywell, describes the components in a complete home comfort system:

Central heating/cooling: According to the U.S. EPA's

Energy Star® program, high-efficiency heating and cooling systems can save consumers 20 to 40 percent on utility bills. Here is how to tell if it is a high-efficiency system:

□ A high-efficiency furnace has an Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency (AFUE) rating of 90 percent or above.

□ High-efficiency air conditioners and heat pumps have a Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio (SEER) of 10 or higher.

Temperature control: According to Honeywell, a programmable thermostat or a zoned temperature control system can help reduce heating/cooling bills by up to $150 or more in a typical home.

□ According to the U.S. EPA, a programmable thermostat can help reduce heating and cooling bills by up to 20 percent.

□ A zoned temperature control system can further increase savings because it sends heated or cooled air only to the areas in a home that need it, only when they need it. It also can improve air distribution and help reduce problems with annoying hot or cold spots in a home.

Air filtration: An ordinary disposable furnace filter only provides minimal protection for your heating/cooling equipment. A whole-house high-efficiency air cleaner better protects that equipment. It can also help keep your home and indoor air cleaner and fresher. There are a number of alternatives in different price ranges, such as these from Honeywell.

□ A whole-house electronic air cleaner can trap more than 94 percent of common airborne particles (0.5 microns and larger) that pass through it. This type air cleaner has permanent, washable air-cleaning cells.

□ Whole-house media air cleaners use disposable filters and are significantly more efficient than ordinary disposable filters.

Ventilation: Experts say a home's stale indoor air should be replaced by fresh outdoor air every three hours, but air exchange rates in tightly built and insulated homes can be as low as once every ten hours. The solution is a whole-house fresh air ventilation system.

□ Look for models described as a heat recovery ventilator (HRV) or energy recovery ventilator (ERV); they expel polluted indoor air, bring in fresh outside air, and recover up to 90 percent of the energy originally used to heat or cool the indoor air.

□ A whole-house fresh air ventilation system is an almost silent way to remove excess humidity from problem areas such as bathrooms, kitchens and laundry rooms.

□ Look for ventilation equipment whose performance is certified by the Home Ventilating Institute.

Humidification: With the exception of a few coastal areas, most homes need a humidifier during the heating season. Without one, your indoor relative humidity can be drier than the Sahara Desert. Such extreme dryness leads to static shocks and dry skin, throats and nasal passages. It can cause furniture, woodwork and collectibles to crack, shrink or warp as they dehydrate.

□ Proper humidity control—indoor levels between 35 and 50 percent, depending on the outdoor weather—helps prevent those problems. It can also help you feel comfortable even at lower thermostat settings. According to Honeywell, if you can lower your thermostat setting by three degrees during the heating season, you can reduce your heating bills up to 5 percent or more.

For more information: To learn more, call Honeywell at 1-800-345-6770, ext. 7123; send e-mail to info@corp.honeywell.com; or visit the Honeywell Internet site at www.honeywell.com.

'Keep A Kid From Crime'

Crime touches everyone, including young people. Nearly half the violent crimes in some cities are the work of persons 21 and under. And people in this age group are often victims of crime.

In fact, 12 to 24 year olds are victims of violent crime more frequently than any other age group. But young people can be crime fighters, too. Here are some ways to work with youth, to help them protect themselves and to encourage a crime-free life.

STAY IN SCHOOL

A teenager can find many reasons to drop out of school: frustration with "the system," family or social problems, embarrassment over not having the "right" clothes, or just simple boredom. But dropouts with little chance for a good job are likely to turn to crime. Groups, like one in Charleston, West Virginia, work with potential dropouts on a one-to-one basis, encouraging them to stay in school. In many other communities, volunteers donate their services as teaching assistants, counselors, and special tutors to help schools provide the attention these students need.

Other groups offer alternative educational opportunities for dropouts. New York City's Harlem Prep, supported by business and industry, helps prepare dropouts for college. In 12 years more than 1,500 graduates have gone on to college.

Project New Pride in Denver works with delinquents who have committed serious crimes. Through a number of programs, including alternative schooling, vocational training, job placement and counseling, Project New Pride helps many young people who had given up hope. Instead of vandalizing, these young people are helping to preserve and protect their neighborhoods. One former teenage offenders, now a community organizer and youth counselor, sums up their attitude: "This is my neighborhood, too!"

Depression Screening At Quincy Hospital

Quincy Heights, the psychiatric division of Quincy Hospital will offer a free depression screening from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3 to 6 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 8 in the Educational Center at the hospital, 114 Whitwell St.

The screening includes a lecture followed by a private evaluation by a mental health professional. Lectures will be given every half hour, followed by individual evaluations with a mental health professional.

Roberta Guez, LICSW, program director of Quincy Heights, will present the lecture, which covers how to recognize the signs and symptoms of depression and treatment options. The evaluation involves a written test to help identify depression and a discussion of the results.

No appointment is required. For more information about the depression screening, call Quincy Heights at (617) 376-5427.

Quincy's Top Priority: Contain B-R's Bessette

Presidents Host Trojans Friday

by LIAM FITZGERALD

Defenses have been designed specifically to stop him, but nothing has prevented Bridgewater-Raynham's Doug Bessette from becoming one of the state's elite high school running backs.

And Bessette is just one of the talented Trojans (2-0) that Quincy High School's football team must contain when the Old Colony League champions visit Quincy (0-2) Friday at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy head coach Peter Chella speaks from experience when talking about Bessette, a 5-11, 205-pound back who erupted for 225 yards and four touchdowns in last year's 35-13 win over the Presidents.

"We're not the only team that's tried to stop him and failed," said Chella. "Nobody has. He's a college back who is in a class by himself. He has power, explosive speed, great cutting ability, great vision and strength. He's the type of back you see once in a coaching career."

"As far as defending him goes, you try to keep him out of his favorite spots and force them to throw the ball. That's our goal, although they've had success doing that this season. They're a veteran team that is used to playing under pressure."

Despite a number of miscues by both teams, last Saturday's non-league game between Quincy and visiting Catholic Memorial came down to the wire, with the Knights holding on for a 14-7 triumph.

The Presidents were missing three starters due to injuries, including fullback Nathan DoRosario and tight end Jeff Peterson, both of whom Chella expects to return this week.

Trailing 14-7 with 3:49 remaining, Quincy took over on its own 44. After a 17-yard pass from quarterback Dan Kelly to wide receiver Mike Lencki gave Quincy a first down at CM's 24, the Knights' defense tightened up.

Three plays later, on fourth and 11 at the 25, Kelly lofted the ball to the end zone. Lencki made the reception, but officials ruled he was out of bounds, allowing the Knights to take over and run out the clock.

In the first quarter, CM's Matt Walsh blocked a Nick DiStasi punt, and the Knights took over at Quincy's 10. The play led to a 1-yard touchdown run by Ayne Briceno and Brandon Halliday's extra point gave CM a 7-0 lead.

Quincy bounced back on the ensuing possession, as Kelly floated a 35-yard pass to DiStasi, but a John Katsarikas fumble turned the ball over to CM.

Fortunately for Quincy, CM fumbled the ball right back, with Lencki recovering it at CM's 19. After a 14-yard run by Kelly, Katsarikas (19 carries, 45 yards) scampered 11 yards for a touchdown. Kelly booted the extra point to tie the game.

On their second possession of the third quarter, the Knights went ahead when St. Martin threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Lamar Wright and Halliday kicked the extra point.

The Presidents had a golden opportunity when they took over at CM's 35 following a punt, but Katsarikas fumbled the ball away on the first play. Quincy recovered a CM fumble on the following play, but Kelly was intercepted at CM's 3-yard line to halt another drive.

QUINCY TAILBACK John Katsarikas (3) cuts back to avoid Catholic Memorial's Nick Spiro during the host Presidents' 14-7 loss to the Knights Saturday. Katsarikas, doing the bulk of the running in the absence of Nathan DoRosario, scored Quincy's only TD on an 11-yard run.

PRESIDENTS' QUARTERBACK Dan Kelly (17) eludes the pressure as lineman Sean Fitzpatrick blocks a Catholic Memorial defender. Kelly nearly threw the game-tying touchdown late in the fourth quarter, but the receiver, Mike Lencki, was ruled out of bounds. (Sun photos/Tom Gorman)

Apaches Run Past Panthers, 28-6

The North Quincy Apaches improved to 2-0 following a 28-6 victory over the Quincy Point Panthers in Quincy Youth Football action.

Apache running back Ryan Farnham opened the scoring when he scooped up a fumble on a broken play and scampered 45 yards for a first-quarter touchdown. The Panthers countered with an impressive drive as Matt Ramponi scored to tie the game at 6-6 at the end of the opening quarter.

Farnham broke the tie with a 60-yard touchdown run early in the second quarter for a 12-6 Apache lead. The Panthers drove the ball deep into Apache territory and were threatening to score when time ran out in the first half.

In the third quarter, Apache quarterback Kevin Holleran scored on a 35-yard bootleg and ran in the two-point conversion to push the lead to 20-6. Apache running back James Coughlin sealed the victory in the fourth quarter with a 25-yard touchdown run and Holleran added the two-point conversion to close out the scoring.

The Apaches received excellent two-way efforts from Farnham, Holleran, Coughlin, Matt Francis, Steve Farrell and Dave Buttomer. On the interior line, Jonathan Carroll, Tim Chiaccio, Chris Marinelli, Jeff Green and John Zerigian played well for the winners.

For the Panthers, Ryan Greene played a solid two-way game and Anthony Sandonato, Eddie DeWitt, Andrew Picard, John Paul White and James McQuinn played well on the line.

In other action, the Quantum Storm battled the Milton Mustangs and the Houghs Neck Manets took on the West Quincy Elks.

Sunday's lineup at Veterans Memorial Stadium kicks off with the Manets facing the Storm at 1 p.m., followed by the Panthers against the Mustangs at 2:30 p.m. and the Apaches taking on the Elks at 4 p.m.

RED RAIDERS QUARTERBACK Chris Bregoli looks for an open receiver as he receives protection from offensive lineman Nell Rosenberger (70). Bregoli completed 14 of 29 passes, but North's offense stalled inside the Whitman-Hanson 20-yard line.

NORTH QUINCY RUNNER Steve Minukas (left) carries the ball as Whitman-Hanson's John Edgerly closes in during the visiting Panthers' 28-0 win Friday over the Red Raiders. North (8-2) looks to get in the win column when it visits Falmouth Friday night at 7.

Winless NQ Seeks End To Its Scoring Drought

Raiders Visit Falmouth Friday

The focus at North Quincy High School's football practice this week is finding ways to put points on the board, after scoring just 13 points in two consecutive losses.

"We're moving the ball well, but we haven't been able to punch it in," said McPhee, referring to North's 28-0 setback to visiting non-league foe Whitman-Hanson last Friday at Veterans Memorial Stadium. "When you don't score, you don't win. I like how our offense is moving downfield, but we have to finish it off with scores."

visit another winless team, Falmouth, Friday at 7 p.m. in their Old Colony League opener, but McPhee knows the Clippers are better than their record would suggest.

Last year, the Clippers (0-2) handed North a 40-12 defeat, as tailback Jamal Branch rushed for four touchdowns. Branch is among nine returning starters, along with third-year quarterback Hunter Greeley and tight end Joe Laudano.

"This will be another tough game for us," said

McPhee. "They have some talent that could give us some problems. Their QB is good and that runner (Branch) and tight end (Laudano) are a couple of talented players as well."

In the setback to W-H, the Red Raiders' first play from scrimmage was a 16-yard pass from quarterback Chris Bregoli (14 for 29, 153 yards) to tight end Frank McNamara (seven catches, 96 yards). McNamara had two more receptions and a 15-yard run, but a sack in W-H territory halted the drive.

Following a short punt, the visiting Panthers took over on their own 28 and wasted little time getting on the board. Running back Greg Lozeau dashed 54 yards deep into NQ territory on W-H's first play. Quarterback Zac Costa culminated the four-minute drive with a three-yard touchdown run. Eric Nugent kicked the first of his four extra points for a 7-0 lead.

Two key fourth-down plays on the Panthers' next drive led to their second score. Faced with a fourth and 2 at North's 44, Costa carried the ball seven yards to keep the drive alive. On the next play, NQ's Chris Carthas sacked Costa for a six-yard loss, but Costa rebounded. Three plays later, on a fourth and 8, Costa connected with Lozeau for a 35-yard touchdown strike.

"I thought our defense played pretty well overall, but it has to stop giving up the big plays," said McPhee. "On that fourth and 8 play, you can't let them score."

On North's next possession, a botched punt gave W-H the ball at North's 40, and four plays later, Owen scored on a five-yard run and the W-H increased its lead to 21-0 at halftime.

In the second half, NQ continued to have problems offensively, as Bregoli threw an interception and another possession resulted in a punt. W-H struck again early in the fourth quarter, this time on a 56-yard scoring romp by Owen for the game's final score.

High Hopes For Raiders

If North Quincy High School's girls' volleyball team keeps improving as the season progresses, head coach Jim Rendle believes the Red Raiders can contend with anybody in the state.

"We're a young team, but we have a lot of depth, with 11 girls who can really play," he said. "They're all interchangeable, so we can mix things up and not miss a beat. Our weaknesses are our lack of size and experience, but we have a lot of good players who I think can make up for that."

"So far this season, it's been different kids leading the way, which is great. We don't have to rely on one or two girls every match. We have a lot of work ahead of us, and we know what we have to do to compete. If we keep pushing and working, we'll be there in thick of things, among the top two or three teams in the state."

The Red Raiders (4-2) were back in action yesterday (Wednesday) for a 4 p.m. match at New Bedford, and host Plymouth South today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. Next Monday, North visits Medford for a 6 p.m. match and then travels across town next Wednesday at 5:30 p.m. to play rival Quincy.

In recent action, NQ swept visiting Silver Lake 2-0 last Thursday, led by the strong serving of sophomore Jess Lorman, along with junior outside hitter Megan Giaty and junior middle blocker Tia Harris, who recorded a number of kills and blocks.

Last Wednesday, North

visited the No. 1 team in the state, Barnstable, and lost by a 2-0 score. The game scores were 15-12, 15-11 in favor of Barnstable, which notched its 84th consecutive victory. Rendle was impressed with the play of sophomore setter Amy Jellison and senior setter Alexis Miranda.

The previous day, the host Red Raiders battled the No. 2 team in the state, Dracut, and played a strong match despite falling, 2-0.

North Plays Quincy Saturday At Stadium

Red Raider Girls (4-1-2) Off To Best-Ever Start

Continuing its best start in team history, the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team picked up its first-ever win over Barnstable, along with a scoreless tie against Bridgewater-Raynham and a one-goal setback to Falmouth.

The Red Raiders (4-1-2) were back in action yesterday (Wednesday) at 6:30 p.m. at Plymouth South and play today (Thursday) at 3:45 p.m. against Norwood at Pageant Field.

Saturday at 5 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium, the Red Raiders battle rival Quincy in the first of two meetings. Next Tuesday, North visits league-leading Silver Lake for a 6:30 p.m. match.

In recent action, host NQ jumped out to a three-goal lead and cruised to a 7-1 triumph Monday over Barnstable. Junior Ashley Murphy opened the scoring midway through the first half, one-timing a cross from senior co-captain Betsy Stone. Sophomore Stacy Szeszul notched her first goal four minutes later, assisted by junior Jill Nicholson. Murphy scored again, with another assist from Nicholson.

In the second half, Stone scored the first of her two goals, receiving a cross from Szeszul and shooting it by the goalkeeper. Stone later collected her team-leading seventh goal, assisted by freshman Lauren Sleeth, who scored the next two goals to close out NQ's scoring. Sleeth's first score was unassisted, with junior Caitlyn O'Donnell assisting on the second.

Barnstable's only goal came on a shot that deflected off a North defender and ricocheted to an open player out front, who sent it into the net. North senior co-captain goalkeeper Kristen Bowes made 15 saves.

Bregoli commended the defensive efforts of seniors Lauren Koch and Liz Bennett, along with junior Lauren Awed. Freshman Kelly Rice, making her first varsity start in place of injured senior co-captain Rachael Powers, also played well.

"We were short-handed, with a few other girls out along with Rachael, but we still had a great effort," said NQ head coach Paul Bre-goli. "We finished off our chances and picked up a big win. The girls are playing terrific soccer, particularly defensively. Bowes has been great in goal and we're playing well in front of her."

Through seven games, Bowes has yielded just two goals and is tied for second in the OCL with an 0.29 goals against average.

Last Thursday, Bowes (10 saves) earned her fifth shutout as NQ and B-R played to a 0-0 tie. Powers saved a goal with a clear at the goal line and senior co-captain Dorothy Cronin played what Bregoli called "her best game of the year."

A trip to Falmouth last Wednesday resulted in North's first loss of the season, 1-0. The Clippers scored 13 minutes into the second half and held on for the win. NQ had a few scoring chances, including a Stone header that sailed over the crossbar. Playing on a bad leg, Powers played a strong game, as did sophomore Jen Conley and senior Katie Cervels at outside back.

Quincy Hosts North Oct. 7 Presidents Look To Get Back On Winning Track

Following a strong early start, the young Quincy High School girls' volleyball team looks to dig itself out of a recent losing skid.

The Presidents (2-4), who won two of their first three matches before dropping their last three, were back in action Tuesday at Brockton and visit Silver Lake Friday at 4 p.m. Next Monday at 4 p.m., Quincy hosts Durfee and host rival North Quincy next Wednesday at 5:30 p.m.

Under first-year head coach Christine Barrett and first-year assistant coach Elizabeth Noble, the Presidents start only one senior (co-captain outside hitter Liz Ashworth) and feature a strong group of juniors, including co-captain setter Tabitha McLellan and twin sisters Colleen (middle hitter) and Caitlin Nichol (outside hitter). McLellan and Colleen Nichol were varsity players last season, and Ashworth also saw action at the varsity level.

Sophomore setter Jacqui Niosi, a varsity player as a freshman, is the other co-captain. Michelle Catrambone (junior middle hitter) and Nina Niamkey (junior defensive specialist) will also be counted on for contributions.

Other varsity players include sophomores Christina Keenan and Ilana Saxe and seniors Sara Ewen and Connie Wong.

"We're a young team, with only one senior starting and just three players back with significant varsity experience," said Barrett. "We're rebuilding, and not many teams expect much from us. We don't mind being the spoiler, but we still have a goal of reaching the tournament."

"It's not out of reach, but we need to start picking it up and work as a team. Right now, we're forcing our own errors and not making our opponents work, which we have to do in order to win."

Quincy's latest setback was an 8-15, 13-15 loss to visiting Falmouth Monday, despite the efforts of Niosi (13 assists, one ace), Ashworth (four kills, three aces, six digs), Catrambone (five kills) and Caitlin Nichol (four kills, five digs).

Quincy dropped a tough match to visiting Taunton last Friday, 15-10, 10-15, 5-

15. Quincy's leaders were Colleen Nichol (13 kills, three blocks and eight digs), Caitlin Nichol (six kills), Niosi (15 assists), Ashworth (10 digs) and Catrambone (solid offensive play).

Last Wednesday, Quincy fell to visiting New Bedford, 5-15, 11-15. Colleen Nichol (six kills, three blocks) and Ashworth (six digs) played well.

The Presidents' second victory was a 15-11, 15-11 triumph over host Durfee on Sept. 21, sparked by Colleen Nichol (11 kills, four blocks), Niosi (15 assists, two aces) and Ashworth (eight digs, three kills).

Quincy dropped its second match to host Barnstable, 0-15, 5-15 on Sept. 18.

The Presidents opened the season on by defeating visiting Dennis-Yarmouth 15-10, 8-15, 15-11 on Sept. 16. Quincy was led by Colleen Nichol (eight kills, three blocks, one ace), Niosi (11 assists, one ace), Ashworth (six digs, four aces), McLellan (eight digs) and Caitlin Nichol (four kills, seven digs).

Presidents' Senior Group Provides Skill, Leadership

SOCCER

Following a game at Bridgewater-Raynham yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m., the Quincy High School boys' soccer team next match is Saturday at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium against rival North Quincy.

The Presidents, led by senior co-captains Bard Hajrizaj, Jim Sullivan, Tony Monaco and Scott Staiti, return a number of players from last year's squad, including seniors Bruno Diaz, Ozgar Berk, Joe Vallatini, Marc Garthwait, Gerald Valdez, Ageyman Kusi, Carlos Coral and Jamie Viera, along with three seniors in their first varsity season: Sajid Alam, Stephan Allsop and Chris Cullen.

Returning juniors are Louis Barbosa, Mark Dunn and Phil Leth, joined by newcomers Aleksey Berezyuk and Sergio Ordenez, both juniors. Also new to the team is freshman Andrew Smith.

"I think we'll have a good, solid team," said Quincy head coach Ray Papile. "We have a lot of returning players with some good skills at certain positions. We're playing better as a team, a more cohesive unit. I think we'll be a competitive team and surprise some people."

In a 5-1 loss to host Falmouth last Friday, Quincy trailed by a goal at the half but the Clippers pulled away in the second stanza.

Falmouth jumped ahead 2-0 before Sullivan scored an unassisted goal to cut the lead in half heading into the break. Quincy had a golden opportunity to tie the game 30 seconds into the second half, but a rebound attempt hit the post and Falmouth held onto its lead.

In other action, the Presidents played a strong game and came away with a 3-3 tie against visiting Barnstable on Sept. 18. The Red Raiders scored early, but Quincy soon tied it up on an unassisted goal by Vallatini just 5:50 into the match.

Barnstable re-took the lead with a goal at the 18-minute mark, but the Presidents rallied again on a goal by Hajrizaj on a rebound.

Goalkeeper Eaton Shines For Presidents In Setbacks starting goalkeeper Kerry Eaton made 19 solid saves in a 7-1 setback to visiting Falmouth last Thursday.

"Many opportunities happened for us," said Quincy head coach Robin Welinsky, "but we just didn't execute them."

Last Tuesday, the Presidents turned in a strong effort despite losing to league-leading Silver Lake, 8-0. Eaton made 38 saves in the setback and earned the praise of her coach.

Welinsky also commended the play of starting right wing Pam Sullivan, senior defender Kelly Raymer and senior co-captains Leanne Martin and Julie Gibbons.

"Leanne and Julie are two others who have been doing a great job. They know how to lead on and off the field. I am expecting great things from them the rest of the season."

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

"Life is sweet because of the friends we have made . . . And the things which in common we share . . . We want to live on, not because of ourselves . . . But because of the ones who would care . . . It's living and doing for someone else . . . On that all of life's splendor depends . . . And the joy of it all, when we count it all up, . . . is found in the making of friends." . . . Anonymous

It has been said that a man who has the gift of making friends is a very blessed person. It is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things, but, above all, the power of going out of one's self, and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another person.

We like Norman Vincent Peale's description of a friend: "A true friend knows when you need a word of affection and encouragement and knows just how to say it. He is one of those wonderfully thoughtful people who is sensitive, or tuned in, to the hearts and minds of others. He has that fine sense of timing which enables him to say the word of comfort and strengthening just when needed."

Your Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You and a higher-up may not be on the same wave length this week. Talks bog down over minute points. There's a tendency to go overboard if partying this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Reaching agreements about financial interests may be difficult early in the week. There's a tendency to let some things slide on the job. You're entering a period, though, of mental achievement.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Feelings and thoughts could be at odds this week, particularly in romance. Someone promises more than he or she can deliver. You'll be busy with some mental interests in the coming weeks.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Once more, extravagant spending is a temptation. Still, you may find something you like in a mail order catalog. Be less critical of a family member who's touchy over the weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You'll be getting a new incentive to achieve in the coming weeks. Expect to be immersed in your work then. A small disagreement could occur about money this week.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A partnership interest becomes more important to you in the next few weeks. Right now, you could get stuck on a detail at work. You'll enjoy a family outing during the weekend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You'll be meeting with an accountant or financial adviser. Your desire to have things precise sometimes can make you a pain in the neck. Be adaptable now.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You may be upset with a child's spending habits. To get along with others this week, be less critical. Do some comparison shopping regarding a prospective course of study.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You may not accomplish as much as you'd like this week on the job. You could get bogged down in details. Be sure to follow through on commitments made to others.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You'll be participating more in a group activity in the next few weeks. Either you or a close friend tends to exaggerate if out shopping. A contractual talk could break down this week.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Getting involved with a friend financially is not a wise idea. Some you deal with later in the week have a tendency to exaggerate. You're ready to begin a research project.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You may not see eye to eye with an adviser this week. Guard against unwise expansion at home. You're entering a period when you'll be holding important business discussions.

State May Reconsider Juvenile Court Site

plan, he was told certain parking requirements would be met and $2 million in improvements would be made to the property, which he described as "a blight."

"The big thing down there is parking," he said. "We would need adequate parking would be provided. That hasn't happened."

There are now only about 20 parking spots on-site, he added, and those would be used for judges and other court officials, leaving no space for attorneys and others using the facility.

On the subject of the property improvements he said were proposed, McDermott said, "I'm not confident that's going to happen. There's no guarantee they're going to do that. There's nothing in writing."

"The bottom line is, if things were on the up and up, it would have been done by now. I think that the city was misled from the get-go."

McDermott said the fact there is no specific zoning for a courthouse also troubles him. In addition, a number of local residents have voiced concerns about the project, he said.

McDermott said because the state project would involve a lease agreement, the current owner of the property, Reuben A. Grossman Realty, is responsible for keeping the promises he said were made regarding parking requirements and building improvements.

Tom Grossman of Grossman Realty could not be reached for comment.

In addition to McDermott, the plan faces opposition from Sheets, who has been against the plan from day one and told The Sun last month he still feels it does not fit in with the city's plans for the downtown. And last week, McDermott was joined by McCauley, Council on Aging Director Brian Buckley, and about 120 residents in voicing opposition during a meeting at the Hancock Parking Living Facility next door to the proposed courthouse site.

Quincy Director of Inspection Services Walter White has told The Sun a representative of the building owner must appear before the Zoning Board of Appeals because the site is not zoned for such a use. The project contractor and architect, respectively, are the Brookline-based Kaplan Corp. and Moerser & Associates of Harvard, Mass.

McDermott said he favors the project going before the Zoning Board because he wants there to be a public process before any approval is granted.

White said if the Zoning Board approves the project and all requirements are met, he likely will grant a requested demolition permit that would allow the projects to "gut the interior partitions" at the site. The project would include two holding cells, two courtrooms, office space and jury space, he said.

However, if the Zoning Board and White reject the project for some reason, Grossman could seek a state permit to circumvent Quincy's appeals process.

McDermott said if that happens, the city would take Grossman to court to assert its right to block the project.

The Juvenile Court plan initially was proposed by the state Division of Capital Planning and Operations last summer. The Juvenile Court is being separated from the Trial Court as mandated in a 1992 court reform bill.

Officials have said both criminal and civil cases that currently take place in Quincy District Court would be heard in the Juvenile Court's new home.

Quincy District Court's Juvenile Court cases come from Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton, Randolph, Holbrook and Cohasset.

Joint Committee Backs 'Date Rape' Drugs Bill

Rep. Stephen Tobin announces the enactment of a new law in Massachusetts, creating the crime of drug-induced rape and kidnapping.

The bill was reported favorably from the Joint Committee on Criminal Justice.

The measure addresses the serious public safety danger of so-called "ruffles" and other drugs that create memory loss and allow a criminal to rape or kidnap without the victim having memory of attack.

Tobin, the Committee House Chairman said, "it was necessary for the Legislature to derail the increasing popularity of this drug in Massachusetts before we face the type of crisis situation we have seen in certain southern states."

The bill was filed by Rep. Robert Fennell (D-Lynn), in response to the rising number of incidents involving the use of "date rape drugs."

The new law criminalizes the use of a list of drugs used to perpetuate such crimes. A person who drugs someone and kidnaps them is punishable for any term of years, but not less than 10 years. If the intent is to extort money by kidnapping a drug-induced person, the kidnapper is punishable for any term of years, but not less than 15 years. Drug-induced rape is punishable for any term of years, but not less than 10 years.

"These drugs have no legitimate application. They are only available for criminal purposes, and therefore possession is very serious and should be punished accordingly," said Tobin.

Sheets Maintains Post Is Needed

McCauley Explains Stand On Coordinator Position

Councillor Francis McCauley, who cast one of two City Council votes opposing the creation of a new $48,000 city position for a special events coordinator, has offered the following reasons for his opposition following Monday night's council meeting:

"At the very best, this position would be a low-level clerical position, the responsibilities of which would be to maintain a calendar of events in order to avoid conflicts in schedules.

To create a $48,000 position to deal with this situation would be a case of extreme overkill.

"The city's Celebration Expense Account has increased from $24,500 in Fiscal Year 1992 to an expenditure of approximately $134,700 in FY 1998, an increase of $110,200 or 450 percent. The creation of this new $48,000 position will push up the cost of city celebrations to $165,500, an increase of $141,000 annually, or 575 percent in the short period of seven years."

McCauley also noted the fringe benefits for health insurance and retirement will drive the cost even higher.

"I see no reason, considering the generous raises awarded recently to some members of the mayoral office staff for their added responsibilities, that this scheduling could not be done 'in house,'" he said.

The City Council voted 7-2 Monday night to create the new position. Councillor Paul Harold was the only other councillor who said he feels the position is not necessary.

However, Mayor James Sheets, who proposed the position, maintains there is a real need for the coordinator. He said Tuesday there are many more events held in the city today than there were in Fiscal Year 1992.

"I have never submitted a position to the City Council that was not needed, and if this position wasn't needed, I wouldn't have submitted it," said Sheets.

$40,000 Appropriated For Squantum School Playground

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Wendell Moses Playground behind the Squantum School will receive new equipment in the near future following a unanimous $40,000 appropriation by the City Council.

The money for the Quincy Park Department was taken Monday night from the city's current expenses account and will be charged to the revenue of Fiscal Year 1999.

Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park Department, told councillors the appropriation was necessary because of an injury to a young child that occurred on the current playground equipment last month. A young boy broke a vertebrae while using the equipment, which includes swings, climbing apparatus and more, he said.

Local residents raised over $35,000 for, donated, and installed the playground equipment about eight years ago, Koch added. However, it now poses a safety hazard and must be replaced by the Park Department, he said.

Councillor Timothy Cahill read a letter from Mayor James Sheets that expressed regret about the incident and noted that it was the donation of the Squantum equipment that led to the city upgrading equipment at other Quincy playgrounds.

Councillor Francis McCauley commended Koch for moving so quickly after the incident to correct the problem.

"I think you took the appropriate action," said McCauley.

Koch said the $40,000 will be used to pay for "state-of-the-art modern equipment." While it is hoped the equipment can be installed before the first frost hits, it will be done no later than next spring, he said.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, whose ward includes Squantum, called the appropriation "urgent funding" for what he termed "a liability issue."

"I'd like to get the ball rolling on this," he said.

Earlier on Monday, Mayor James Sheets received a letter signed by nine Squantum residents requesting an appropriation of "no less than $40,000" for the replacement of the playground equipment.

No Council Meetings On Jewish Holidays

The City Council unanimously passed a resolution Monday night stating that no future council meetings will be held on Yom Kippur or Rosh Hashana.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi introduced the resolution at a meeting two weeks ago, saying the council should show the proper respect to Quincy's Jewish community by not meeting at those times.

LUPUS

Systemic Lupus Erythematosus (SLE) is a chronic, lifelong, potentially fatal autoimmune disease. Simply put, that means the body's immune system turns on itself. While lupus is not a rare disorder, it is often hard to diagnose because the symptoms may be diffuse, in early stages being mistaken for mononucleosis or other diseases. Though lupus can strike from infancy to old age, it chiefly affects women of child-bearing age. This disease is characterized by flare-ups and periods of remission during which the joints, skin, kidneys, brain, serosa, lungs, heart and gastrointestinal tract may be affected. The cause of Lupus remains unknown, but there is likely a genetic predisposition, possibly triggered by sex hormones and environmental factors. Chronic diseases are a challenge for all, but having confidence that you are receiving top-notch medical care can do much to ease one's distress. ALAFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. P.S. The Lupus Foundation of America suggests that as many as 2 million Americans may currently suffer with lupus.

The Misconduct And The Lies

I'm sure you have an opinion on the Bill Clinton-Monica Lewinsky sex scandal still playing in Washington.

I have a few thoughts of my own, writing this just 50 yards or so from the final resting place of two nonsense presidents, John and John Quincy Adams.

Regardless of how you slice Kenneth Starr's report on the president's escapades, one thing is certain.

We have a liar in the White House.

Oh, I'm sure we have had a few there before. But probably not as good.

Anyone who can dance around the definition of sex and split legal hairs over what the words "is" and "alone" mean, has got to be pretty good at sidestepping the truth.

In fairness to the president, however, it remains to be seen if Starr's allegations of perjury, obstruction of justice, abuse of power of office, cover-up, etc. hold up under scrutiny.

But whether they do or don't, we still have a president who messed around in the White House with an intern not much older than his daughter and then tried to lie his way out of it.

Regardless of what comes of the allegations in Starr's report, the misconduct and lie aren't going to go away.

Not as long as there are videotapes and a TV set to watch them on.

On Jan. 26, Clinton appeared on television, wagged his finger in our faces as though lecturing us and lied: "I want you to listen to me. I'm going to say this again. I did not have sexual relations with that woman—Miss Lewinsky."

But after seven months of more staunch denials, he finally admitted on Aug. 17: "Indeed, I did have a relationship with Miss Lewinsky that was not appropriate. In fact, it was wrong."

The president has a track record for and seemingly a natural talent for pretzel-bending the truth.

In such matters, for example, as smoking marijuana, dodging the draft, running for president the year after he promised Arkansas voters he would complete his four-year term if elected governor. And then, of course, the Gennifer Flowers affair.

A president who lies—or is it just fibs as some defenders call it—doesn't seem to bother a lot of people. Neither does a president, as the top executive, using an intern, a subordinate, as a sex object. He would be fired in the private sector for those actions.

It doesn't seem to bother feminists like Patricia Ireland, president of NOW, who apparently thinks it's more important that Clinton champions their causes than how he privately behaves with women.

If Clinton was a Republican president I wonder what and how loudly, we would be hearing from them.

Maybe I'm a little prejudiced on this point. As the father of four daughters and the grandfather of five granddaughters, I resent this president's behavior. In my book, he degrades women and the office of the presidency.

The first newspaper cartoon, a political caricature, appeared in a Washington paper, the Federal Republican, early in 1814.

Sadly, one of those granddaughters came home from kindergarten the other day and told her mother, "Mommy, the president is in trouble."

"Why do you say that?" her mother asked. "Because," she replied, "he did something bad."

The kids had been talking about it on the school bus.

So the story has filtered down to that young age level and many will blame the news media because of all the coverage. But not the man who "did something bad."

The fact Clinton's popularity remains high, if the opinion polls are correct, should concern if not frighten us.

Dollar values seem to be more important these days than moral values. Integrity and character are going out of style. It is what's in the wallet and not the heart and soul that counts. The economy is good, don't rock the boat.

By those standards, as long as the stock market doesn't tumble, Clinton won't either.

Question: Is this country in moral decay? It seems to be heading that way.

There are those who would have you believe the country will fall apart if Clinton is forced out of office.

Well, no man is indispensable. And no crisis insurmountable. We survived the Civil War, the depression, World War II, the assassinations of Abraham Lincoln and John F. Kennedy.

We would, somehow I'm sure, manage with or without Clinton.

There are those who would have the president censured instead of face an impeachment inquiry and possible trial in the Senate. It would, they argue, spare the nation an ordeal and irreparable harm.

Others see censure as a mere slap on the wrist. If you want the country spared from an impeachment ordeal, Clinton should resign, they feel. He's the one who started it all.

The allegations are serious. If there is no resignation, they should be aired by Congress which, as the legislative branch, is the balance check on the executive branch.

And, it shouldn't be done at the express check-out counter. It should be done thoroughly, completely and impartially.

If the air isn't cleared once and for all we will all be sentenced to a remaining lifetime of spins and counter-spins out of Washington.

Spare us the likes of spin doctors like James Carville. Every time he pops up on TV talk shows I have the same reaction: Someone let him out of his cage again.

Let's get all the facts—without spin—through the impeachment process as the Constitution provides.

And then put this sorry and sordid chapter in American history behind us once and for all. And, move on.

Clinton may very well weather the storm, legally and politically, and finish out his term. But morally, he will stand guilty.

And if he does finish out his term will you believe him — or wonder — if he again wags his finger and says, "Listen to me!"

Concourse Advisory Committee Meeting Oct. 22

The Citizens Advisory Committee for the Quincy Center Concourse will meet Thursday, Oct. 22 at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor conference room, City Hall annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS early 1960's POSTCARD shows the First Parish Church in Quincy Square when you could still see the clocks on its tower. Built one hundred and seventy years ago, in 1828, this is one of the oldest Quincy granite buildings in the city. The columns came from Rattlesnake Quarry that is now the site of the Home Depot in West Quincy. On the left, the bargain Center occupied the old W.G. Shaw furniture store buildings. That is now the site of Presidents Place.

No Saints In Lewinsky Drama

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Constantine the Great was the first Roman Emperor known to have been converted to Christianity. In the year of the Lord 313 A.D. by the Edict of Milan, he recognized Christianity as an equal religion to all others. He himself was a very devout Christian.

Not very long after the Edict of Milan, a number of Christian bishops complained to the Emperor that one of their brother bishops was a womanizer. The bishops requested imperial intervention and punishment. To all the numerous episcopal accusations the Emperor had only one reply: "If I saw a bishop sinning, I would take off my toga (the outer Roman garment) and cover him with it, so that nobody could see his sins."

That is but a glimpse of an Emperor, Emperor Constantine the Great, whom the church proclaimed a saint.

Who in the Lewinsky drama would qualify for sainthood?

Draining The Quarries Is Not A Solution

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I hope to God there's a solution/remedy between the groups for and against draining the Quincy quarries.

My sympathy and prayers to the families and friends who have lost a loved one at the quarries. But, forgive me, the draining of the quarries and the resulting pollution and the disturbance of natural habitats at Black's Creek and other areas is not a solution; solving one problem and creating another, maybe bigger, problem is not a remedy.

I don't have an answer, but there has to be one that satisfies both sides, for nature's sake and our sake.

Quincy ArtsFest Was An 'Important Cultural Event'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I know the thousands of people who chose to attend the Quincy ArtsFest '98 held at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex Sept. 18-20 realize what an exciting event it was, and I am writing to express my pride at having been a participant.

The Quincy Art Association has been active for 35 years and since retiring I have joined these dedicated, talented artists who have long encouraged participation in the visual arts, been an inspiration to the children of the community, and now have had the opportunity to present Quincy with a truly professional showing of the variety of talents in our community. The parents and teachers who encouraged their young ones to participate are to be commended.

There was something to catch everyone's fancy as was evident by the variety of painted mediums and the photography. Art is defined as "human effort to imitate nature." Surely, this was true as Mother Nature presented glorious late summer days for our charming and historic city to display these "human works of beauty." The staff of the Park and Recreation Department complimented the art with a dazzling display of seasonal flowers, refreshments and a variety of musical entertainment throughout the day.

This was an important cultural event that the people of Quincy deserve and which has been long overdue. It is my hope that the City of Quincy, its citizens and the corporate sponsors will continue to support the arts so this will be an annual event to be enjoyed by all for years to come. Congratulations Quincy Art Association!

Police Train With Machine Guns

By PAUL HAROLD

Police Chief Joseph Hughes ordered that the police began being trained in the use of sub-machine guns, for the first time in eight years.

Hughes said he was not anticipating an immediate influx of gangsters into the city, but thought it was time to make use of the department's five guns. Hughes said the guns would no longer be mere wall ornaments.

Since his appointment in August, Hughes had gradually made a number of changes in the department's operations.

SHEDD MEMORIAL TO BE MOVED TO ROTARY
It was announced this week that the Shedd Memorial on Palmer St. would be moved to the center of a new traffic rotary being construction in conjunction with the Snug Harbor housing project.

The miniature lighthouse monument honored one of the city's earliest settlers, Daniel Shed (spelled with one d) who settled on the peninsula around 1639. Since his was the first house in the area, Germantown used to be known as Shedd's Neck.

In 1658 he moved to the frontier town of Billerica (Mass.), but still had eighth and ninth generations of descendants living on the South Shore.

CITY COUNCIL TO INVESTIGATE DOG POUND CONSTRUCTION

The City Council's Ordinance Committee scheduled a special meeting to get an answer to the question being asked across the city, "Who authorized the construction of the $1,500 dog pound?"

City Treasurer Leo Mullin held up payment for the work because there was no contract for the job.

Mayor Charles Ross said, "No use asking me to shed any light on the matter. I was undergoing an operation at the city hospital at the time it happened."

Among those scheduled to appear before the council's committee were City Clerk Hattiemay Thomas, Purchasing Agent Orrie Williams, and Solicitor John Flavin.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Sue's Seafood Deluxe

When our daughter Suzy asked us to baby-sit at around dinner time for a couple of hours she said she would cook dinner for us. Needless to say, the prospect of not having to cook for a change enticed me.

Although I told her to make something simple, plus the fact that she and her husband Anthony were having dinner out, she still prepared a delicious stuffed haddock in about 30 minutes!

The entree is practically fat free because she used chicken broth in the stuffing instead of the usual melted butter.

Sue's Seafood Deluxe

1 pound and half of haddock (or scrod)
2 waxed pkg reduced fat Ritz crackers (crushed with rolling pin.)
half can of chicken broth

smidgen of garlic powder
1 small can crab meat (drained) juice of half lemon
1 small onion
1/4 cup chopped parsley
2 tablespoons olive oil, plus a little margarine
1/4 cup white wine (optional)

In the hot oil and margarine, add the parsley, chopped, onion and garlic powder. Add the Ritz crumbs and the crab meat, the lemon juice and the wine. Turn off stove and blend. Season the fish with salt, pepper and a little lemon juice.

Place the stuffing on top of fish. Dot with margarine or butter, cover with foil and bake in a 375 degree oven for 20 minutes. Sue served this with mashed potatoes and fresh mixed vegetables. A gourmet meal!

Council OKs Pay Hike For Election Workers

Quincy's election workers will receive a raise that takes effect in time for November's state election.

The City Council voted unanimously Monday night to appropriate $14,100 from the city's personal services account for the pay hike. The workers' wages will increase from $6 to $8 an hour.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, chairman of the council's Finance Committee, voiced support of the pay increase proposed two weeks ago by Councillor Paul Harold.

"I think these people are overworked and underpaid," said Cahill. "This will bring them more in line with what others in the state are getting."

Harold called for the increase at the council's last meeting. He said the city's 210 election workers earn about $90 per election, while the statewide average is about $125.

PAST AND PRESENT city councillors were on hand for the dedication of Leo J. Kelly Park in Houghs Neck. $8.7M Contract Awarded For Braintree Dam Reconstruction

The Old Quincy Reservoir Dam in Braintree will be reconstructed under the terms of an $8,796,150 contract recently awarded by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The work, which will be accomplished by D&C Contracting Co. Inc. of Rockland, will begin in early November and take about two years to complete.

D&C Contracting submitted the lower of 13 bids which ranged as high as $12.6 million. The government estimated the reconstruction would cost $7.9 million.

The contract calls for installing a 3-foot by 5-foot box culvert under Howie Road, directly downstream of the dam, and removing the existing dam's earthen embankment, portions of the dam's concrete core wall, and the existing concrete outlet works. The dam embankment would then be reconstructed, and a new outlet works and spillway structure would be built. Once completed, the dam and dike will provide protection against the 100-year flood event and bring the dam up to required safety standards.

The dam reconstruction is the final phase of the three-phase Town Brook Local Protection Project in Quincy and Braintree which was authorized by the Water Resources Department Act of 1986.

The $3.3 million first phase included channel work and new culverts at the downstream end of Town Brook under Southern Artery in Quincy. The second phase, built at a cost of $22 million, involved construction of a 12-foot-diameter tunnel under the business district in Quincy.

All work will be accomplished under the supervision of an Army Corps of Engineers inspector to assure compliance with contract requirements.

Locke To Open Quincy Campaign Headquarters

The Committee to Elect District Attorney Jeffrey A. Locke will hold an open house Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at its new campaign headquarters at 7 Cottage St., Quincy.

Locke will be in at headquarters to talk with any interested residents.

Locke is running for office based on the theme "It's not about politics." He is in his 18th year as a prosecutor. He began his legal career as a student prosecutor for the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office in 1979, trying his first criminal case in Quincy District Court.

CABLE HOOKUP

One experience with a dead a spark. The safety of our customers battery teaches that a set of battery cables is a great investment. After that, all that is needed is a live battery found under the hood of another vehicle. Jump-starting a dead battery requires careful attention during cable hookup. First, connect the red cable between the positive terminals of both batteries. Then, connect the black cable to the negative terminal of the live battery and to a good metal ground point (such as a 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree bracket mounted to the engine block) in the engine compartment. Place Where Your Car Can Live merit of the car with the dead battery. This helps avoid the potential of lighting any flammable gas that may be in the vicinity of the dead battery with

Crime Watch

How To Protect Your Neighborhood Neighborhood Watch

WHAT YOU CAN DO AS A NEIGHBORHOOD WATCH PARTICIPANT:

* Silent Observer: Some people fight crime as "Silent Observers." In many communities, police train senior citizens, shut-ins, housewives, and other neighborhood people to watch for and report suspicious events in their neighborhoods. Observers may report by number rather than by name to protect their identities.

In Battle Creek, Michigan, Silent Observers have anonymously reported crime and received cash awards for valuable information for many years.

The New York City Police Department reports that 13,000 volunteers have enrolled in its civilian motor patrol. While on their regular jobs as taxi drivers, delivery or sanitation drivers, they keep on the look-out for criminal activities. And police officials claim that more than 300 arrests were made in just one year thanks to reports by these concerned citizens.

Many apartment dwellers have formed tenant patrols to help prevent crime. The New York City Housing Authority has 13,000 volunteers patrolling 700 of its buildings. Tenants take turns screening visitors and walking halls. These groups meet occasionally to discuss security and learn more about crime prevention. Many Neighborhood Watch groups offer escort services to residents who fear going out alone.

Whether or not you join an organized group, you and your neighbors can make crime prevention part of your daily routines, just by watching out for each other. Remember, though, your job is to REPORT suspicious activities to the police. It's OUR job to handle the crooks.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR:

Two men are selling watches and portable radios "dirt cheap" out of a station wagon parked near your place of business.

You see a stranger hanging around the playground offering candy to children.

A stranger in the neighborhood knocks on the front doors, then walks around the back of the home.

Your neighbors are on vacation, but there's a window open on the first floor.

There's an abandoned car in an alley.

Someone is running down your street with a stuffed pillow case, a suitcase, a TV or radio.

You are awakened late at night by a loud scream and dogs barking.

Sometimes the signs of a crime are obvious, sometimes they're not. Trust your eyes, your ears, and your common sense. Anything unusual may point to a crime.

WHAT TO REPORT:

What happened? When? Was anyone injured? What did the suspect look like? Describe suspects as carefully as you can, noting unusual features such as scars or tattoos. Was a car involved? Were there any passengers in the car? Also describe the car, noting color make and any unusual features, dents, broken lights, bumper stickers, loud exhaust. If possible, get the license plate number.

Remember: No detail is too trivial!

E911 System To Begin Operating By December

The city's Enhanced 911 (E911) telephone system will be operating by the end of the year.

Quincy Data Processing Director Charles Phelan told the City Council on Monday night that the system will be operating "by December at the latest."

Because the Quincy Fire Department will be part of the E911 system, it likely will be the safest of its kind in the state, Phelan noted.

Phelan also has said that the system, designed by SESCO of Hingham, will cost Quincy about $14,000 to operate.

Quincy is the only community in Massachusetts that has received permission from the state Legislature to install a second E911 site. That was granted after the city filed a home-rule petition as part of the request.

No other community in the state currently operates a dual E911 system. Under the statewide system, all 911 calls in every community go only to police departments.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and other members of his department have said the extra monitoring by firefighters should provide extra protection against misdirected emergency response.

The dual system will allow the fire department to dispatch some calls, including medical emergencies and fires, without first having the call transferred from the police department.

command a salary of $48,000 a year, but the coordinator will receive $36,000 for Fiscal Year 1999, which began July 1, because he or she will not start work until Nov. 1.

Sheets said the person hired will coordinate annual Quincy festivities such as the Arts in the Parks program, Presidents Day Festival, Summerfest Concert Series, and others. Among the coordinator's duties will be the preparation of annual and monthly events calendars, he said.

In addition, the coordinator will be in charge of planning events for the city's upcoming millennium celebration beginning in December 1999.

The coordinator also will deal with tourism issues, including the eventual establishment of a tourism information center in the city, according to Sheets.

City Council Accepts Gifts

The City Council took the following action at its meeting Monday night:

•Accepted gifts from various donors totaling $1,185 for the Quincy Underwater Dive Team Vehicle/Command Post. Among them was a $1,000 donation from Curry Hardware.

•Accepted a gift of $16.47 from Ba X. Huynh for the Louisa Smith Fund.

surance, Legal Aspects of the Real Estate Transaction, and General Questions and Answers.

Continuing Education For Real Estate Licensees

Beginning Jan. 1, all real estate brokers and salesmen will have to complete 12 hours of Massachusetts Board of Registration approved continuing education per license renewal cycle in order to renew their license, the South Shore Association of Realtors announces.

It means that if a license was renewed anytime during 1997, on the renewal date in 1999 brokers and salesmen will need to attest to having taken the required 12 hours of continuing education units for renewal of their license.

Those who haven't done so already should begin taking the approved curriculum immediately so that they will be eligible for renewal in 1999, the association said. If a license is renewed anytime during 1998, brokers and salesmen should begin taking classes so that they will be eligible for renewal in 2000, according to the association.

Failure to complete continuing education requirements will result in the non-renewal of a license. Licensees who fail to complete the continuing education requirement will be notified that their license has been placed on inactive status. Licensees placed on inactive status are considered unlicensed and may not work as real estate brokers or salesmen.

Volunteers Needed For Kids Voting Program

Approximately 400 volunteers are needed to help Kid Voters cast their ballots at the polls in Quincy for the state election on Tuesday, Nov. 3.

This is the fourth year in which students in Quincy's public and parochial schools will be going to the polls with their parents to cast their ballots in the Kids Voting program. Last year, over 3,300 Quincy students made their choices known in Quincy's city election.

Kids Voting is a non-profit, grassroots education program that gives young people actual experience in the election process by casting ballots alongside their parents in a real election.

Volunteers are needed to staff the 30 Kids Voting polling places in various shifts between 10:45 a.m. and 8 p.m. The volunteers will help the students to cast ballots at the same polling places that their parents will be casting theirs. Volunteers are asked to commit as little as two hours of their time.

Here's how it works: Each precinct in the city has an area set aside for students to mark their Kids Voting ballot. Since the regular election workers are busy tending to the parents and adults are voting, Kids Voting needs volunteers to help students cast their votes while not interfering with the adult voters.

Volunteers follow the same check-in, vote, check-out procedures as adult voters. The Kid Voters will indicate their choices for U.S. Representative, state offices, and county offices using ballots especially prepared for Kid Voters. Their ballots will be tallied separately and the results of the Kid Voting election will be announced following the adult results.

At least 10 volunteers are needed at each of the city's 30 polling precincts which will be open to Kid Voters from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Volunteers will serve on two-hour shifts throughout the day. Kids Voting Massachusetts/Quincy will furnish the instructions and are necessary materials.

Businesses and organizations are invited to "adopt" a precinct with a commitment to see that the precinct is staffed by at least three volunteers per shift throughout the day.

Those wishing to volunteer to help Kids Voting on Election Day are asked to complete and return the form on this page. Or they can call Kids Voting Quincy Project Coordinator Harold Crowley at 617-471-6881.

"The Kids Voting program provides an ideal opportunity for community-minded citizen volunteers to make a real difference in the lives of Quincy's young

NQ Hosts Barnstable Friday North's Tackling Woes Continue Vs. Falmouth

By LIAM FITZGERALD
Playing Barnstable, one of the Old Colony League's top contenders, is probably not what head coach Ken McPhee had in mind for his winless North Quincy High School football team.

Especially following North's 34-16 loss last Friday to host Falmouth, sparked by tailback Jamaal Branch's three touchdowns and 141 rushing yards.

Nevertheless, North Quincy (0-3) hosts Barnstable (2-1) Friday at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium, seeking to break into the win column.

"They're a very talented team, and there's no question it's between them and Bridgewater-Raynham in the OCL," said McPhee. "We saw them play, and they have a lot of good players who play sound football. That wide receiver (Stephan Gomes) is very good; he may be one of the best athletes in the state."

Barnstable, which returns 10 starters from last year's 8-3 squad, is coming off its first setback, 33-24, last Friday to New Bedford. Barnstable's Gomes scored two touchdowns on passes from quarterback Mark

FOOTBALL

Shedlock and tailback Mike Broughton raced 65 yards for another score.

In the setback to Falmouth, North fell behind 14-0 after the first quarter and could not recover. Branch scored on runs of three and four yards to provide the Clippers with an early lead. Falmouth added two more scores in the second quarter, including a 67-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Hunter Greeley to tight end Joe Laudano.

As has been the case in previous games, North had problems wrapping up Falmouth ballcarriers, which led to long gains and subsequent touchdowns.

"We didn't tackle well, and that's been our problem all year," said McPhee. "Branch is good, but we could have brought him down for a lot less yardage."

"Also, our offense didn't sustain anything and (quarterback Chris) Bregoli was hit every time he threw the ball. We have a lot of work to do. All we can do is keep working hard and it'll come around."

The Red Raiders got on the board later in the second quarter on a two-yard dive by fullback Brian Deputa. Bregoli passed to wide receiver Jody Bravo for the two-point conversion, trimming Falmouth's lead to 27-8 at halftime.

In the third quarter, Branch struck again, this time on a 39-yard scoring run. North tailback Sean Adams ran for a six-yard touchdown in the final quarter, followed by another Bregoli pass to Bravo for the two-point conversion.

When Bregoli was able to throw the ball, his main targets were Bravo (10 catches) and tight end Frank McNamara (eight catches).

"Chris must have thrown the ball 35 to 40 times," said McPhee. "Jody was exceptional and Frank made some plays, too."

"Since we fell behind big so early, we had no choice but to throw, and Falmouth blitzed us a number of times. Chris did a good job despite the pressure, but the deficit was just too big to come back from."

Soccer Clinics Oct. 17 At Quincy Harvest Festival

John Smith, former New England Patriots place-kicker and soccer instructor will conduct free soccer clinics in Quincy Saturday, Oct. 17.

The clinics will be held by Smith and members of his soccer school staff during the annual Family Harvest Festival on Hancock St. from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The festival and soccer clinics are sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

The clinics are open to Quincy and South Shore youth soccer league players and others on a first come, first serve basis throughout the day.

The clinics are designed to improve shooting, dribbling, juggling and passing skills and will also feature mini one-on-one competition according to age.

Smith has conducted soccer camps and clinics in Massachusetts for the past 28 years, teaching thousands of players and coaches and starting youth soccer programs in many communities.

Smith, who became one of the top place-kickers in the National Football League, came to the U.S. in 1970 as a soccer coach.

Born and educated in England, he turned down offers to play professional soccer there at age 16 to continue his educational goals and to gain teaching experience.

The Patriots invited him to try out as a field goal kicker in 1973. With the Patriots from 1973 to 1983, he had an 81 percent completion average inside 40 yards.

He was the only NFL place-kicker who did not miss an extra point in 1975, 1977 and 1979 and was voted an All-Pro for the 1980 season.

Smith was a soccer analyst for WBZ-TV for the New England Tea Men games in the NASL in 1978 and 1979. He was instrumental in organizing the World Cup campaign for Boston and also was a soccer analyst for Channel 5.

In case of rain the festival and clinics will be held Saturday, Oct. 24. For more information, call the OCPBA office at (617) 471-3232.

Unbeaten Apaches, Mustangs Square Off Sunday At Milton

Through three weeks of the Quincy Youth Football League season, three teams sport 3-0 records: the North Quincy Apaches, Milton Mustangs and the Houghs Neck Manets.

Sunday at Pierce Field in Milton, the Apaches and Mustangs will do battle at 2:30 p.m., following the first game between the Quincy Point Panthers (0-3) and West Quincy Elks (0-3) at 1 p.m. In the final game at 4 p.m., the Manets take on the Squantum Storm (0-3).

In recent action, two touchdowns apiece by running backs Ryan Farnham and James Coughlin propelled the Apaches to a 30-8 triumph over the Elks.

Farnham's first touchdown, a 55-yard run early in the second quarter, broke a scoreless tie. Later in the quarter, Farnham raced 70 yards for another score. Apache quarterback Kevin Holleran tossed to Dave Buttimer for the two-point conversion and a 14-0 lead. The Elks threatened with a drive deep into Apache territory, but time ran out in the half.

Farnham returned the second half kickoff to the Elks' 35-yard line, which led to a two-yard touchdown run by Coughlin. Holleran again connected with Buttimer on the conversion for a 22-0 lead. In the fourth, Coughlin raced 75 yards for another score and Pat O'Donnell ran the ball for the conversion, increasing the lead to 30-0. The Elks got on the board when Anthony Boile scored a touchdown and the two-point conversion to close out the scoring.

Leading the Apaches defensively were Farnham, Coughlin, Holleran, Buttimer, Steve Farrell, Matt Francis, Kenny Tasney, Jonathan Carroll, Brendan Craig, Chris Traetti and Bernie Stedman. Strong efforts on the offensive line came from John Zerigian, Chris Marinelli and Tim Chiacchio.

In other action, the Mustangs defeated the Panthers, 22-12, despite a solid effort from Panther running back Ryan Greene (110 yards, one touchdown). Greene also had a 70-yard touchdown nullified by penalty.

The Panthers kept it close in the first half, trailing 8-6, but suffered a defensive breakdown on the line of scrimmage in the second half.

Panther QB Kevin O'Connell turned in a sparkling performance, completing 8 of 14 passes for 101 yards. One pass was a 45-yard touchdown reception by Mark Darois, his fourth catch of the game. Also playing well were Andrew Picard, Matt Ramponi and Anthony Sandonato.

In other action, the Manets defeated the Storm.

Presidents Visit Falmouth Friday Clippers' Branch & Co. Pose Threat To Quincy

For the second consecutive week, Quincy High School's football team has the unenviable task of facing another talented Old Colony League tailback.

Last Friday, it was Bridgewater-Raynham back Doug Bessette (12 carries, 89 yards) who scored two touchdowns in the Trojans' 41-0 triumph over host Quincy. Bessette, who did not carry the ball in the second half, also rushed for one two-point conversion.

This Friday, the Presidents (0-3) look to contain explosive Falmouth senior Jamaal Branch when Quincy visits the Clippers (1-2) for a 7 p.m. tilt. Through three games, Branch has scored six touchdowns, including two in Falmouth's 34-16 victory last Friday over North Quincy. In that game, Branch amassed 141 rushing yards on 15 carries as Falmouth compiled 323 yards of total offense.

"No doubt Branch is a very talented back, but they have also have a veteran quarterback (Hunter Greeley) and that tight end (Joe) Laudano is a hell of a player," said Quincy head coach Peter Chella. "They're the nucleus: three outstanding, experienced players who can deliver. We have to watch them."

On the defensive side, Chella cited Falmouth's penchant for blitzing, which could wreak havoc with Quincy's inexperienced offense.

"They like to blitz a lot and cause confusion for offenses, something we as a young team might not be able to handle," said Chella. "We have to work on that and get the offense under control. We have to execute our game plan on offense and defense, put some points on the board and some pressure on them."

Following the setback to B-R, Chella said big plays by the Trojans turned the tide and prevented the hosts from maintaining any momentum.

"Our goal was to contain Bessette, and to a degree, we did," he said. "But playing against a good back can't take your attention away from other responsibilities, including not getting beat deep. That happened twice in this game, both for touchdowns. We have to guard against that happening again."

The Trojans (3-0) led 6-0 after the first quarter on a 1-yard touchdown plunge by Bessette on the game's opening drive. The visitors erupted for 22 second-quarter points, starting with a 71-yard touchdown strike from quarterback Ken Lomba to Tim Lawton.

Bessette later notched his second score on an impressive 20-yard romp. An interception by Darnell Kuykendall led to a 11-yard touchdown pass from Lomba to Jon Cucinatto to close out the first half.

The Presidents, unable to move the ball against a strong B-R defense, received the opening kickoff of the second half but again were forced to punt. B-R's Cucinatto returned the kick 70 yards for his second touchdown.

An interception by B-R's Steve Woodruff led to the game's final score, a 48-yard run by Kuykendall later in the third quarter.

For the game, Quincy quarterback Dan Kelly completed 8 of 18 passes for 65 yards, and backup QB Mark Robertson was 1 for 2 for 12 yards. Despite the return of Nathan DoRosario, Quincy was held to under 40 rushing yards.

QUINCY WIDE RECEIVER Mike Lencki (89) makes a diving catch as Bridgewater-Raynham defender Doug Bessette trails the play. Bessette (two touchdowns) and the visiting Trojans handed the Presidents their third loss of the season, 41-0, last Friday.

PRESIDENTS' TAILBACK John Katsarikas (3) breaks away from a Bridgewater-Raynham tackler as teammates Sean Fitzpatrick (77) and Tom Agnew look on. Katsarikas & Co. seek their first victory Friday when the visit Falmouth for a 7 p.m. Old Colony League tilt.

NQ Girls In OCL Title Chase; North Boys Seek First Victory

The girls' cross-country team at North Quincy High School has won all three of its meets, while North's boys' team entered this week seeking its first win.

North's girls' Old Colony League championship hopes will be decided this week as the Red Raiders hosted league opponent Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday and visit Barnstable for a league meet today (Thursday) at 4 p.m.

"This week will make or break our title hopes," said North coach Geoff Hennessey. "We've done well against both teams in invitations, but they were never at full strength. I'm sure they'll throw everything they have at us."

"Bridgewater has run our course before and Barnstable's course makes Pageant Field look like a walk in the park. Our top three can tangle with anyone, and our next three are improving, but are banged up. If we're healthy we can beat almost anyone."

Last Tuesday, North's girls defeated Falmouth, 15-46, led by Lynda Wilson, who has recorded three straight wins. In the race, Wilson finished in 20:57, setting a new course record. She was followed in second through sixth by teammates Linda Nguyen (21:30), Sarah Houghton (21:31), KellyRose O'Brien (22:31), Genevieve O'Brien (22:50) and Christine Marre (23:23).

North's boys lost, 25-35, despite a first-place tie by Red Raider athletes Jeff Bartoloni and Brian Breslin. The two runners also set a new course record (17:59), but Falmouth took the next six spots and won the meet.

In a meet held on Sept. 23, North defeated Taunton, 19-42, taking the four of the top five places. Wilson (19:55) was the winner, followed by Houghton (19:57) in second, Nguyen (20:13) in fourth and Kelly-Rose O'Brien (21:32) in fifth.

The NQ boys fell to Taunton, 23-38, with Breslin (16:14) finishing second and Bartoloni (16:18) close behind in third.

At the Baystate Invitational on Sept. 20, North's girls' team placed fourth nationally in the championship division. The team of Wilson, Houghton, Nguyen, Genevieve O'Brien, Kelly-Rose O'Brien and Marre totaled 131 points. Wilson placed 17th individually.

ENC Women's Soccer Picks Up First Two Wins

The Eastern Nazarene College women's soccer team picked up its first two victories of the season and also earned a tie in recent action.

In a 3-0 victory over Lesley, ENC's goal scorers were Vanessa Fries, Amy Sue Eash and Lori Oliver, with Melissa Christmas adding an assist. Fries scored in the first half and Eash and Oliver collected insurance goals in the second half.

Goalkeeper Jody Gardner made three saves and recorded the shutout.

Eash scored ENC's lone goal midway through the first half as ENC tied Fitchburg State, 1-1. Gardner kept ENC in the game with 18 saves.

A first-half goal by Christmas was the difference as ENC shut out Lasell, 1-0. Gardner earned the shutout, making seven saves.

Once There Were Dahlias. Today, Tradition Meets Convenience.

In 1962, M. Joseph Sweeney acquired the Elcock Estate in West Quincy to better serve the residents in that growing area of the city. The circa 1863 residence was built long before the expressway.

Its previous owner, Mr. Elcock, had a green thumb and soon became known as the "Dahlia King" for his spectacular dahlias.

Today, the location is not only near the Southeast Expressway (I-93), but also the Furnace Brook Parkway. These two major arteries offer convenient access to West Quincy, Milton and Boston. Joe's son, Dennis, has recently had the location redecorated, continuing the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.

Since 1917, the staff at Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions. And as the area has grown, they've become more accessible to you.

On Quincy Shore Drive $54,000 Appropriated To Inspect Sewers, Drains

The City Council appropriated $54,900 for the Quincy Shore Drive Television Inspection Program on Monday night.

The money was transferred from the city's sewer rehabilitation fund.

The program involves the television inspection of all of the sewers and drains on Quincy Shore Drive from East Squantum Street to Fenno Street. The scope of work includes cleaning and inspection of 4,600 linear feet of sewer and 16,500 linear feet of drain.

The Television Inspection Program is part of the city's ongoing effort to improve the quality of the bathing water in Quincy Bay. The goal of the project is to identify any illicit connections to the drain system and to locate any defects in the sewer and drain pipes which could potentially allow wastewater to enter the drainage system on Quincy Shore Drive and be discharged onto Wollaston Beach.

Following the cleaning of the sewerage and drainage systems, the pipes will be inspected utilizing a closed-circuit television camera. The standard in the industry now includes color footage and the ability to rotate the camera, allowing inspection of the service connections to the main.

The end result of the program will be a video recording of both the sewerage and drainage systems in Quincy Shore Drive, and a report identifying the defects and recommending methods and cost estimate of the repairs.

Councillor Timothy Cahill noted that part of the program's goal is to make Wollaston Beach swimmable for an entire year.

"This will move us in that direction," he said.

HN Fire Station To Receive Repairs

The Houghs Neck Fire Station will be receiving some necessary renovations in the near future.

The City Council appropriated $57,500 for the work from the city's current expense account Monday night.

The list of needed repairs includes roof and gutter repairs, asbestos removal, new windows, a new kitchen, painting of the exterior trim, patching and painting of interior ceilings, pointing and sealing of exterior brick, and updating of the electrical system.

Council President Peter Kolson, whose ward includes Houghs Neck, said he looks forward to the work at the station.

"It really needs a good facelift," he said.

For Anti-Child Labor Efforts BM Students Receive Highest Award From Consumers League

Students from Broad Meadows Middle School have become the youngest-ever recipients of The Trumpeter Award, the highest award bestowed by the National Consumers League.

More than 600 government officials, activists, business leaders and labor leaders were on hand at an award ceremony last week at the Washington, D.C. Regency Hyatt Ballroom to cheer for the students accepting the award: eighth graders Alicia Cappellano and Elizabeth Bloomer, both 13, and Broad Meadows graduate Amanda Loos, 17. Also in attendance, representing the communities of adults who have supported the students, were Quincy School Supt. Eugene Creedon, Broad Meadows teacher Ron Adams and parent Roberta Bloomer.

City Starts FY With $3.5M Cash Reserve

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city has begun Fiscal Year 1999 with a "free cash" (cash reserve) surplus of nearly $3.5 million.

Mayor James Sheets, in making the announcement this week, said the money will be used for a number of projects and programs, although not every decision has been finalized.

"We're in the process of making that determination now," Sheets said when asked at press time how the free cash will be used. He said the free cash amount totals about $3,475,000.

The mayor said while he cannot yet state with certainty every planned use for the free cash, the list includes:

- $2 million or more for snow and ice removal.
- $225,000 to $250,000 for nine new police cruisers.
- $120,000 for Quincy's

after-school recreation program.

- $70,000 to $125,000 for roof repairs to the Adams Shore Library.

- $60,000 to $70,000 for seawall repairs in Houghs Neck.

- $60,000 for a trash pickup program for the city's condominium owners.

- $50,000 to $75,000 for the planting of new trees in areas throughout the city.

Sheets said new vehicles likely will be purchased for the city's inspectional services department as well, but that is one of the decisions that still needs to be finalized.

Fiscal Year 1999 began July 1, but the free cash figures were not known until this month. The revenues come from the collection of back taxes, license fees, and other revenues above what was projected for the fiscal year.

Sheets said he always has a good feeling when he receives the free cash figure because he knows the money will be used for needed city expenditures.

"It is good that we can now take care of the things we have to do," he said.

Last year, the city began Fiscal Year 1998 with a free cash surplus of $4.4 million and in Fiscal Year 1997, the figure was $5.7 million. Sheets has said in the past, however, that anything over $3 million is considered a good starting figure.

State Calls For Concourse Bids

The long-awaited and delayed Quincy Center Concourse has been flashed the go-ahead green light by the state with a call for bids for construction of the first phase.

The Massachusetts Highway Department advertised for the bids in newspapers Saturday and will open them Dec. 1, Quincy Public Works Commissioner David Colton told the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association at a membership meeting Tuesday.

Cost of the entire project has been estimated at $12 million.

Construction on the first phase of the state project should start after Jan. 1 and be completed in 12 to 15 months, according to Colton. The second phase will go out for bids as the first is being completed, he said.

Mayor James Sheets has said he wants to hold a groundbreaking ceremony for the first phase by the end of the month.

Colton told QCBPA members that the goal of the project is "to provide more capacity for the growing traffic and relieving congestion at Granite and Hancock streets and other intersections, and to better access the retail area from Burgin Parkway and Southern Artery."

"We are trying to make it easier to get in and get out of Quincy Center," he said.

The first phase of the concourse is designed to link Hancock Street and Burgin Parkway. The sec-

Quincy 2000 Workshop Spotlights:

How To Get Free Publicity For Your Business

"She opened new doors on how to get free publicity for our business," said businesswoman Barbara Varao of Clifford's Flowers.

Varao was referring to marketing expert Marcia Yudkin of Creative Ways, who gave a recent workshop at Quincy 2000 on "How to Get Free Publicity For Your Business." Varao was one of 17 entrepreneurs from 16 businesses who participated in the workshop.

According to Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino, the workshop received positive feedback.

"Because of the enthusiastic response to this second in a series of workshops, we are accelerating our plans to present seminars on issues relevant to local businesses," said Mannarino.

Upcoming workshops include "How To Control Your Business Before It Controls You" on Oct. 27 and "How To Write A Business Plan" on Nov. 18 and 19. Ann Fisher, Quincy 2000's economic development specialist, organizes the workshops.

Several business people who attended the publicity workshop were eager to implement some of the ideas that Yudkin suggested. She gave participants a tip sheet on "66 Ways to Make You or Your Business News-worthy," and tip number 10 suggests the business "do a survey."

John Black, owner of Presidential Camera, intends to do just that. At Yudkin's suggestion, he plans to ask people "if you had 10 minutes to evacuate your house because of an impending natural disaster, and you could bring with you only one photograph, what photograph would you save?" The survey may be of special interest to the media now, Yudkin said, during a time of hurricanes and tropical storms that have caused many to flee their homes.

It was just such advice that captured the enthusiasm of Caryn Smith, owner of the clothing store Caryn's Corner. Smith said the workshop "gave us the tools to get more publicity for our businesses." Yudkin suggested that entrepreneurs "offer surprising facts tied to your business" and Smith is capitalizing on that idea.

Caryn's Corner offers a line of environmentally-friendly clothing made from tree cellulose. Smith said local teachers are interested in teaching their students about that process for making clothes. Yudkin suggested Smith might want to do a brochure for teachers that Smith could distribute to school districts, and to coordinate an event around the annual Earth Day celebration.

Another way in which Yudkin helped participants was by handing out a sample press release that she had written about a product she offers. The participants could see for themselves what goes into writing a press release and what makes a press release effective.

MARCIA YUDKIN of Creative Ways offers advice to Quincy business owners at the recent workshop "How To Get Free Publicity For Your Business" at Quincy 2000.

Reene McMullen of Country Creation, a crafts and gifts shop, found that part of the workshop to be "very informative." McMullen noted that, for new businesses in particular, "advertising is very expensive" and a business has to be creative in getting its message to the public.

Yudkin also discussed how businesses should target when they send press releases and what to do when a reporter calls. She encouraged participants to have a clear message about their business that they want to get across, and to be proactive about presenting the message.

Yudkin concluded the workshop by reminding participants to write thank-you notes to reporters who write about their businesses, and to mount and display copies of articles in their stores.

Blood To Be Tested In Missing Woman Investigation

Samples of blood taken from a missing woman's Houghs Neck home will be tested to see whether they contain cerebral fluid, according to Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke.

Sources close to the investigation said the fluid's presence could indicate that Katherine Leonard Romano, 39, suffered a traumatic head injury. Locke, however, would not comment on what he hopes the blood test will prove or whether any analyses so far have linked the samples to the missing woman.

Romano first was reported missed by her father Sept. 25. Her husband Joseph told authorities she went out and never returned. Her car was found last week in Quincy Center at the Ross Parking Garage.

Authorities said blood was spattered on the floor and woodwork of the five-room house at 71 Huntriss St. where the missing woman lives with her husband and son Bruno, 2. Some of the blood was covered up with fresh paint, according to authorities, and someone had tried to wash some of it off.

Locke said the blood indicates Romano's disappearance may have been linked to foul play, but it is too early to label anyone a suspect. The blood was found in her bedroom, her son's room and the living room, he said.

State Police from Locke's office and Quincy police have searched the home twice and removed items on which there was dried blood. Last Friday, police used a ground radar to see whether the basement floor, which was recently painted, had been disturbed. In addition, they used chemicals that can detect blood samples not visible to the naked eye.

Police, who said the mattress from the Romanos' bedroom was missing, have impounded the missing woman's car and her husband's pickup truck.

Mrs. Romano's mother, Katherine Godfrey of Florida, has said the couple was about to break up and Joseph Romano was supposed to have moved out of the house, which is owned by his wife, by the end of September.

Joseph Romano has hired an attorney and has not spoken with authorities since Oct. 5, when they first searched the home. He left the house at that time at the request of police. He was not home last Friday afternoon when police visited the house.

The Department of Youth Services has cared for the couple's son since Oct. 5.

Special Appeal To Reach $50,000 Goal At Harvest Festival 'Project Hero' Campaign Now At $41,778 Mark

The "Project Hero" fund-raising campaign to purchase two specially designed thermal imaging helmets for the Quincy Fire Department has reached the $41,778 mark.

The campaign, launched by Quincy businessman Daniel J. Flynn III and co-sponsored by The Quincy Sun now needs $8,222 to reach the top.

Firefighters and "Sparky" the fire dog will be on hand at the Quincy Center Harvest Festival Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in a special effort to reach the $50,000 goal.

Local businesses and individuals made it possible through their contributions to purchase one of the life-saving helmets.

The helmets which cost $25,000 each, enable firefighters to see through thick, dark smoke and flames to find and rescue occupants from houses and buildings.

The Quincy Fire Department on Saturday will display a smokehouse, fire apparatus and an actual thermal-imaging unit which adults will be invited to try on at the Harvest Festival.

Children will have the chance to meet "Sparky" the fire dog and to climb aboard a fire truck and have their picture taken. They will be able to also receive a "Project Hero" balloon for $2.

There will also be a "Fill The Fire Person's Boot" with loose change. Fire Chief Thomas Gorman will be present to answer questions about the "Project Hero" campaign and the value of the helmets.

The Sun is donating weekly full-page public service advertisements listing the names of contributors and updating the progress of the campaign.

Sheets: No Decision Yet On Special Events Coordinator

The city's new special events coordinator will not be appointed by Mayor James Sheets for another two weeks.

Sheets said at press time he originally had planned to make the appointment this week, but he still has "a resume or two" to take a look at. He added that he likely will make the appointment the week of Oct. 26.

Asked about the candidate pool for the position, the mayor replied, "There are two or three that I think are serious."

The mayor told The Quincy Sun last week that Rhonda Merrill, an administrative assistant at Dandy Food Post in Quincy, is "in the forefront" of those seeking the $48,000-a-year job. He also said, however, that other candidates would be considered.

The position was created by the City Council last week at the mayor's request. The coordinator will be in charge of all of the special events organized by the city and will deal with tourism issues.

The council voted 7-2 to back the position. Councilors Francis McCauley and Paul Harold were in opposition, saying the mayor's staff and other city departments could handle the duties.

Route 3A Project Completed

IMPROVEMENT PROJECT on Route 3A from Sea Street to South Street was recently completed by Derbes Bros. of Quincy. The $1 million construction program—which is under the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts Highway Department—lasted about six weeks and took 36 workers and 10,000 tons of asphalt to complete. Eddie Ferriera, front right, uses an asphalt rake while others work in the background.

A BREATH OF FRESH AIR

Lung cancer is one of the most lethal and largely preventable cancers. An overwhelming percentage of lung cancers are directly related to smoking and other avoidable environmental agents. If you are ready to quit, here are some tips and aids to help. Try smoking cessation counseling, preferably an eight-week program of personal or group support. You may get assistance weaning yourself from the addictive nicotine with the help of one of the over-the-counter transdermal patches, a nicotine gum, or a nicotine nasal spray that delivers the drug quickly by rapid absorption through the mucous membrane. There is also a prescription medication, Zyban, which does not contain nicotine, and may be used in addition to the patch. If you wish to quit smoking, know that you need not go through this process alone. Ask your physician what help is available to support you in this process. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

From Quincy To Quincy(s)

Bill Morrill hopes to leave Quincy Sunday so that he can go -- to Quincy.

And, to Quincy... and to Quincy... and to Quincy... and ...

In fact, to 12 other Quincys across the country. "I've always wanted to visit all the other Quincys," he says. "To see what they look like, learn something about their local history and to see what they have in common with us besides their name."

Now, it will be a sort of ambassador of goodwill trip.

He will take a TV camera with him to shoot scenes of the other Quincys for a millennium celebration documentary planned by Quincy Access Television.

And in each of the Quincys he will record residents there sending greetings to residents here such as "Happy New Year, Happy New Century, Quincy, Mass!"

Morrill plans to leave Sunday in his 1995 Ford club wagon on an estimated 32-day, 12,000 to 15,000 mile trip.

But there is a little if to it: If he has enough money for the gas and other expenses.

He figures the trip will cost around $5,000. He's putting up $2,000 himself. That leaves $3,000 to go.

Barry Welch, director of the Quincy Recreation Department, Tom Koch, executive director of the Park-Forestry-Cemetery Departments and Bette Campbell, executive director and Ed Fidler of Quincy Access TV are trying to help raise the money.

Morrill says he would like to find a few sponsors. Anyone interested can reach him at his home 617-773-1439 or via his pager 617-683-5137.

Morrill says that according to the U.S. Postal Service there are now 12 other Quincys. The most familiar of them to us is our sister city, Quincy, Ill. with whom we have a strong bond.

The others are in: California, Florida, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Mississippi, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Washington, and West Virginia. (We always thought there were three or four more.)

Quincy, Ill. may be our sister city but they pronounce it Quin-see and not Quin-zee as we do. It was believed all the others also pronounced it Quin-see. But Morrill has found a Quincy, Mass. sound-alike: Quincy, Calif.

Morrill called there to get directions and was surprised to find it not only had a Quincy High School but the woman who answered the phone pronounced it Quin-zee.

"Yes, that's the way we pronounce it," she assured him. "It's not Quin-see."

Morrill will bring greetings from Mayor James Sheets to the other Quincys along with mementos such as Quincy buttons from City Council President Peter Kolson, Quincy literature including copies of The Quincy Sun's Historic Quincy supplement. And any other items someone might want to contribute.

Morrill who owns Creative Fairs, a special events firm, is also the parade director for the Quincy Christmas Parade and a coordinator for Quincy's First Night celebration.

He also works for Massachusetts Heavy Industries at the Quincy Shipyard from where he is taking a leave of absence to make the trip.

He figures on a 32-day trip but it could take longer.

"But I'll be back in time for the Christmas parade," he vows. "I haven't missed one of them in 28 years."

Incidentally, if you happen to be new in town you might be wondering why we make such a big deal out of Quincy's pronunciation.

We pronounce it Quin-zee because Quincy was named for Col. John Quincy Adams, great grandfather of President John Quincy Adams. He and the Quincy family pronounced it Quin-zee.

Welcome aboard, Quincy, Calif.

CITY CLERK Joseph Shea will enter Quincy Hospital today (Thursday) for throat surgery.

He said a little growth was discovered last week and he was advised to have it removed now.

"I don't think it is serious," he said. "I hope to be back to work by next week."

SHEA

A NOTE FROM Don Hunter of Adams Shore regarding the column last week on the Clinton-Lewinsky scandal and impeachment inquiry.

"Your Oct. 8 editorial put the matter exactly where it should be: Lack of Morality. You put it well and I hope it will get further notice."

YOU CAN ADD another name to the list of potential candidates for the Ward 6 City Council seat next year.

Michael Morad of Rawson Road who has interned in Senator John Kerry's office is thinking of running.

Incumbent Bruce Ayers who will be the new state representative from the First Norfolk District, will finish out his term and vacate the seat.

Application Deadline For Service Academies Nov. 1

Congressman Bill Delahunt reminds local high school students and their families that the application deadline for potential nomination to the four U.S. Service Academies is Sunday, Nov. 1.

"The Service Academies offer and outstanding tuition-free education," Delahunt said. "Whether it's the Navy, Air Force, Military or Merchant Marine Academy--for the right candidate, this could be the opportunity of a lifetime."

Delahunt said all students who have already indicated interest in nominations should make certain their application files are completed by the Nov. 1 deadline. To be eligible, a candidate must be a resident of the Tenth Congressional District who will have graduated from high school by June 1999.

All applications completed by the deadline will be evaluated by Delahunt's Nominee Selection Committee. The Congressman will then forward to the academies the names of students recommended by the committee as his nominees.

For more information, call Delahunt's office toll free at 1-800-794-9911.

Quincy High To Host College Fair Oct. 20

Quincy High School will host the annual Quincy Public Schools College Fair on Tuesday, Oct. 20 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Munroe MacLean Gymnasium.

Representatives from over 100 colleges in the New England area will be in attendance to present a variety of programs available to interested juniors and seniors from all local high schools.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1927 POSTCARD shows the end of East Elm Avenue looking southerly from Wollaston Boulevard. This scene is quite different today. The building on the left with the signpost was the Beach Lodge Tea Room but is now an empty MDC park. The two houses on the right were on the site of today's MDC restroom and life guard building. Most of the Elm trees are gone. The postcard was published by Henry Frink who had a photo shop in Quincy Square.

Marines Should Be Part Of World War II Memorial

[The following letter addressed to Mayor James Sheets was submitted for publication by the writer.]
Dear Mayor Sheets:

On Aug. 27, 1998, The Quincy Sun featured an article with photos focusing on the new memorial for veterans of World War II.

The Memorial Committee exhibited a photo of the proposed memorial, displaying a nurse representing all the women of the military during WWII; an infantry soldier representing the U.S. Army; and a sailor representing the U.S. Navy. Missing from the exhibit was the U.S. Marine Corps.

As past state commandant for the U.S. Marines Corps League in the state of Massachusetts, I received many telephone calls from irate Marines of WWII, advising they had contacted the committee and were informed, "...the Marines were part of the U.S. Navy."

Marines were proud to serve as part of the U.S. Navy, and so many Marines were killed with them since the year 1775. However, U.S. Marines wore their own uniforms and came under the command of a Marine Corps commandant.

The U.S. Marine Corps had an abundant supply of young Marines from our great City of Quincy, the home of John Adams, John Quincy Adams, and John Hancock. Many of these young Marines from Quincy gave their lives for this country in WWII. To recognize their supreme sacrifice, a U.S. Marine should be displayed on this proposed memorial, along with the women and men who served in other branches of the Armed Forces.

I have attached to this correspondence an honor roll of U.S. Marines from the City of Quincy, who gave their supreme sacrifice while proudly serving their country. The WWII memorial should be appropriately displayed within the City of Quincy, so that citizens of Quincy and its many visitors would be proud of such a memorial to the military personnel who proudly served for this great country of ours.

I cannot stress the importance of exhibiting a Marine to recognize the 485,680 Marines who served in World War II.

Recently, a very dear friend of mine passed away, Joseph J. Callahan of Quincy. During WWII, Mr. Callahan served with the 6th Marine Division in New Caledonia, Guam, Okinawa, Bougainville, and Emiru. He also participated in the occupation of Japan in Yokosuka. Mr. Callahan served with the U.S. Marine Corps Raider Battalion. All Marines know that the "Gates of Heaven" are guarded by U.S. Marines and Joseph has just joined that elite corps.

It is requested that favorable consideration be given to this very important request. I urge you, do not allow this memorial to be built without a U.S. Marine upon its summit.

Students To Help QHS Grad With Car Wash Saturday

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The student leaders at Quincy High were challenged this summer by our new principal, Mr. Robert Keuther, to find ways to lead our fellow students.

We struggled to do that until late in the summer when some of us were given the opportunity to hear the inspiring message of Quincy High School graduate Ann McCarron.

Ann's speech was from the heart. I looked around as she spoke and noticed tears in everyone's eyes, tears of pride and love, but definitely not of pity. Ann's strength shone through for all to see. She did not want our pity. All she wanted was for us to hear the message, and to gain whatever we could from it.

It began to pour, but not a soul moved. We all stood there soaked to the skin from the rain, taking in each encouraging word she gave us. That day I went home with a different attitude on life, an attitude that no matter how we feel or what life brings, we must carry on. We must touch the lives of others and be strong. We must be leaders like Ann McCarron.

Ann has accomplished an amazing goal. She biked from coast to coast in 50 days, an accomplishment which should be applauded. But to me the bike ride was not what was special. Many athletes could have done the same.

To me, what differentiates Ann from others is the significant message she spread to all that she met on her way. Ann opened up and shared her past, a past that included being sexually abused by her pediatrician at the age of seven, and the pain that went along with that tragedy. Ann, however, did not treat her misfortune as a tragedy. She used it instead to help others. Finding a purpose in something most would see as a misfortune, she has shown us all how to be a leader.

As leaders we would like to use these skills to help a graduate reach her goal of raising $40,000 to give to programs for sexually abused children. A car wash will be held Saturday at Central Middle School from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Please bring your car to be washed on this day to support the leaders of today and tomorrow, and the children who are faced with the same past as Ann. Let us help them realize their strength and leadership abilities. The same way Ann has showed all of us.

N. Quincy Residents Urge Re-Zoning Whiting Property

By PAUL HAROLD

North Quincy residents, fearing flooding problems, urged the city to rezone the former Whiting Milk Company property, bounded on the north by Arnold Rd. and on the west by Canton. The property had been abandoned for two years.

Leading the effort to change the zoning from Business to Residence B was Ward 6 Councilor Richard Barry, who quoted former City Planner James Lee as saying that the change would be good zoning.

In opposition was Frank Foy, owner of the land.

FINN PROMOTED TO CAPTAIN

Police Lt. Frank Finn was sworn-in as captain and head of the detective bureau, replacing acting head Capt. Charles Hinchon. The ceremony at City Hall included Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa, Chief William Ferrazzi and City Clerk John Gillis.

Finn joined the police department on July 1, 1948, shortly after he completed service in the Navy.

DEMOCRATS HOLD UNITY RALLY AT ARMORY

Following a bitter primary fight in which Quincy's Francis Bellotti defeated the Democratic incumbent Gov. Endicott Peabody, Quincy Democrats gathered at the armory to rally for the party's slate.

Besides Bellotti, Joan Kennedy was a featured speaker who substituted for her husband who was hospitalized with back injuries.

The event was sponsored by the Democratic City Committee (chairman Tim Faherty), the Young Democrats (president John DellaBarba), and the Women's Democratic Club (president Mary Fareri).

Kennedy campaign coordinators were Richard Koch and Joseph Donovan.

you need a doctor for.
Now a referral isn't one of them.

That's why the doctors of Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates have introduced self-referral. Marie's Kitchen

Lasagne, Zucchini Bake

I was planning to prepare lasagne last week and had some fresh zucchini's from a friend's garden. I decided to use them in the entree with great results. I do not boil the lasagne any more, but instead prepare it uncooked.

Not only did it cut easier, it also received rave reviews!

Lasagne and Zucchini Bake

1 pound lasagne
2 medium zucchini tomato sauce
1 pound ricotta cheese
1 package shredded cheese
romano grated cheese
1 tablespoon fresh parsley (chopped fine)
1 egg

First, prepare the tomato sauce. When that is done, prepare the ricotta by adding the egg, parsley and about a quarter cup grated cheese. Blend and set aside.

In a slightly greased baking pan, place the lasagne, top with ricotta, sauce, a layer of thinly sliced zucchini, (place some grated cheese over the zucchini) the shredded cheese, then a little more sauce, and continue until layers are completed. Make sure you use plenty of sauce and then at the end, add a half cup water around the edge of the pan. Cover and bake in a 375 degree oven for about an hour.

Cool and wait until you see how easy it is to serve. I add extra sauce and grated cheese with each portion if needed.

Contractor Turning Heads In Quincy Center

South Shore: Neighborhoods are talking about a local company that built a 25' x 40' second level that turned a two bedroom cape into a 4 bedroom garrison in 21 hours. Patrick J. Flaherty of Flaherty Contracting says it all comes down to good planning and being organized. With interest rates down, it's a good time to borrow and add on instead of selling because the house market is high and it makes it difficult to trade up in size. Flaherty Contracting is a full service home improvement contractor. Fully licensed and insured. They can handle your needs whether it is an additional kitchen or bath as well as your roofing, siding and window needs.

Housing Agency Members Assist On Habitat Project

Five days of work by members of the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA) recently moved South Shore Habitat for Humanity's Granite Village project in Quincy Point along by five weeks.

A work force of 125 MHFA employees took up hammers and saws, climbed ladders, pounded nails, and attached shingles and sliding to three houses nearly completed in the 10-home neighborhood, equating 1,000 hours of construction labor.

South Shore Habitat is a volunteer organization, so most of the construction has been done only on Saturdays. The contribution of the MHFA—25 workers per day—equals five weeks of Habitat's normal construction schedule and will go a long way toward helping to complete the houses for three families.

MHFA Executive Director Steven Pierce said the partnership between the agency and South Shore Habitat allowing MHFA employees to help build affordable housing in Quincy is just one more way the agency is working to increase the availability of lower-cost housing.

"While many of us work each day on affordable housing programs, we seldom see the other end of the spectrum in the actual construction of affordable housing," Pierce said. "This effort gets us where the work is going on."

The MHFA is one of the leading providers of affordable housing in the state.

STEVEN PIERCE, Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency executive director, helps lay down roofing paper at one of the houses under construction at South Shore Habitat for Humanity's Granite Village project in Quincy. The agency, which provides loans for affordable housing in the state recently sent 25 workers a day to the site for a week to give employees a chance to participate in the construction of low-cost housing.

Since 1970, the agency has provided $5.5 billion in loans to finance mixed-income rental housing and affordable home ownership opportunities for first time homebuyers in Massachusetts.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity is a non-profit ecumenical ministry dedicated to wiping out poverty housing in the region. It is not a giveaway program—Habitat works in partnership with working families to help them achieve their dream of owning their own homes. Families are chosen by a selection committee based on need, income and willingness to partner with Habitat. Houses are purchased through long-term, no-interest mortgages, with 500 hours of "sweat equity" instead of a cash down payment. The cost of the houses is kept to about $55,000 to $60,000 because of donations and volunteer labor.

Granite Village, emerging from a former quarry on WORKING ON "The House That Jill Built," a group of female employees from the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency contribute their muscle to South Shore Habitat for Humanity's first house built entirely by women. The house is one of the first three houses nearing completion at Granite Village on Bower Road.

Bower Rd., is South Shore Habitat's first attempt at a multi-home subdivision. The first three single-family homes are almost finished, and construction has started on the second phase—two duplexes.

The project has drawn support from Quincy, Braintree and other South Shore communities, but more help is needed before all 10 houses are finished and the neighborhood is complete. To volunteer, call (781) 843-9080.

Conway Commercial Group Marketing Hollow Restaurant

The owners of the now-closed Hollow Restaurant have decided to sell the Quincy property, marking the first time in a half-century that the landmark location on Adams Street is available for development.

Operated by the Cloney family, the restaurant had been in business approximately 50 years and included a dining room, lounge and function room with a separate entrance. The Hollow, known for its large neon sign that stretched across the facade, closed earlier this year.

Although the 220-seat restaurant's full liquor license is available, the buyers are not restricted to a food-service operation, according to Paul Durgin and George Jamieson of Conway Commercial Group, the marketing agent for the property. The 40,000-square-foot lot is zoned Business B, which allows a variety of uses, including banks and retail stores.

Durgin and Jamieson said the 7,600-square-foot building, located at the intersection of Adams Street and Furnace Brook Parkway and a short distance from Routes 93 and 3, is expected to attract interest from potential buyers because of its convenient location and the large number of cars that pass by the property each day.

The Conway Commercial Group is a division of Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co., which has more than 600 agents in 35 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Homeowners Vs. Termites: New Strategies To Win The Fight

(NAPS)—Coaches need a game plan to defeat the opposition. When it comes to the termite game, homeowners need inside information to win the fight.

Homeowners can now monitor swarm activity through the Internet.

A "swarm map" is updated weekly on the website of Terminix (www.terminix.com), a leading termite control company.

The map shows areas, by state and region, where termite swarming has been reported. It can be localized down to zip code level.

However, swarms are only the visible evidence of infestation. "Because most wood in a home is hidden, termites are often hard to work without the homeowner's knowledge," said John Chapman, a Terminix entomologist.

Chapman offers these suggestions to reduce the attractiveness of your home to termite infestation:

- Make sure firewood

A new termite control method uses in-ground stations containing wood and bait to monitor soil activity around a home.

and other wood debris are not stacked against the home.

- Grade the soil around the foundation so it carries water away from the house; termites need moisture to survive. Keep gutters and downspouts in good repair.

- Set any wooden posts, such as deck supports, on concrete pads so they don't have direct contact with the ground.

- Use pressure-treated wood if the wood will contact or come close to the ground.

- Avoid having exterior veneers and stucco extend below grade level. Six-to-eight inches of clearance should be maintained.

- Contact a termite control company for professional services when building a new home or addition to protect this significant investment. Annual inspections are also recommended.

A new baiting technology—offered by Terminix—now makes it possible to eliminate or control entire termite colonies. The Sentricon Termite Colony Elimination System uses in-ground stations containing wood to monitor termite activity in the soil around a home.

When termites are intercepted in a station, the wood is removed and replaced with bait to control the population. As more and more individual termites are affected, the colony is weakened. The process may take six months or longer, because a colony consists of thousands of termites.

The system does not require drilling holes in interior floors, foundations, or exterior patios and walkways. Therefore, it's less intrusive than traditional methods of termite control.

Terminix, founded in 1927, operates 502 service centers in 44 states. For more information, call 1-800-TERMINIX (837-6464).

President Linda Golodner. "The trumpet, not a quiet instrument, throughout history has been used to sound the presence of very special people, to organize and rally to action. The Trumpeter Award is conferred upon individuals who have not been afraid to raise their voices in support of a fairer marketplace, a safer workplace, and a more just society."

In her acceptance speech, Cappellano told those in attendance about the school the Broad Meadows students and their Pakistani non-governmental partner Sudhaar have established in memory of Masih.

"His visit (to Broad Meadows) changed everything," said Cappellano. "His murder four months later moved us to action. It took a few weeks to figure out how we would respond to his murder. We thought about Iqbal's visit to our school, and his dream. He told us that his dream was for all children to be free and in school."

"That was it! Education was the answer. We decided to use our one on-line computer to organize middle school students across the nation in a 'Kid's Campaign to Build a School in Pakistan' in Iqbal's memory. Our message was simple: 'A bullet can't kill a dream.'"

Cappellano added, "That was in 1995. In November of 1996, we did it! We raised about $147,000 and a modest five-room school, dedicated to Iqbal Masih and all the working children of the world, opened in Pakistan! Two hundred and seventy-eight poor, working children attend. They are boys like Iqbal, girls too, Muslims and Christians, ages 4 to 12. Two hundred and fifty-two never went to school before. The school for Iqbal is open and growing thanks to our non-governmental partner in Pakistan named Sudhaar. Sudhaar made our dream come true."

Elizabeth Bloomer, eighth grade campaign leader, told those gathered at the award ceremony that child labor is complex and involves every level of society. She said, "The solution to ending child labor is at least five layers deep:

"One—Education. All children must go to school until at least their 14th birthday.

"Two—Governments. Governments must pass and enforce tough laws to protect children. The U.S. Senate can lead the fight to end child labor by ratifying the 1998 Geneva Child Labor Standards.

"Three—Corporations like Nike and Disney and others must take full responsibility for guaranteeing no children are in their facilities or in their fields.

"Four—Consumers...like you and me...labels must tell if something is child labor free. How else can we shop?

"Five—Poverty. Small micro-credit loans must be made available to poor families so they can start their own small businesses. Tiny loans are being made, especially to mothers. Ninety percent of these loans are paid back. In fact, we have used some of the money we raised to issue 50 micro-credit loans to poor mothers in Pakistan on the condition those mothers start a small business and buy back their children sold into bonded labor and enroll those children in our school. A tiny loan can break the cycle of poverty and that can end child labor."

Loos, a founder of "The Kids Campaign to Build a School for Iqbal" and now a student at Quincy High School, told the audience of her anti-child labor experiences over the past four years.

"Well, I am one of the kids who hosted Iqbal in 1994 on the day he visited our school," said Loos. "Last spring, I decided I was going to become a front line activist against child labor. I decided to join something I heard about at a meeting at Broad Meadows. Adults were going to march across five continents against child labor. It was going to be called The Global March Against Child Labor."

"I decided to join the real march. I got permission from my high school to miss weeks of school to march across America against child labor. It was my civil rights march. Beginning in Washington, D.C., I joined with other youth in a march across America against child labor."

"In Edinburg, Texas, for the first time in the three years I was in this campaign, I saw with my own eyes child labor in America. I saw a 7- and 8-year-old picking cucumbers in the boiling sun. They don't go to school. I saw a 17-year-old girl picking also. She had rashes on her legs and arms from the pesticides. She had a 1-year-old with her in the field. She couldn't afford day care.

"It broke my heart to see child labor in our country. It wasn't hard to find."

Bloomer added, "Too many children are in fields in Texas or California or Florida or Maryland picking crops month after month, growing season after growing season, moving state to state, sprayed by insecticides, sometimes with no running water or toilets in the field. Too many spend their childhoods in the fields and not in classrooms. The children in the fields are invisible, but we are their voices tonight."

Asked about their next course of action, the students said they plan to continue lobbying the Senate for ratification of newly-proposed international child labor laws.

"There's so much more that needs to be done," said Loos.

The students have accepted the government's request to help launch a new program of middle school international activism called Operation Day's Work. The U.S. Agency for International Development has designed the program to encourage younger students to study the problems and design solutions to the harsh realities faced by children in developing countries.

Operation Day's Work will focus on Haiti in 1999, and the Broad Meadows students already are organizing help for that country. To learn more about helping Haiti, the students invited Nanette Canniff of St. Boniface Church in Quincy to visit them and explain how St. Boniface built a hospital in Haiti.

The students also met with Congressman William Delahunt to learn from him about Haiti and international relief. Delahunt has visited Haiti several times recently.

Finally, student Quiana Blair, 12, contacted Father Bill's Place in Quincy and the Red Cross in Boston to inquire about ways to ship aid to Haiti when the students complete Operation Day's Work in mid-1999.

Those interested in joining the effort can e-mail the Broad Meadows students at endchilabor@aol.com or call (617) 984-8723.

Bank Of Canton Quincy Banking Center Marks First Anniversary

The Bank of Canton's Quincy Banking Center celebrated its first anniversary Monday.

The staff includes Judy Farmer, mortgage lender; Paul Carey, commercial lending specialist; and Don Gohl, a 78-year-old veteran of the South Shore banking community.

"I know and love the banking business," said Gohl. "I enjoy being able to help area residents with their very important and sometimes difficult banking decisions. And the Bank of Canton gives me so many great accounts to present to my longtime friends."

"Many Quincy Banking Center employees are area residents as well," said Michelle Higgins, branch manager. "Like me, they have a sincere interest in the community and take part in local events, too."

"It has been our goal to bring the same level of banking service to our Quincy-area customers that our Canton-area customers have enjoyed since 1835," said Bank of Canton President Jim Egan. "In just a year's time, we have not only reached, but surpassed our goals to become an integral member of the Quincy community and I am very pleased."

ATTY. THOMAS WILLIAMS, whose practice is in Quincy, received an award as one of the top title agents in the United States at a recent meeting of the Fidelity National Title Company held in Bermuda.

Raiders Visit Taunton Friday Barnstable Runs Over, Through North Quincy

By LIAM FITZGERALD

For a half, the North Quincy High School football team stayed right with the visitors from Barnstable, considered one of the favorites to capture the Old Colony League championship.

Unfortunately for North, things unraveled quickly in the second half as Barnstable increased its three-point lead to 22 points midway through the fourth quarter, en route to a 32-18 win last Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"We hung with them for a while, and the kids played pretty good," said North head coach Ken McPhee. "Our tackling woes came back to bite us and we also broke down in some coverages."

"The effort was there; we just have to keep working. We are getting better; I saw a lot of improvement in this game. I'm proud these kids, because they don't quit."

Looking for its first win of the year, North (0-4) travels to Taunton Friday for a 7 p.m. game against the improving Tigers (3-1).

The Tigers, 1-9-1 last season, return 12 starters on a deep roster, quarterback Ryan Colton, halfback Jay Dumont and split end John Kahn.

In the loss to Barnstable, North fell behind early when fullback Mike Broughton scored the first of his three touchdowns on an 18-yard scoring run.

NQ battled back on its next possession, sparked by the accurate passing of quarterback Chris Bregoli (13 for 26, 193 yards). The senior connected with Jody Bravo (seven catches, 147 yards) for back-to-back receptions of 40 and 32 yards to move the ball to Barnstable's three-yard line. On the next play, Bregoli connected with Bravo for a three-yard touchdown. Bregoli's extra point tied the game late in the opening quarter.

"Chris played a great game, the best performance of his career," said McPhee. "We had that pattern working, with him throwing to Bravo over the middle. He (Bregoli) has done the job all season. The pressure's been on him, and he's responded well."

The hosts took the lead in the second quarter when Bregoli led the offense on a 74-yard drive, completing three passes to Bravo for 56 yards. The drive was halted at the Barnstable 6, but Bregoli's 23-yard field goal put North head-temporarily.

The visitors put together a quick, 73-yard drive that culminated in a 39-yard touchdown reception by Broughton from quarterback Mark Shedlock with 2:03 left in the half. An interception by Matt Norton gave Barnstable an opportunity to pad their lead, but a last-second touchdown pass was nullified by a holding penalty.

Barnstable wasted no time getting on the board in the second half, taking the first possession 65 yards. Broughton carried three times for 60 yards, including a 19-yard scoring run.

The visitors padded their lead on the first play of the fourth quarter when Stefan Gomes ran a reverse 28 yards for a touchdown and a 26-10 Barnstable lead.

On Barnstable's next drive, Broughton followed a 31-yard romp with a 39-yard touchdown run as he broke through NQ tacklers en route to the end zone.

Trailing 32-10, North rallied for a late score on a three-yard touchdown run by Brian Deptula and added the two-point conversion on a pass from Bregoli to Frank McNamara. Leading comfortably, Barnstable chose to run out the clock in the 14-point OCL triumph.

NORTH'S SEAN ADAMS leaps in an attempt to block an extra point kick by Barnstable's Justin Waskiewicz. NQ trailed in the game, 13-10, at the half, only to see the visitors reel off three straight touchdowns to pull away for the OCL triumph.

NORTH QUINCY FULLBACK Brian Deptula tries to elude the grasp of Barnstable's Matt Norton (51) during last Friday's 32-18 setback at the Stadium. North (0-4) seeks its first victory when it visits Taunton (3-1) Friday at 7 p.m. for an Old Colony League battle.

Undefeated Rockland Next Test For Quincy

Wrapping up the first half of the season, Quincy High School's winless football team will have its hands full when its visits undefeated Rockland Friday at 7 p.m. in a non-league tilt.

Coming off a 40-7 setback to Falmouth last Friday, the Presidents (0-4) know full well the success Rockland has achieved in recent years, including a 10-1 record last season.

"Rockland's done a great job this season," said Quincy head coach Chella. "I saw them play against Marshfield and they play hard on every single play with a lot of intensity. They don't take a play off here or there, which is what it takes to win consistently."

"Their strengths are their running backs (Jason) Murphy and (Rob) Killinger, who is also a solid line-backer. They almost made the Super Bowl last year, and appear to be headed in that direction again. We're going to have to play hard every down to have a chance to win the game."

The Bulldogs (4-0), guided by longtime head coach Ken Own, return three other key starters: quarterback Jeff McSharry, line-backer Steve Coultrine and defensive end Ken Molloy.

FOOTBALL

The Presidents received some good news this week, as Chella said he expects senior co-captain halfback John Katsarikas to return to the lineup. Against Bridgewater-Raynham, Katsarikas suffered a shoulder separation that caused him to miss the Falmouth game.

"I think John will be ready to come back, but we're taking it day by day with him," said Chella. "We don't want him to re-injure it. It would be nice to have him back; he'd help us out a lot offensively."

In the setback to Falmouth, Quincy scored the first touchdown but could not contain the Clippers' powerful ground attack, led by Jamaal Branch (206 yards, three touchdowns). Falmouth outgained Quincy 454-36 on the ground.

Presidents' quarterback Dan Kelly (150 passing yards) connected with wide receiver Nick DiStasi on a 59-yard touchdown pass and Kelly added the extra point for a 7-0 first-quarter lead.

"Danny has started to throw the ball much better, picking out his receivers and making strong, accurate throws," said Chella.

"Whatever confusion he went through early on, he's put that behind and has assumed a leadership role. He was a bright light for us."

The hosts responded with three touchdowns before the opening quarter concluded. Branch scored on runs of 20 and 26 yards and Phil Schneider scored on a one-yard run to give the hosts an 18-7 lead.

"Falmouth's a very strong team with a lot of power," said Chella. "That big running back (Branch) is over 200 pounds, and once he gets into the secondary, our kids are just bouncing off of him."

Branch scored on another 20-yard run and quarterback Hunter Greeley added a two-point conversion run to give the Clippers a 26-7 halftime advantage.

Falmouth increased its lead with Jimmy White's 15-yard touchdown run in the third quarter and a nine-yard scoring run in the fourth by Brett Lynch.

North Headed To Tourney; Quincy Seeks To Snap Skid Raiders Defeat Rival Presidents

It's been a tale of two seasons for the girls' volleyball teams at North Quincy High School and Quincy High School.

While the Red Raiders (8-3) enter this week a few victories shy of nailing down a state tournament berth, the hard working yet struggling Presidents (3-8) are looking to start a winning streak of their own.

Both teams were in action yesterday (Wednesday), with Quincy hosting Division 1 powerhouse Barnstable at 4 p.m. and North visiting Dennis-Yarmouth for a 4 p.m. match.

Today (Thursday) at 4 p.m., Quincy hosts Brockton. North and Quincy hit the road for Friday matches, as the Red Raiders travel to Plymouth North for a 4 p.m. match and the Presidents visit Plymouth South at 4 p.m. Next Monday, North plays at 4:30 p.m. match at Dracut.

In recent action, the Red Raiders defeated host Falmouth, 2-1, last Friday. Leading the way for North Quincy were Amy Jellison (24 digs), Angela Scott (nine kills), Jessica Lorman (12 digs, six kills) and Allison Haddad (four kills, 12 digs).

The two rivals clashed for the first time this season last Wednesday at Quincy, as the Red Raiders handed the Presidents a 2-0 setback.

Sparkling the 15-6, 15-5 triumph were Katie Jellison (19 digs, six kills), Amy Jellison (13 digs), Kim Hueth (nine digs), Lorman (nine digs, six kills), Caitlin Powers (11 digs) and Scott (three digs, two kills).

Impressed with the Red Raiders' performance, head coach Jim Rendle said, "We were able to do some things we can't do against bigger teams, like utilize our right side attack."

"We have a little more experience than Quincy, but I'm impressed with the progress they've made since the beginning of the year. We're playing well right now and I hope that continues down the stretch."

North jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the opening game and went up 10-2, sparked by the serving of Scott and Alexis Miranda. Quincy closed the gap to 10-6 on points by Tabitha McLellan and Jacqui Niosi, but North reeled off the next five points to close it out.

In the second game, Quincy took a quick 3-0 lead as Colleen Nichol served up an ace and Liz Ashworth notched a point. The lead was short-lived, as NQ took advantage of Quincy miscues to notch the next 14 points. Leading North on that streak were Hueth, Lorman and Haddad. Quincy scored a couple of points, including another ace by Colleen Nichol, but NQ's Miranda collected a service point to clinch the victory.

Afterwards, Quincy head coach Christine Barrett cited mental breakdowns as a key factor in the match.

"We made some mistakes and got down, but you have to shake those off and get back into the match," she said. "That ended up haunting us. North has a nice team, and it's always an exciting match when we play them."

"We came out fired up, but serving mistakes hurt us and they took advantage of them. We broke down in the basics, instead of forcing our opponent to make the errors a little more. They have a little more experience, but we'll make the adjustments before the next match."

Barrett commended Colleen and Caitlin Nichol and Jacqui Niosi for their tireless all-around effort.

"Colleen played well offensively, making three big blocks and serving up a couple of aces," she said. "Caitlin added 11 digs and Red Jacqui (seven digs, 10 assists) was all over the place, running around and working hard. As the setter, she got the ball up for our hitters, but North was right there to defend. You can't pass that close to the next against a team like that."

North Girls' Swim Coach Impressed With Team's Effort

The season is currently in full swing for the North Quincy High School girls' swim team, with 15 members on the squad.

Guided by head coach Yvonne Boness, the Red Raiders are led by co-astars Melissa Cooke, a senior, and Kelly Whalen, a junior. Despite being winless in seven meets leading into this week, Boness is pleased with the effort her team has shown.

"Although they have not had any wins yet, these girls never give up," she said.

Leading the Red Raiders with first-place finishes in the 100 butterfly and 100 backstroke is Sheila Bohan. Whalen has also earned her share of victories in the 200 and 500 freestyle events.

Junior Amy Fagerlund consistently finishes in the top three in the 200 individual medley and the 100 backstroke, and junior Erin Johnson continues to perform well in the 100 backstroke and the 100 freestyle.

Presidents Earn First Two Victories

Coming of a strong performance against North Quincy, the Quincy High School boys' soccer team picked up its first two victories, defeating Old Colony League foes Barnstable and Taunton.

"Even though we lost to North, I think the kids used that game as a turning point," said Quincy head coach Ray Papile. "I thought we'd improve in the second half, but it's happening already."

"They're seeing the benefit of their hard work, and are playing together and believing they can play with some of these teams. That's the key: they're going into games with confidence and believing they can win."

The Presidents (2-5-1) were back in action yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. at home against the OCL's first-place team, Silver Lake. Friday at 4 p.m., Quincy hosts Falmouth in another league tilt. Next Tuesday, Quincy visits Plymouth South for a 4 p.m. league game.

Food Center Seeks Volunteers

Quincy Community Action's Emergency Food Center is seeking volunteer laborers to assist in shelving and stocking of foods and other related functions.

Volunteers are needed from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information, call Nancy Barry at 471-0796, ext. 103 or visit the Emergency Food Center at 388 Granite St., West Quincy.

In recent action, senior forward Stephan Allsop collected two goals and two assists to spark Quincy over host Barnstable, 4-1, last Thursday. Senior co-captain midfielder Bard Hajrizaj and senior midfielder Oskar Berk also scored for the Presidents, who received solid efforts from a number of players.

"Joe Vallatini was outstanding in goal, making 22 saves," said Papile. "He's played very well lately and coming up with some key saves. (Senior defensive back) Bruno Diaz and (senior co-captain stopper) Scott Staiti have also done a great job. Scott is playing with a foot injury that's bothering him, but he still goes out and plays hard all the time."

Goals by Hajrizaj, Berk and senior co-captain forward Jim Sullivan propelled Quincy over host Taunton, 3-1, last Tuesday. Vallatini made 18 saves in goal to preserve the victory.

"We dominated the game with a lot of shots," said Papile. "All our captains were outstanding, including Tony Monaco, who has played well all season. It was a nice overall team effort. That's what it takes to succeed, and we're doing that right now."

GETTING A GRIP

With all the traction systems available these days, consumers can be forgiven if they are confused about the difference between full-time four-wheel drive and all-wheel drive. Unlike part-time four-wheel drive, full-time four-wheel drive can be used all the time to enhance handling. A center differential (or equivalent mechanism) enables the front and rear wheels to turn independently when the car is cornering, and, in difficult conditions, the center differential locks to provide traction to the slipping wheels. With permanent four-wheel drive, the center differential locks automatically when conditions get tough. All-wheel drive is very similar to full-time four-wheel drive, with the exception that it has no low-range gear (making it unsuitable for serious off-road use).

Automotive drive systems have become much more complex. If you have any questions about your drive system, or anything else related to your car, don't hesitate to ask any questions when you bring it into LED & WALL'S SUNOCO for service. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified technicians available in the area. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Sandwich (718-843-1550). We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Count on us also for propane for gas grills, converted vehicles, and motor homes.

HINT: Selectable full-time four-wheel drive is particularly versatile because it allows drivers to choose from among three modes: two-wheel drive, part-time four-wheel drive, and full-time four-wheel drive.

Undefeated Woodward Soccer Picks Up Two More Shutouts

The Woodward Soccer team remained unbeaten as junior goalie Danielle Gatto posted shutouts against Brimmer & May and Montrose.

In a 2-0 victory over Brimmer & May, Gatto recorded her fourth shutout as Woodward improved to 4-0-1 in the Independent Girls Conference.

Woodward senior captain Jessica Boothby scored 10 minutes into the first half off a pass from freshman forward Danielle Rugg. Boothby scored again 17 minutes into the second half, assisted by sophomore midfielder Caitlin Golden. Also contributing to the win were junior midfielders Janet McNamara and Angela Rugg, along with junior defender Jackie McKim.

In a 0-0 tie with Montrose, Gatto made 20 saves to preserve the deadlock. Freshman forwards Danielle Rugg and Kathleen Hester, along with McNamara, played strong offensive games. Golden dominated the midfield and junior captain Audrey Ferguson and McKim contributed strong defensive efforts.

OCL Title Within NQ's Grasp Raiders Tourney-Bound Again

By LIAM FITZGERALD

For the second consecutive season and only the second time in the program's two decades of existence, North Quincy High School's girls' soccer team will participate in the state tournament.

The Red Raiders qualified with a 7-0 victory over Old Colony League host Taunton last Thursday.

While North head coach Paul Bregoli is proud of his team's accomplishments to this point, he adds that he and the girls have other goals in mind as well.

"What impresses me most is the mental makeup of these girls, who believe there is nothing they can't accomplish," he said. "They've played great soccer against some tough teams and know they won't be outworked. That's great to see, because so much of sports is having a positive mental attitude."

"Also, this isn't like last year, when our main goal was to just get in. This year, we felt we could qualify and the bigger question was where would we end up in the seeding. We're playing for the OCL championship and hope to go deep in the tournament. Those are our goals now. It should be exciting, especially with two games against teams ahead of us this week."

Entering play this week, North held a firm grip on fourth place in the OCL with 12 points, trailing first-place Silver Lake (15 points), Falmouth (14 points) and Bridgewater-Raynham (13 points).

The Red Raiders (7-1-4 overall, 4-1-4 OCL) hosted Falmouth yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m., looking to avenge their lone setback of the season (1-0, Sept. 23).

Friday at 4 p.m., the Red Raiders get another shot at B-R, which tied North, 0-0, in their first meeting Sept. 24.

Next Tuesday, North pays a visit to Barnstable for a 4 p.m. The first game between the two resulted in a 7-1 North victory.

In the triumph over

Taunton, North senior co-captain goalkeeper Kristen Bowes lowered her OCL-leading goals against average to 0.25 by posting her ninth shutout. Leading NQ's offense was the OCL's second-leading scorer, senior co-captain forward Betsy Stone, with four goals and an assist. Through 12 games, Stone has compiled 13 goals and six assists for 19 total points.

Other offensive contributors included junior forward Ashley Murphy, who notched her ninth goal and set up two of Stone's tallies, and sophomore midfielder Stacy Szesuil, who collected three assists. Senior midfielder Lauren Koch also scored a goal, assisted by senior back Liz Bennett. Junior midfielder Maureen Holleran scored a goal, set up by Murphy.

Last Tuesday, the Red Raiders battled undefeated host Silver Lake to a hotly-contested 1-1 tie, North's second deadlock against the Lakers this season.

"That was one of the gutsiest performances I've seen from our team in the last few years," said Bregoli. "The girls just wouldn't give in; the effort and attitude were incredible. Only one other team has tied them this year and we've done it twice."

After withstanding a non-stop offensive attack by the Lakers, NQ got on the board first, when Holleran made a move on a Laker defender and passed to Murphy, who beat the goalkeeper 17 minutes into the first half.

The hosts notched the equalizer early in the second half when the Lakers' Kristen Hockney collected the ball out front and volleyed it over the head of Bowes.

Bregoli cited a number of players for their tireless efforts and determination, including senior co-captain sweeper Rachael Powers, senior co-captain stopper Dorothy Cronin, sophomore outside back Jen Conley, senior outside back Kate Ceurvels and freshman sweeper Kelly Rice.

Ayers Donates $500 To NQHS Booster Club

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers recently donated $500 to the North Quincy High School Booster Club at its annual Pot Luck Dinner at the Squantum Yacht Club.

Ayers said he was pleased to make the donation to help the football team through its 1998 season. He has worked closely in the past with North Quincy coach Ken McPhee and Booster Club members and, as a Red Raider in 1980, was coached by McPhee.

Ayers said he recognizes the valuable role the Booster Club plays and the financial burden it faces in order to help defray expenses incurred by the team.

A Thought For The Week

It has been said that there is no possession more valuable than a good and faithful friend. It has also been said "Never require from a friend what he cannot grant without a breach of his honor; and always be ready to help him whenever this principle is complied with." - Cicero. The best way to have friends is to be one. "If you see a friend slipping away from you," wrote David Grayson, "stop what you are doing and bring him back, for friendship is one thing you cannot afford to be without."

In youth every chance-meet acquaintance is hailed as a friend. But as one grows older, the real nature of friendship becomes better understood. And the man or woman who has reached the middle life with half a dozen friends, real friends who will bear all the test of friendship is, indeed, fortunate.

This quote expresses these thoughts beautifully: "Blessed is the man who has the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things, but above all the power of going out of one's self, and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another man." - Thomas Hughes

As Part Of Highpoint Project In WQ

Developer Says He Would Build Headstart Center

The developer of a plan to build 1,641 units of luxury apartments on a former quarry site in West Quincy has offered to build a facility for the city's Headstart center.

Dean Strato, president of Cambridge-based Congress Ventures—developer of the $200 million, 75-acre Highpoint project—has said the 25,000-square-foot Headstart center would occupy 3 acres. He said he has discussed the matter with Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott, whose ward includes the site and Quincy Community Action Programs, which runs the preschool program.

Details of the Headstart center plan, as well as other mitigation Congress Group Ventures is willing to offer, were to be revealed Tuesday night during a continuation of a City Council public hearing at Quincy High School on the project.

The Highpoint plan already has received considerable opposition.

Three of eight City Council members—Councillor Timothy Cahill, Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico and Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin—said during the first session of the public hearing last month they will not vote for the $200 million Highpoint project.

Residents and union workers filled the auditorium at the high school, which seats 500, for that first session. Those from the neighborhood voiced opposition, while the union members backed the proposal.

Cahill accused Congress

Group Ventures of misleading state agencies about the impact of the Quarry Street project when it sought and won a state environmental waiver this spring. D'Amico and Durkin also said the project is too big for a neighborhood of mostly single-family homes.

The councillors also voiced concerns about traffic, hazardous waste and other issues.

Their opposition could kill the project. Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond has said he will not vote on the matter because he owns an undeveloped lot off Curtis Street, on the eastern edge of the 75-acre Congress Group parcel. Six of nine councillors must vote in the affirmative for the project to be passed.

If fully built, Highpoint would be the largest residential development south of Boston. It would include 1,391 one- and two-bedrooms apartments in buildings three to eight stories high, and a 250-unit assisted living facility.

Apartments would rent for $1,200 to $1,800 a month in 27 buildings 3 to 8 stories in height. The development would bring about 2,500 more residents to the area, and double Quarry Street's current traffic volume of 9,200 vehicles a day.

The Headstart center would reduce the number of units at Highpoint, but Strato has not said by how many.

McDermott and Council President Peter Kolson have said at least one more public session will be held to make sure all issues pertaining to the project are addressed.

Commonwealth Hematology- Oncology Region's Largest Cancer Services Provider

Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology of Boston and the South Shore, which has its headquarters in Quincy, has merged with Oncology & Hematology Associates Inc. of Methuen.

The newly combined practice, which specializes in oncology and hematology, has offices and clinical affiliations in 18 sites throughout the state. The merger makes Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology the largest private practice cancer care group in Massachusetts.

Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology now has a total of 15 medical oncologists, 10 oncology nurses and seven lab technicians.

As the leading cancer care community practice in the state, Commonwealth serves as a model for health care groups of the future by demonstrating the economies of scale that can be realized.

"Because of our size, we have greater ability to negotiate with insurers and other providers, and we have more resources in place such as state-of-the-art quality controls operating systems, support groups and staff," said Walt Kagan, MD, Ph.D., president of Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology. "We also realize greater efficiencies through central purchasing and other shared resources, which translate directly into lower costs for health care and better services for our patients."

Commonwealth provides local residents with comprehensive cancer services using a community-based, cost-effective approach. Services include cancer screening and diagnostic evaluation, chemotherapy, radiation therapy, biological treatments, and coordination of treatment with other medical and surgical specialists. The group also focuses on patient and family education, nutrition counseling and support group services. Bone marrow transplants, stem cell transplants and other experimental treatments are arranged for patients when appropriate by doctors at Commonwealth.

"We are committed to providing the highest quality care in this managed care environment," said Dr. Kagan. "Patients should expect both personalized care and medical excellence. This is central to our approach."

Medicare Beneficiaries Can Get Help With Fees

By LAURIE ZASTROW

Medicare beneficiaries who find that they cannot afford the Medicare premiums and out-of-pocket Medicare expenses can get help from two special programs, according to Laurie Zastrow, Manager of the Quincy Social Security office. "These programs—the Qualified Income Beneficiary Program and the Specified Low-Income Medicare Beneficiary Program—are designed to make Medicare available to people who have problems paying the Medicare premiums and out-of-pocket Medicare expenses," Zastrow said.

The Qualified Income Beneficiary Program is available to people who are below the federal poverty guideline. People who qualify may get help in paying the deductibles, co-payments and other out-of-pocket medical expenses. A single Medicare beneficiary may qualify if his/her income is less than $678 per month. A couple may qualify if their combined monthly income is less than $905.

The Specified Low-Income Medicare Beneficiary Program is for people whose income is slightly above the federal poverty level. It helps beneficiaries pay the Medicare premium for Part B, which provides help with doctor bills and many other medical expenses provided by Medicare hospital insurance (Part A). The income limits are about 20 percent higher: $809 per month for singles and $1,081 per month for couples.

The asset limits for both programs are $4,000 for individuals and $6,000 for couples. But not all assets count, such as a home (of any value) and an applicant's car, insurance policies, burial plans, household goods and personal effects (of a reasonable value).

"If you have Medicare and you need help in paying your Medicare bills, you can apply for help from these programs at your state Social Services agency," Zastrow said.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Waterman Named Circulation Director At Patriot Ledger

Don Waterman has been appointed circulation director of The Patriot Ledger, announces James F. Plugh, publisher.

Waterman, 51, began his newspaper career at the age of 12 when he started delivering The Enterprise, the daily newspaper in Brockton, his hometown. He later worked for The Enterprise for 16 years, becoming circulation director.

Waterman left The Enterprise in 1985 to join the circulation department at The Patriot Ledger. In 1987, he went to The Middlesex News in Framingham as circulation director. From 1990 until his return to The Patriot Ledger, Waterman held a variety of circulation and marketing positions at The Cape Cod Times.

The Patriot Ledger serves 26 communities south of Boston. The paper publishes afternoons Monday through Friday, with a weekday circulation of 78,000 and 92,000 of its weekend edition Saturday mornings.

Waterman said his goals at The Ledger include increasing the number of customers on prepaid subscription plans. About 30 percent of subscribers now prepay. Waterman said getting a higher percentage to prepay would reduce the workload of the newspaper's youth carrier force and make the work more appealing to young people.

Waterman is a past president of the New England Association of Circulation Executives and is a former member of the board of directors for the Circulation Federation of the Newspaper Association of America.

He lives in Harwich with his wife, Laura. They have two sons and three daughters.

State Calls For Concourse Bids

ond phase, according to preliminary designs, would run east from Hancock to Mechanic Street, widening Mechanic and sections of McGrath Highway and Revere Road and connecting the roadway to Southern Artery.

The design plans for the second phase, which have been proposed by the Concord-based engineering firm Earth Tech, are not yet complete.

Some concerns were raised at Tuesday's QCBPA meeting about how downtown parking will be affected by the second phase of the project. Bernie Reisberg, owner of Bernie's Modern Formal Shop, said he believes as many as 40 spaces could be taken from the Hancock Parking Lot to make room for the concourse.

Colton confirmed that the lot will lose spaces because of the second phase but he does yet not know how many. Bernie's and Blockbuster Video also will lose some spaces in the rear of their buildings due to the widening of Mechanic Street, he said.

The commissioner added, however, that the city and Earth Tech are hoping to make up for those spaces--and actually add 10 or 12 more--by creating a parking strip on Mechanic Street between Revere Road and Elm Street. That would involve taking a building at the corner of Revere Road and Mechanic Street that includes an optometry office and a karate studio, he said.

"I do think parking is the next big issue for Quincy Center, and it should be addressed before the concourse is completed," Colton noted.

Other property Colton said would need to be taken for the second phase of the concourse project includes the Tanline building on the Parkingway, the empty Kincaide Lot, a building owned by local businessman Anthony Agnitti across from the Kincaide Lot (which includes the Wings Express, Optical Factory and Fancy Nails businesses), and three woodframe multi-family residential buildings on Mechanic Street.

The city is still discussing with members of the American Legion building on Mechanic Street what to do with that building. Colton and Sheets both have said the Post has been given the option of either selling its property to the city--in which case city officials would help it find a new home--or having the road built around it, leaving it untouched.

In fact, Colton said, the city will do everything it can to assist anyone who needs to be moved because of the concourse.

"We have a responsibility to assist with relocation," he said.

Colton said the first phase of the concourse project mainly involves taking "some small strips" of mostly publicly-owned land that should not affect anyone detrimentally.

The $12 million price tag for the project breaks down to about $7 million for the first phase and $5 for the second, Colton said, mainly because the first involves construction of a bridge that will connect Burgin Parkway with the Parkingway.

It's Only Temporary, Folks!

PARTIAL DEMOLITION on the Coletti building of the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center has begun and should be completed by the end of the week. About one-third of the 50,000-square-foot building will be razed so that a new $15 million, 65,000-square-foot wing can be added on to the library. Officials expect construction to begin in December and be completed by the end of 1999 or January 2000.

Cellucci Keynote Speaker Marshall School Dedication Sunday

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Acting Gov. Paul Cellucci will be the keynote speaker at a dedication ceremony and open house to be held Sunday at the Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School in Quincy Point.

The ceremony, which will include a tribute to Clifford Marshall—the late Norfolk County sheriff from Quincy for whom the building is named—will begin at 1 p.m. and last about an hour. The school will remain open to the public until 4 p.m.

There will be a number of speakers at the event in addition to Cellucci.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon will make remarks and Mayor James Sheets will speak on "A City's Vision." Greetings from the City Council, School Committee and Quincy's State House delegation will be brought respectively by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, School Committee Vice Chairwoman Linda Stice and Rep. Ronald Mariano.

Marshall will be remembered by his four sons—Clifford III, Michael, Paul and Christopher—as well as Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, former city clerk and a close friend. Other Marshall family members, including his wife Louise, also will participate in the ceremony, and Norfolk County Sheriff Jack Flood will present the county flag to the school.

The new Marshall School cost $10 million to build, although Creedon noted that 63 percent of that total will be reimbursed by the state.

The school was built to relieve overcrowding at the Sterling Middle School in South Quincy. Students who last year attended the Point-Webster Elementary School—which is slated to reopen as a middle school next September—attend Marshall. Middle school students from Quincy Point who currently attend Sterling will attend Point-Webster beginning next year.

Snow Shovelers Needed To Assist Senior Citizens

The Quincy Council on Aging Intergenerational Chores Program is seeking residents interested in shoveling snow for the city's senior citizens this winter.

Shovelers will be assigned in their neighborhoods and will be paid for their services.

Sign-ups will be held this Saturday as well as Oct. 31 and Nov. 7 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Council on Aging Department of Elder Services, 83 Saratoga St. (at the end of the causeway in Squantum Gardens).

For more information or an application, call Mike Connor at 376-1246.

In Wake of Murder And Disappearance Council Asks Study Into Domestic Violence

By MICHAEL WHALEN

In the wake of the murder of one Quincy woman last week and the previous disappearance of another, the City Council is calling upon Quincy's community policing commission to study the problem of domestic violence in the city.

The council unanimously passed a resolution introduced by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi requesting the study Monday night. It also asks the commission to "make recommendations to improve present systems and procedures with particular focus on prevention."

Raymondi said the council vote reminded him of another action he and his colleagues took following a rape at Quincy High School a couple of years ago. Following that incident, a safety study of all of the city's public buildings was conducted, and security was upgraded as a result.

On Oct. 14, 31-year-old Elizabeth Holland of 18 Dysart St. died after she was shot several times and beaten with a rifle. Her husband Daniel, 33, is in jail after being charged with her murder, and their 8-year-old son, Patrick, who found the body, is temporarily living in a foster home under the care of the Department of Social Services.

Meanwhile, authorities are still investigating the disappearance of Katherine Leonard Romano, 39, of 71 Huntress St. Blood was found spattered on the floor and woodwork of her home.

Romano's husband Joseph has been questioned by authorities about her disappearance, which was first reported by her father Sept. 25. The couple's 2-year-old son Bruno has been cared for by the Department of Youth Services since Oct. 5.

Holland had taken out a restraining order against her husband, while Romano's mother said her daughter was about to break up with her husband.

Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke has called Holland's death one of the most savage, brutal murders he has ever seen.

Locke, in a rare courtroom appearance, handled Daniel Holland's Oct. 15 arraignment personally. He did so, he said, because of what he saw at the murder scene.

Nearly Triple The Average Amount

Household Hazardous Waste Collection Draws 1,042 Cars

The annual Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day held Saturday at the Quincy Department Works Building drew 1,042 cars, almost triple the average amount.

DPW officials said the program, now in its 10th year, normally averages about 400 cars. They said the success of this year's collection likely can be attributed to three factors: increased advertising by the department, a growing environmental awareness among Quincy residents, and increased real estate sales that have resulted in more homeowners cleaning out their basements.

This year's collection was conducted by Clean Venture Inc. of Stoughton. Among the materials collected were car and household batteries, oil-based paints, motor oil, poisons and pesticides, anti-freeze, and more.

Officials said the line to the six-hour event was temporarily closed shortly before 2 p.m. because it was believed over an hour would be needed to serve everyone waiting and the event was to close at 3 p.m. However, the line was reopened after the residents were assisted more quickly than expected.

Asked if they plan to expand the hours of next year's event in order to deal with the crowd, officials said they will discuss the matter in the near future.

Retired Navy Captain Hired As Ship Museum Director

Mayor James Sheets has selected Robert Duetsch, a retired Navy captain with 27 years of leadership experience, to be the new permanent director of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum.

Sheets said Duetsch, who served as commanding officer of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station for two years before it was shut down last year as part of a number of base closings across the country, began work this week. Duetsch could not be reached for comment.

Duetsch succeeds Dr. Robert Downey Jr., longtime curator of the Brintree Historical Society, who had served as interim director since May. Downey was selected by the Shipbuilding Museum's Board of Directors to replace William MacMullen, its first director, who resigned in February 1997.

Duetsch served the Navy in a number of capacities in various sites throughout the country from 1971 until his retirement. Sheets said Duetsch retired about six months ago as base transition coordinator at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station and since has been seeking employment.

A resident of Lincoln, the new director holds the following degrees: master of science in management from Salve Regina University in Newport, R.I.; master of arts in national security and strategic studies from the Naval War College, also in Newport; and a bachelor of arts in political science from the University of Maine in Orono. He also is a graduate of the National War College in Washington, D.C.

In addition, Duetsch has earned Naval Flight Officer wings, been designated a Radar Intercept Officer, and logged approximately 3,000 flying hours in F4 and F14 aircraft.

The U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum, one of the city's newest tourist attractions, is located at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point. The USS Salem, a Quincy-built heavy cruiser, has served as its centerpiece since its arrival at the shipyard in October 1994.

For Years Of Community Service Ward 4's Ernie Aristide Honored By City Council

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Longtime Ward 4 activist Aurelio "Ernie" Aristide was honored by the City Council on Monday night for his many years of community service.

Aristide, 79, received a standing ovation, a special commendation, and many words of praise from the councillors. A number of Aristide's friends and neighbors, as well as his wife Margaret, also were in attendance.

A retired nursing home administrator and Quincy Hospital public relations officer, Aristide helped form the Southwest Quincy Community Relations Committee, has worked on tourism issues and served as president of the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association and, most recently, established a Ward 4 Senior Group that meets weekly.

"He has been a dedicated public servant for decades," said Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, "who presented the commendation."

All eight of D'Amico's council colleagues took their own turns praising Aristide. Among them was Councillor Francis McCauley, who recalled Aristide's activism during McCauley's four terms as mayor in the 1980s.

First Raise In 11 Years

School Committee Receives 67% Pay Hike

By MICHAEL WHALEN
The School Committee has received a pay hike that raises the annual earnings of its members from $3,600 to $6,000, an increase of nearly 67 percent.

The raise, which is effective back to July 1—the start of Fiscal Year 1999—was unanimously approved by the City Council on Monday night. City Clerk Joseph Shea said it is the first raise for the committee since 1987.

Prior to Monday night, the committee earned a monthly stipend of $300. That was increased to $500 as a result of the raise.

Among those who spoke in favor of the pay increase were Councillor Francis McCauley and Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin, both former School Committeemen, and Council President Peter Kolson.

McCauley said those elected to the committee have done all they can for the Quincy Public Schools despite the fact their power was diminished to some extent when Proposition 2 1/2 was passed.

"They do an awful lot of work," he said.

Kolson agreed that the committee members have adapted well to their "changing role" over the years, saying, "the education of the city's children is their main priority."

School Committee-woman Jo-Ann Bragg said Tuesday the committee members approved the pay hike and sent it to the City Council because it seemed only fair.

"It hadn't gone up in over 10 years," she said. "None of us are there for the money, and it's all a labor of love, but we do put an awful lot of time into this."

The current annual pay for a city councillor is $12,000.

Domestic Violence: A Problem Of Epidemic Proportions

By Ann Marie Simone, M.Ed.
Executive Director, DOVE

Stalked, beaten and finally shot to death in her bedroom. Every time a woman is killed by a husband or lover in a case related to domestic violence, we cringe and we speak out, but the question is, what can we do to stop it?

Domestic violence is a crime. This is simple, clear language to describe an otherwise complicated matter. No woman wants to believe that the man who said he would "love, honor and cherish" her would kill her. And we support this denial in our everyday disregard for domestic violence.

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month. Unfortunately, the things that make us most aware of domestic violence are its final outcomes: the murder of a woman and an innocent child's loss of his mother.

According to the Bureau of Justice Statistics, domestic violence causes more injury to women in the United States than car accidents, rapes and muggings combined. Last year alone, between 1.5 and 3 million children witnessed their mothers being beaten by a husband or lover. This is a problem of epidemic proportions. Battered women are not strangers who live on someone else's street in some other community. They are our sisters, daughters, mothers, friends. They need our attention and they will be killed by our silence and denial.

We do not talk about the specifics of violence. We use nice words to describe the seemingly endless punching, kicking, burning, slamming, dragging behavior that batters engage in over and over again. We are shocked and outraged; we say that people "keep to themselves" or "didn't ask for help."

Over and over, people ask "why didn't she leave?" instead of "why does he do that?" The truth is, she does leave, sometimes four or five times, before she can make a clean break. Most women are killed after they seek restraining orders, in the two months after leaving the relationship (Wilson and Daly, "Violence and Victims," 1993). There are hundreds of reasons to go back, and women leave every day, struggling to support themselves and their children.

It is time we talked about the plain truth about domestic violence. We talk about how awful it is, what happens to "those poor women," and yet we do nothing. Not because we don't care, but because we are paralyzed by the reality and brutality of violence in our homes.

It is time we started living like a community. Start talking to your neighbors. Get involved. Volunteer with women or children. Speak out about domestic violence at work. Offer to be a safe place for a woman you know. Give the number of the shelter to a woman you think might have a problem. You can make a difference in one woman's life. You can help to save the mother of a child who needs her.

If you are a battered woman, if you live in fear of your partner, or feel controlled by him, there is someone to talk to, there is help for you. You are not alone. The local shelter number is 471-1234 (DOVE). If you are not in Quincy or surrounding areas or you lose the number, the 411 operator can give it to you.

The Quincy Police Department can help, too. Call 911. Quincy District Court and the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office Domestic Violence Unit can help. You have options.

You can live free of violence. You have a right to be safe in your home. Your children have a right to live without violence.

He's Off And Rolling

Well, he's off and rolling. Bill Morrill left Quincy Tuesday on his ambassador of goodwill tour which will take him to 12 other Quincys with greetings and mementos from the "City of Presidents."

His first destination is Quincy, Pa., which he expects to reach by today (Thursday).

Next stop, Quincy, West Va. And then in order: Quincy, Ky., Quincy, Oh., Quincy, Ind., Quincy, Mich., Quincy, Ill. (our sister city), Quincy, Mo., Quincy, Wash., Quincy, Calif., Quincy, Miss., and Quincy, Fla.

Morrill figures he'll put between 12,000 and 15,000 miles on his 1995 Ford club wagon which will be his home away from home.

BILL MORRILL waves so-long as he leaves Quincy Tuesday to visit 12 other Quincys in the U.S. (Presidential Camera photo)

And he feels it will take four to six weeks to make it to all the Quincys.

"It may take longer," he says. "But I want to be back for the Christmas parade." That's Nov. 29.

Morrill, who owns Creative Fairs, a special events firm and is a Quincy native, is the parade director and hasn't missed one in 28 years. "I've got to get back for this one," he says.

As noted here last week, Morrill estimates the trip will cost something like $5,000. He put up $2,000 of his own money. Since the column some sponsors have stepped forward to help share the figure to $1,500.

Monetary donors include Mayor James Sheets, Edward Keohane, Bob Curry, contractor Bob Kennedy, Atty. David Mahoney, Mike McFarland, Tom and Joe Koch, Barry Welch, Dave Murphy, the Flag Committee and The Sun.

Morrill will be carrying a letter of greetings to the Quincys from Mayor Sheets which says, in part:

"Greetings from the Mayor and the citizens of Quincy, Massachusetts. We are pleased to be represented in your community by Mr. Bill Morrill and we cordially invite a closer association between the citizens of our two communities.

"Quincy, Massachusetts is very rich in history. We are the birthplace of the second and sixth Presidents of the United States. The Massachusetts Constitution which was the basis for the United States Constitution, was written here in Quincy.

"We are the site of the first granite quarry and the first commercial railroad. Quincy's Fore River shipyard was, and is on its way to again being, an important factor in shipbuilding for our country.

"We are very proud of our City and especially the gentleman who carries this message for us. We here in Quincy, Massachusetts, hope you will some day have an opportunity to enjoy our hospitality."

Morrill will also be delivering mementoes and other donated items to the 12 Quincys, including:

Police and Fire Department uniform patches, Quincy buttons from City Council President Peter Kolson, Night Night Buttons from Mike Cheney, Quincy sweatshirts from the Recreation Department; Cleaner, Greener shirts from the Park Department; Quincy 2000

From 1876 to 1976, the average height of 18-year-old males in the U.S. increased by about four inches.

brochures, Quincy business literature from the QCBPA, literature about John and John Quincy Adams from the Adams Historic Site, copies of The Quincy Sun and its Historic Quincy supplement, and other literature.

"I'm overwhelmed by the support Quincy has given me," says Morrill. "In fact, I have received so many items, I've had to hitch up a trailer to the wagon."

He believes in being prepared so he's also taking along some handy items such as a snow shovel, rock salt, rope, emergency lights and a portable generator.

"You never can tell what kind of weather or what you might run into," he says.

Morrill has a TV camera with him to shoot scenes of the other Quincys for a millennium celebration documentary planned by Quincy Access Television. He will interview and have residents of the other Quincys recording greetings such as "Happy New Year, Happy New Century, Quincy, Mass."

Morrill says he obtained the locations of the 12 Quincys from the U.S. Postal Service. They have only the 12 in addition to our Quincy.

Morrill thought there might have been a 13th. Someone told him there was one in New Hampshire near Plymouth, N.H.

He called Plymouth State College to confirm it. "But," he says, "they told me it was just a bog named Quincy."

Morrill hopes there are still some sponsors out there who might help reimburse him for that last $1,500 when he gets back.

If you'd like to help the cause, you can send it to his home, 22 Beebe Road, Quincy, MA 02169. Or drop it off at the Sun office.

"I'd be most grateful," he says.

THREE FLAGS -- U.S., city of Quincy, and the Marines Corps -- are being donated to the new Clifford H. Marshall School.

They are gifts from John Gillis, former city clerk and present Norfolk County commissioner, and Bill Draicchio, member of the Board of Registrars and retired Quincy police officer.

Gillis and Draicchio are making the presentation in memory of the late Sheriff Clifford Marshall for whom the school is named, a long-time friend and fellow Marine.

The three flags will be at the school for Sunday's dedication ceremonies.

CITY CLERK Joseph Shea got an unexpected one-week delay in the surgery he was scheduled to undergo at Quincy Hospital last Thursday.

The surgery, to remove a growth in his throat, had to be postponed because his surgeon was detained the last minute. It is rescheduled for today (Thursday).

Shea was a little disappointed at the postponement. "I want to be back in time for the election," he notes.

PERSONAL: Happy birthday to Peggy Behan, a favorite neighbor of mine growing up in Quincy Point. Which birthday? "Let's say," she laughs. "I have had 39 summers and just a few more winters."

She is really one of the lucky ones who have found the Fountain of Youth.

Committee Agreed A Marine Should Be Part Of WWII Statue

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

This will refer to a letter from Leo Cardarelli which appeared in your paper dated Oct. 15, 1998.

In his letter, he states that a Marine should be on the monument along with the soldier, sailor and nurse.

First of all, the female on the pedestal is not a nurse but a woman dressed in military uniforms who is representing all the women who served in the military during WWII.

Secondly, Mr. Cardarelli erroneously stated he received many calls from "irate" former Marines who claimed they had contracted the committee and were told they were part of the Navy. No Marine ever called anyone on my committee to complain. I am the chairman of the committee and for Mr. Cardarelli to make a statement like that only makes one wonder about the rest of the accuracy of his letter.

Who were the Marines who called the committee members when the telephone numbers weren't available? Where was Mr. Cardarelli prior to Aug. 27, 1998?

My committee already agreed over three weeks ago that a Marine should be on the pedestal. All we are waiting for are the sketches.

Where has this man been for the last three years? You guessed it. He knew nothing about the statue, until he saw a picture of it in The Sun. Where were other members of the Caddy Detachment when they were asked for assistance? About three years ago, when I approached the Detachment for assistance, I was told to leave because I was not a Marine. Now Mr. Cardarelli has awakened from a deep sleep and is protesting.

Mr. Cardarelli had the nerve to state that the Gates of Heaven are guarded by Marines. Well, no Marines were in the invasion of Normandy on June 6, 1944 and enemy bullets and shells show no preference on who goes to Heaven.

Urges Yes Vote On Question 4

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

For over three years, a wide range of groups and individuals worked to develop the New Massachusetts Electricity Law. The result is a well written, balanced law that's good for consumers, the environment, and the economy.

Now that our new law and all its benefits are threatened by a repeal referendum on the Nov. 3 ballot, a broad coalition has been formed to urge a YES vote on Question 4—to keep the law in place. The members of the YES on 4 Coalition are diverse, including many individuals and groups who aren't usually on the same side. Yet on this issue, environmental groups and businesses, consumer advocates and energy providers all agree—YES on 4!

Join us in supporting lower electric rates, consumer protections and cleaner air. To become a

Supports Flag Amendment

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a U.S. Naval aviator shot down by the North Vietnamese during the Vietnam War, I spent eight and a half years as a prisoner of war. Throughout more than 3,000 days in captivity, the other prisoners and I would hold a weekly ritual to lift our spirits.

Every Sunday a coded message was sent through the camp to signal the start of a secret church service. After whispering a prayer, we would turn to the east, place our hands over our hearts and recite the Pledge of Allegiance.

For one brief moment, we were united in one purpose and we were, in some small way, one country and one nation. No matter how cruelly we were treated, our prayer to our God and our pledge to our flag was never broken.

Now, 25 years after my liberation from a prisoner of war camp in Hanoi, I feel our flag has been taken away from the American people by the courts. I believe they have misinterpreted the First Amendment by saying it's OK to desecrate our national banner.

Fortunately for the American people, there is a way to repair the damage and that is through a constitutional amendment.

The amendment effort I support, Senate Joint Resolution 40, the Flag Protection Amendment does not, on its own, protect the flag. It merely returns to the American people the right to protect their flag. And through public opinion polls, state legislatures and assemblies of civic and fraternal organizations—133 of whom are united as the Citizens Flag Alliance—the super-majority of Americans have shown their confidence that they can act fairly and sensibly through their national legislature to protect the U.S. flag.

It has been said that the flag represents the right to burn it. The vast majority of the American people, myself included, don't see it that way. To say an individual's freedom would be limited or put in jeopardy by allowing the American people to protect their flag is to truly misunderstand the definition of the word "freedom" itself. Perhaps it is not until you have lost your freedom that you understand how precious it is.

During moments of badly-needed inspiration, when I had lost my freedoms, I visualized the American flag. For me, and for the other prisoners, those few moments every week were essential for our existence.

As I look to the future, I believe the U.S. Senate must do what is right and approve the Flag Protection Amendment. It could perhaps be essential for our existence of a nation governed by "We the People."

Health Advisory Council Meetings

The Quincy Public Schools Health Advisory Council announces its meeting schedule for 1998-99.

Raymondi Supports Proposal Bank Seeks To Open Branch At Former Quincy Oil Co.

The Massachusetts Cooperative Bank, which has offices in Boston and East Milton, has entered into an agreement to purchase the former Quincy Oil Co. building at 70 Quincy Ave. for the purpose of establishing a new branch at the site.

The bank has proposed the renovation and expansion of the building, within the existing footprint and height, to provide office space on the second floor for its banking operations as well as retail space on the existing first floor for both a bank branch office and one additional retail tenant.

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi, who held a neighborhood meeting on the plan last week, said he fully supports the bank's proposal.

"I'm excited about Massachusetts Cooperative Bank coming to the City of Quincy and the Ward 2 area in particular," he said. "I think it's going to be a great use of this building. It's going to be a tremendous asset."

The project requires a Planned Unit Development permit from the City Council. Noting that the plan is in its preliminary stages, Raymondi said he looks forward to working with the bank through the permitting process, which will include at least one public hearing.

City Planning Sale Of JFK Health Center

The city is planning to sell the John F. Kennedy Health Center, 1120 Hancock St., Quincy Center, and eventually move the offices formerly housed there into the Quincy Center for Technical Education.

Mayor James Sheets has asked the City Council to make the property available for sale. The council will vote on the matter at a future date.

Sheets said the building is now empty but used to house the city's health, in-spectional services, weights and measures, and veterans services departments. Those departments were moved to other sites while renovations were being done at the facility, he said.

Sheets said the Center for Technical Education is seen as an ideal location for a municipal building. Since plans call for the CTE to be incorporated into the new Quincy High School scheduled to open in 2002, the current CTE building will serve as the new home for the above-mentioned city departments and the JFK Center will be sold, he said.

Sheets would not speculate on any potential selling price for the JFK Center.

We need you.

Sheets, Officials Endorse Bellotti Sheriff Candidacy

Mayor James Sheets endorsed state Rep.-Michael Bellotti, the Democratic candidate for Norfolk County sheriff, during a rally outside City Hall.

"It's an honor to support Michael Bellotti for Norfolk County sheriff. He is a native son. We've had other native sons before in that office. Kippy Marshall was one Michael Bellotti will serve in the great tradition of Kippy Marshall. That's why we should make sure that Michael Bellotti is the next sheriff of Norfolk County," Sheets told a crowd of about 100 supporters.

City Council President Peter Kolson also endorsed Bellotti.

"Being here is important, but being there in November is what really counts," Kolson said.

Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymondi, a former Norfolk County treasurer, said voters faced a similar campaign 24 years ago when a Republican sheriff criticized Clifford "Kippy" Marshall for saying he was too young, too inexperienced, and void of ideas.

"Thank God the voters of Norfolk County said no to that rhetoric," Raymondi said.

Bellotti thanked Sheets and the other officials who came out to endorse him. He also praised his supporters, who he said helped make up one of "the strongest grass-roots organizations Norfolk County has ever seen."

The sheriff's race, Bellotti said, comes down to three things.

"Job performance. The job is not getting done. Leadership. People are looking for new leadership. And the budget. The budget at the Sheriff's Office has increased by 70 percent in the last two years," Bellotti said. "The taxpayers of Norfolk County are not getting their money's worth right now."

Quincy officials who were present at the event were Councilors Paul Harold, Michael D'Amico, Patrick McDermott, Stephen Durkin, Bruce Ayers, and Timothy Cahill.

State Rep. Ronald Mariano and School Committee members

Michael MacFarland and Sean Barry.

Not able to attend the rally, but also supporting Bellotti are Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Stephen Tobin and School Committee members Joanne Bragg and Linda Stice.

$186,000 Appropriated For Public Works Projects

A total of $186,000 was appropriated by the City Council on Monday night for two separate public works projects.

The council appropriated $130,000 from the city's Sewer Rehabilitation Fund for the replacement of sewer lines on Edgewater Drive from Macy to Darrow streets.

Another $56,000 was taken from the city's "free cash" (cash reserve) account for seawall construction on Riverbank Road.

Department of Public Works Operations Manager Lester Gerry said both projects should be completed before the start of winter.

Neponset River Cleanup Saturday

Tenth grade biology students from North Quincy High School will co-sponsor a cleanup of the banks of the Neponset River this Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon.

The cleanup is also being co-sponsored by the Ward 5 Community Association, the Metropolitan District Commission and the Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

Volunteers can meet at the main entrance to the high school at 9:15 a.m. or on Commander Shea Boulevard at 9:45 a.m. The area that will be targeted for cleaning will be on the Quincy side of the river near the Joseph Harold MBTA commuter train bridge and Shea Boulevard.

Volunteers are asked to dress appropriately. Gloves and boots are recommended. For more information, call Doug Gutro at 328-7982.

HEPATITIS C

Hepatitis C is a communicable liver disease characterized by a swelling of the liver, impairing the liver's functions of fighting infections, stopping bleeding, removing toxins from the blood, and storing nutrients for energy. This life threatening form of hepatitis is caused by a virus spread by contact with an infected person's blood through sharing needles, unsterile body piercing or tattoo equipment, tainted blood transfusion/organ transplant prior to 1992 (when they mandated testing for Hepatitis C), or through sexual contact. This virus cannot be passed by casual contact. Early symptoms may be vague and flu-like, but may include dark yellow urine, light colored stools, or jaundiced skin or eyes. Use of interferon, usually for a year, is the preferred protocol.

Today's disease fighters are more effective than ever, but taking good routine care of yourself is your wisest route toward boosting your immune system and avoiding illness. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. Lengthy duration or severity of Hepatitis C may cause liver failure and necessitate a liver transplant.

Sheriff's Office To Host Women's Symposium Today

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office will hold a Women's Symposium entitled "Coming Home: Helping Female Offenders Reintegrate to Society" today (Thursday) from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

The symposium, hosted by Sheriff Jack Flood, is designed to serve a dual purpose: to bring professionals together to identify the resources necessary to help women offenders seeking recovery to successfully reintegrate to the community, and to provide participants with a foundation from which to develop support systems that will help them achieve excellence in their chosen careers.

Keynote speaker will be Susan Weld, a lecturer at Harvard University and Boston College Law School. She earned her Ph.D. from

SUSAN WELD

Harvard's Department of East Asian Languages and Civilizations in 1998, a B.A. degree from Radcliffe College in 1987, and a J.D. degree from Harvard Law School in 1974.

Weld is recognized locally and nationally as an advocate for many women's issues, was a delegate to the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women in China in 1995, is a co-founder of MassAction for Women, serves on various boards and has received awards for her efforts.

Opening the symposium will be Linda Hyde, director of the Women's Mentoring Program at MCI-Framingham, which she developed in 1993 to help women successfully transition from prison to the community.

The symposium will include four workshops from which participants can choose: Sexual Harassment in the Workplace, Domestic Violence, The Family/Reintegration Issues, and Creating Options for Success: Careers for Women in Criminal Justice.

About 150 women and men, primarily from the law enforcement and business communities in Norfolk County, are expected to attend.

Council To Vote On Proposed Patrolmen's Raises Nov. 9

Proposed pay raises for the city's police patrolmen will be voted on by the City Council next month.

Mayor James Sheets sent the pay hikes to the council at its meeting Monday night. The item was placed in the council's Ordinance Committee, and a vote will be taken at the Nov. 9 meeting.

The agreement reached two weeks ago by city officials and the patrolmen's union calls for 2, 3 and 4 percent raises respectively over the next three years.

Currently, patrolmen earn a starting annual salary of $29,327 and are eligible for three raises that peak at a figure of $40,880. Beginning in 2001, the final year of the new agreement, the starting salary would rise to $32,043 and the top pay would be $44,667.

Sheets called the new pact "an historic agreement that allows for community policing to be possible" by allowing greater flexibility in terms of a patrolman's duties.

"I think it's a good contract for the officers, a good contract for the city, and a good contract for community policing. It's a good contract all-around," he said.

Louise Marshall Endorses Flood

Mrs. Louise Marshall, wife of the late Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall, has endorsed the candidacy of Sheriff Jack Flood.

Mrs. Marshall said Flood is the best candidate to build on the legacy of her husband, who died in office in 1996 after more than two decades of service.

"When he was the sheriff of Norfolk County, my husband Cliff Marshall established a legacy of integrity and commitment," she said. "When we lost Cliff, I realized it would take a very dedicated and responsible person to continue that legacy. That person is Jack Flood."

"I am honored to have earned the endorsement of Louise Marshall," Flood said. "Her husband built a strong legacy in the Sheriff's Office, and I am proud to have continued this very important work," Sheriff Flood said.

Flood cited as accomplishments in his two years in office the expansion of two programs founded by Sheriff Marshall. The Braintree Alternative Center, which opened in 1985 to address the substance abuse problems of inmates, added a Female Offender Unit in May. For the first time, female inmates are housed and rehabilitated by the Sheriff's Office.

The Community Service Program, started by Sheriff Marshall to put inmates to work to benefit non-profit groups, expanded from five crews to 10 under Flood, he noted.

"In two decades as sheriff, Cliff Marshall literally built the office into a nationally recognized correctional operation," Flood said. The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office is one of 43 correctional facilities nationwide to hold accreditation from both the American Correctional Association and the National Commission on Correctional Health Care.

Today, the Sheriff's Office has a $23 million budget, about 700 inmates and 350 employees, Flood said.

Flood cited his background as a lawyer for 25 years, a businessman for 13 years and a state representative for 10 years before becoming sheriff.

12 Residents Enrolled At Franklin Institute

Twelve Quincy residents have enrolled at Franklin Institute in Boston.

Prosecutors, Police Assn. Endorse Locke

General and U.S. Sen. Edward Brooke.

Others endorsing Locke at the ceremony were Massachusetts District Attorneys Association President Michael Sullivan, Plymouth County District Attorney Ralph Martin, Northwestern District Attorney Elizabeth Scheibel, and District Attorney for the Cape and Islands Phillip Rollins.

"I'm humbled and honored by the support of those who have fought for public safety for the past several decades," Locke said in accepting the endorsements.

Locke also recently was endorsed by the State Police Association of Massachusetts, which is comprised of all branches of the Massachusetts State Police.

"I am honored by this declaration of support, particularly coming from police officers with whom I have worked at the state and federal level for 18 years," he said. "I am proud of the professionalism, dedication and integrity of the Massachusetts State Police."

Why has the least qualified candidate for sheriff initiated the negative attack ads?

Where is Michael Bellotti? Why has he begun using smear tactics in his attempt to become Sheriff. And why won't he debate?

Apparently he doesn't get it.

Norfolk County voters want facts, not false impressions. The truth, not half-truths.

By throwing mud, Michael Bellotti may hope to distract voters from seeing his own inadequacies. But he's fooling nobody.

There's one glaring fact he can't hide.

He doesn't have the qualifications.

- ✕ He has no experience in corrections, law enforcement or criminal justice.
- ✕ His key business experience consists of a failed attempt at self-employment.
- ✕ He lacks education relevant to the job, with just a bachelor's degree in English.
- ✕ He did little to distinguish himself during three terms in the legislature and held no leadership positions.

Michael Bellotti has made outrageous statements with little regard for the facts. When challenged he runs away.

He ignored early debate requests, then never showed up at the one he did agree to. What is he hiding from, the truth?

Norfolk County deserves better.

Sheriff Jack Flood respects voters and believes strongly in their right to an open, honest discussion of issues-based on facts.

He has brought his integrity, his ideas and his professionalism to the job. Under his leadership the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office is rated in the top one percent of corrections departments nationally.

Those are facts. And voters deserve them.

Let's keep Jack Flood as sheriff.

He's what a Sheriff should be: Experienced, professional—and doing the job right for all of Norfolk County.

Qualifications, experience and personal integrity are what count.

Homeowners Protection Act Good News For Consumers

By CAROL BULMAN

More than 15 percent of all loans today are being written with private mortgage insurance (PMI), a policy that is required by a lender when a borrower puts down less than 20 percent when obtaining a mortgage.

Unfortunately, until recently, customers were not clearly informed about the opportunity to have the mortgage insurance dropped once their loan reached an 80 percent loan-to-value ratio.

A major complaint against lenders has been that homeowners often were paying monthly PMI premiums well past the time it was necessary. But with enactment of The Homeowners Protection Act of 1998, there is help on the way.

The Homeowners Protection Act of 1998 has been approved by both houses of Congress and soon will be signed into law by President Clinton. The new law provides for automatic cancellation once the principal balance of a mortgage reaches 78 percent of the home's original price. An additional provision requires lenders to inform borrowers of their cancellation opportunities annually.

There are two ways in which the cancellation can be initiated.

Borrower-initiated cancellation

When a mortgage that is subject to PMI reaches an 80 percent loan-to-value ratio based on the initial amortization schedule (written amortization schedules are required to be given to the borrowers as part of the new disclosure requirements), the borrower may make a written request that the PMI be canceled.

The lender must, in a

timely manner, cancel the PMI as long as the borrower has a good payment history--this means no mortgage payment 60 days or longer past due during the last 12 months, and the borrower has no additional liens on the property.

Automatic termination

When a mortgage that is subject to PMI reached a 78 percent loan-to-value ratio based on the original amortization schedule, PMI must be dropped by the lender. Again, this is based on the borrower being current on payments. Once the borrower becomes current, the PMI will be dropped automatically.

In the case that you are paying PMI but do not feel you have reached the equity threshold necessary for automatic cancellation, most banks will consider dropping PMI if your property is worth more because of improvements you have made or through regular appreciation.

Generally, a lender will require that the loan be on their books for at least two years to consider this option, and will also require that the borrower hire an appraiser from their list of approved appraisers to determine the actual value of the home. In this case, the lender will still be concerned about any late payments and can deem you ineligible if you have been delinquent in the past year.

It is important to note that this legislation will not become effective until one year after the date of enactment (July/August 1999). There will, however, be disclosure requirements in this year's year-end statements that are sent to customers.

The Homeowners Protection Act of 1998 is consumer-friendly legislation that truly is good news for today's borrowers.

Preparation And Backup Heat: Keys To Survival

Who will ever forget that hundreds of thousands of people in the northeastern portion of two different nations suffered for days--and weeks--last winter with a ravaging ice storm? The storm downed power lines and trapped people in their homes without heat, food and water.

"Last year's ice storm pointed out how reliant we all are on electricity and that people should have a backup heat source," said Mike Leach of Ithaca, N.Y. "It's hard to understand how devastating this was, unless you were there. Power outages around here don't usually last too long, so we were totally unprepared."

Store owners, managers and staff of independent fireplace and stove shops throughout the northeastern United States heard some of the most heartbreaking stories last year as residents called them because they were either without heat or out of fuel, or because they wanted to purchase backup heat systems. Unfortunately, the severity of the storm made it difficult, and sometimes virtually impossible, to get help to people quickly.

As a result, fireplace and stove shop personnel throughout the Northeast encourage homeowners to be sure to be prepared this winter and have their heating systems in top condition before the cold weather hits. And, because many furnaces are powered by electricity, fireplace and stove professionals are also urging consumers to have an alternate heat source (such as wood, gas or pellet, or a fireplace insert) as well as an ample supply of fuel.

"During last year's storm, there were people without power who managed to keep warm and have hot meals," says Ray Graham of Bangor, Maine. "These were people with alternate heat sources--and ample fuel."

Graham described "get-by" parties held in neighborhoods in his area. As many as 15 or 20 neighbors would gather at the home of someone who owned a wood stove. Families shared what could be cooked on the wood stove (soup, hot chocolate, toast and so forth), played board games, and worked together to "get by."

"Those who owned generators shared them," and people moved their generators from one home to another," he says.

Graham, a fireplace, wood and gas stove professional and owner of Sunrise Home and Hearth in Bangor, said people who had gas stoves also were able to stay warm without electricity, and those with battery packs on their pellet stoves had heat.

Brian Fraser of Sun Dance Leisure in Watertown, N.Y., recalled that a lot of people kept warm with pellet stoves that had their own generators. But he cautioned people they need to have the appropriate generator, to avoid any system malfunction.

"The circuit boards aren't always compatible," he says.

Other people suffered because they were low on propane gas and were not able to get delivery fast enough.

Graham said not only did the ice storm take its toll on people, it wreaked havoc with homes. Many homes suffered frozen pipes.

"Alternative heat is also important for a house," Graham says. "There's less chance the pipes in a house will freeze if it has an efficient backup heat source."

He cautioned that most fireplaces do not create heat from inside the home. People should not count on their fireplace to keep their home warm--or to keep the pipes under and around the home warm.

For more information on backup heat sources, hearth products and a list of professional fireplace and stove professionals, contact the Northeast Hearth Products Association at (603) 226-0852.

Most Americans To Get Own Home

(NAPS)—An unprecedented effort to raise the level of home ownership across the nation by Realtors, the United States Congress, Habitat for Humanity International and others is taking place. The project is called The House(s) That Congress Built: In Your Congressional District and the goal is to build a Habitat or other "self help" house in all 435 congressional districts in 1998.

On May 20, 1997, the House of Representatives passed a resolution that stated the importance of a simple, decent place to live for every American and announced plans to build two Habitat for Humanity Houses in Washington, D.C. Construction began in June by members of Congress and their staff, more than 20 housing-related organizations, including the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest professional association, and Habitat for Humanity. The keys of the completed houses were handed over to the new owners in October.

Together these groups, part of the National Partners in Homeownership, hope to increase the number of home owners by eight million. The national home ownership rate recently reached 66 percent, a record rate in the U.S., but the National Partners in Homeownership's goal is to reach at least 67.5 percent by the year 2000. The House(s) That Congress Built: In Your Congressional District is just one way that they hope to contribute to that goal.

The project's vision is to have every member of Congress participate in building a Habitat House in his or her own district, working with Realtors, home builders, for profit and non profit organizations and a low-income family. Hundreds of Habitat affiliates across the country are committed to this effort. Realtors have become increasingly involved in local programs to help low- and moderate-income families achieve home ownership. Their efforts include creating below-market rate financing programs, developing trust funds for revolving loan funds for down payment assistance and home ownership counseling.

According to NAR, the project can develop community partnerships that will continue long after the housing construction is completed. To learn more about the project and how you can help, call NAR at 202-383-1188 or Habitat for Humanity International at 202-628-9171.

Don't Let Water Damage Leave You High And Dry

The recent record amount of rainfall (not to mention the future forecast) may have left you looking for higher ground, but the Better Business Bureau advises homeowners not to be left high and dry—before hiring anyone to fix extensive storm damage, contact the BBB for the contractor's service record.

Unfortunately, opportunists often take advantage of a homeowner's emergency needs and target disaster areas.

Before having any work done, homeowners should check with their insurance company or agent about policy coverage and specific claim filing requirements. If you performed any emergency repair work yourself, document your actions for insurance purposes.

Don't be pressured into signing a contract for long term repairs. Emergency repairs may need to be done quickly to prevent further damage, or to allow you to remain in your home, but homeowners should take time to find a reliable contractor to make permanent repairs.

*If you hire a contractor, check out the background of the company to make sure it is licensed and registered by the state. Massachusetts state law requires all contractors performing jobs over $1,000 be registered with the state.

*Beware of fly-by-night repair businesses soliciting work in unmarked trucks and requiring advanced payment. Hire local firms that have a good reputation in your community.

*Be wary of any contractor that comes to your home unsolicited.

*Do not allow anyone to work on your home without a written contract. The contract should stipulate the name, address, and license number of the contractor, a detailed description of the work to be done and the materials to be used, any fees such as building permits, the completion date, and the amount of money to be paid.

*Never tell a contractor how much money you can afford to spend on a job. The estimate may turn out to match the amount exactly.

*Don't give in to high-pressure techniques, such as "the price is good only for today."

*Never play for the entire job in advance. The deposit should be no more than one third of the total contract price. Do not pay cash to a contractor or salesperson. Make out a check or money order to the company.

For more information, call the Better Business Bureau at 426-9000.

Sheets, City Council Members Endorse Keating

Mayor James Sheets and the City Council have endorsed Senator Bill Keating for Norfolk County district attorney.

"Bill Keating will work to keep our community safe," Sheets said. "I know he will keep the best interests of Quincy at heart as district attorney."

Councillors Dan Raymond, Tim Cahill, Patrick McDermott, Steve Durkin, Paul Harold, Peter Kolson, Michael D'Amico and Bruce Ayers have joined state Senator Michael Morrissey, Rep. Michael Bellotti and Rep. Ron Mariano, School Committee members Jo-Ann Bragg and Michael McFarland and County Commissioner John Gillis in supporting Keating.

"Bill Keating has cooperated with police and community leaders to find new ways to fight crime in our neighborhoods," Kolson said. "That's why so many law enforcement and city officials are supporting him."

The Weymouth Board of Selectmen has also endorsed Keating, as has the Fraternal Order of Police.

Keating, who serves as Senate chairman of the Judiciary Committee and vice chairman of Criminal Justice, wrote the laws establishing Drug Free School Zones protecting victims of domestic violence.

This year the Massachusetts Office of Victims Assistance and the Coalition of Police named Keating Legislator of the Year.

'Pride Sign' Dedicated At North Quincy High

The North Quincy High School Interact Club, along with representatives of the Quincy Rotary Club and Bell Atlantic, recently held a dedication ceremony to reveal the school's new "Pride Sign" at the intersection of Hancock and East Squantum streets.

The sign, which is replacing one that was damaged in a car accident a number of years ago, will announce upcoming events at the school.

During the ceremony, Robert Noble of Bell Atlantic Co. presented a check for $3,000. The Rotary Club and Interact Club contributed about $400 and $100 respectively toward the sign.

Others on hand included Quincy School Supt. Eugene Creedon, North Quincy

High Principal Eileen Feeney, Acting Vice Principal Michael Hurley, recently-retired Principal Peter Chisom and Interact Club Faculty Advisor Virginia Fidalgo along with students President Sarah Houghton, Secretary Amy Cheung, and members Lynda Wilson, Jessica Sprague, and Priye Karki. Representing the Rotary Club were Lynne Houghton, past president; Marybeth Curren, also head of the Counseling Center at the high school; Michael

Contractor Turning Heads In Quincy Neighborhood

LOCAL: Neighbors are talking about a local company that built a 25' x 40' second level that turned a two bedroom cape into a 4 bedroom garrison in 21 hours. Patrick J. Flaherty of Flaherty Contracting says it all comes down to good planning and being organized. With interest rates down, it's a good time to borrow and add on instead of selling because the house market is high and it makes it difficult to trade up in size. Flaherty Contracting is a full service home improvement contractor. Fully licensed and insured. They can handle your needs whether it is an addition, new kitchen or bath as well as your roofing, siding and window needs.

RED RAIDER MIDFIELDER Kellie Conley (left) carries the ball as a Bridgewater-Raynham defender closes in. North defeated visiting B-R, 3-1, last Friday for its first-ever victory over the Trojans. Heading into this week, North is unbeaten in its last eight games.

NORTH QUINCY'S four senior captains, from left, sweeper Rachael Powers, stopper Dorothy Cronin, goalkeeper Kristen Bowes and forward Betsy Stone, have helped spark NQ to its second straight tournament berth. Powers and Cronin are the defensive stalwarts in front of Bowes, who has recorded nine shutouts, and Stone has collected a team-high 14 goals.

Raider Girls On A Roll, Handle B-R With Ease

North's Bowes, Stone Spark Key OCL Win

Unbeaten in its last eight games and headed for postseason play, the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team last week earned its first-ever victory over Bridgewater-Raynham.

North Quincy (8-1-4), which qualified for the tournament for the second consecutive year, visited Barnstable Tuesday and hosts Plymouth South today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. at Pageant Field.

Next Tuesday, North hosts Martha's Vineyard at 3 p.m. North's regular season finale is slated for next Thursday at 3:15 p.m. in a makeup game against visiting Falmouth, the only team NQ has lost to this season (1-0, Sept. 23). Both games are at Pageant Field.

On Saturday at 7 p.m., the Red Raiders take on rival Quincy at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

GIRLS' SOCCER

In a 3-1 victory over B-R last Friday, North senior co-captain forward Betsy Stone notched her 14th goal and the Red Raiders' defense held visiting B-R scoreless for the final 71 minutes of the game.

The Trojans got on the board first, following a scramble in front of North's goal with a hard shot past Bowes nine minutes into the first half.

"That goal was a wake-up call for us, and the girls responded well, scoring a couple quick goals," said North head coach Paul Bregoli. "We came out flat, but that goal woke us up and we controlled play from that point on."

Three minutes after the B-R goal, Stone took a pass from freshman midfielder Lauren Sleeth and beat the Trojan goalkeeper. Just two minutes later, North went ahead for good when B-R's goalkeeper made a save of a shot by junior forward Ashley Murphy but her momentum carried her into the net. The goal was Murphy's ninth of the season.

North increased its lead with six minutes remaining in the half, when Sleeth received a pass from junior midfielder Kristin Coughlin and sent it by the goalkeeper. Sophomore midfielder Kellie Conley ignited the play at midfield, sending a pass to Coughlin,

The visitors had a few opportunities to close the gap in the second half, but Bowes and North's defense was up to the challenge. Bowes finished with 10 saves, including a few key stops in the closing minutes.

Senior co-captains Rachael Powers (sweeper) and Dorothy Cronin (stopper), along with freshman sweeper Kelly Rice and senior outside back Kate Ceurvels, were commended by Bregoli for their strong defensive efforts.

NQ Boys Could Clinch First-Ever Berth Today

Red Raiders Take On Rival Quincy Saturday

Its first-ever victory over Bridgewater-Raynham put the North Quincy High School boys' soccer team at the brink of clinching the first state tournament berth in team history.

The Red Raiders entered play this week with a 6-5-2 record, leaving them four points shy of qualifying for postseason play.

North hosted non-league foe Westwood Monday and lost, 1-0, meaning the earliest it could secure a tourney berth would be today (Thursday). North hosted Barnstable on Tuesday and visits Plymouth South today at 4 p.m. Both are OCL tilts.

Two more games remain on the schedule, including Saturday's showdown against rival Quincy at 5 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. North's game against Falmouth last week was postponed due to inclement weather conditions and will be made up next Thursday at 3:15 p.m. at Falmouth.

In the 4-3 victory over host B-R, North fell behind early but responded with the first of junior midfielder

BOYS' SOCCER

Stephen Rochon's three goals halfway through the first stanza. With seven minutes left in the half, B-R took advantage of tentative play by the NQ defense and increased its lead to 3-1. North closed the gap when Rochon scored on indirect kick with a minute remaining before the half ended.

"The goal before halftime was a key factor in the game," said North head coach Robert Dano. "It made the whole team realize that this game was within our grasp."

NQ tied the score four minutes into the second half on an outstanding individual effort by Rochon, who beat three B-R defenders as he went across the goal mouth and tucked the ball just inside the left post. With the score tied, the Trojans intensified the pressure; however, North's defense, comprised of senior co-captain stopper Matt O'Mahoney, freshman sweeper David Rochon and outside backs Shawn Jafarzadeh, Mike Petrucelli and junior Bill Miller and senior goalkeeper Rob Bell, was equal to the task.

NQ junior striker Mike Panajoti scored the game-winner, lifting a shot over the oncoming goalkeeper following on a long ball from freshman forward David Rochon with two defenders covering him. B-R mounted tremendous pressure in the waning minutes, but could not get the equalizer. Also making solid contributions for North were senior co-captain Kevin Walsh (two assists) and junior midfielder Joe Flynn. "A win like this comes from both great individual and team effort," said Dano. "Each member contributes what they can, no matter what their position or role. I think everyone deserves to be recognized after a great win like this."

Other NQ team members are senior Mike Regan and juniors T.J. Bell, Brian Deshler, Rick Loughmiller, Graham McShane, Billy O'Toole, Kevin Shea and Zack Winderl.

Fowler '5' Race Draws Record Turnout

$4,800 Raised For Handicapped Children

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Beginning its second decade, the latest Fowler House "5" Road Race drew a record 273 entrants and raised an estimated $4,800, matching last year's total.

Despite the race's success, the recent 11th annual event almost didn't happen, said race organizer Bill Rizzotti. The Fowler House Cafe on Hancock St., where the race begins and ends, underwent renovations during the summer and only recently re-opened its doors.

"I didn't know if we could do it this year, because we just added a 56-seat dining room and were closed all of August," said Rizzotti, who annually donates the race day's receipts from the Rizzotti family-owned Fowler House.

"We only re-opened around Labor Day, so I didn't know if there would be enough time to organize it. But my family volunteered to help out and did a great job. I'm thankful to them and everyone who volunteered to help out."

Proceeds from the race, totaling approximately $4,800, will benefit handicapped children at the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens in Weymouth and Parkview Homes in Framingham.

The overall winner was Mark Whelan, 27, who finished the five-mile course in 29:53. Mark Whelan was the overall winner, finishing the race in 26:45.

TRACEY TIMMINS of Quincy was the first female runner to cross the finish line of the Fowler "5" race, completing the five-mile course in 29:53. Mark Whelan was the overall winner, finishing the race in 26:45.

ished the five-mile course in 26:45, ahead of Jamie Gallagher (26:49) and Kevin Hynes (34:19).

Tracey Timmins of Quincy was the top female runner, completing the course in 29:53, followed by Robin Marshall (33:46) and Marybeth Powers (34:19).

In the men's under 21 age group, three 16-year-old Weymouth High Schools students swept the top three spots: Gregory McIntosh (29:13), Chris Julian (29:24) and Dan Chretien (30:14).

Winner of the women's under 21 age group was Laurie Rizzotti, 17, in 40:38, with Meaghan Rizzotti, 13, second at 48:58.

Sean Healey (29:27), Paul Fullam (34:16) and Greg Wallace (35:55) were the top three runners in the men's 21-29 age group.

Winning the women's 21-29 age group was Lisa Bubencik, 25, of Quincy in 38:13. She was followed by Marice Van Raalt (38:28) and Quincy's Leslie O'Grady, 28, who finished in 40:05.

In the men's 30-39 age group, the top three runners were Mike Kearney (28:37), Scott Noyce (29:55) and Chris Burgess (29:55).

Caroven Mollvey (34:27) was the men's 30-39 age group winner, followed by Nancy MacDonald (35:22) and Karen Proia (38:45).

Vin Chiapetta edged out Bill Ramsay, 28:48 to 29:05, to win the men's 40-49 age division. George Hitt (29:41) came in third.

BILL RIZZOTTI, the organizer of the annual Fowler House "5" race in Quincy, prepares the runners for the race, which raised approximately $4,800 for handicapped children. Now in its 11th year, the event drew a record number of 273 entrants.

37:12 was the best in the women's 40-49 age division, ahead of Lauralie Wallace (39:13) and Dee Dee Mariano (39:35).

The top men's 50-59 age division runner was Jake Mahoney, with a time of 30:58. He narrowly finished ahead of Harry Frost (31:03). Placing third was Jorge Espada (33:21).

Kathleen Hefner of Quincy won the women's 50-59 age division (42:17), ahead of Judy Klier (43:58) and Bonnie Snyder (46:31).

Don Murray ran it in 34:11, good for first in the men's 60-69 age division. He was followed by John Difrance (39:37) and George Johnston (40:13).

OCL Title Meet Oct. 27

NQ Girls Improve To 7-0; Boys Earn First Victory

Heading into Tuesday's meet against rival Quincy and Fontbonne, North Quincy High School's girls' cross-country team remained unbeaten and the North boys' squad picked up their first win of the season.

The Old Colony League championship meet is slated for next Tuesday, Oct. 27 at 3 p.m. at Silver Lake Regional High School.

The Red Raider girls improved their record to 7-0 with a convincing 22-38 win over Plymouth South and a squeaker over Plymouth North, 27-28, last Tuesday at Pageant Field. The North boys (1-6) defeated South, 23-33, but fell to North, 25-36.

North's girls were led by Lynda Wilson, who set a school record with a second-place finish of 20:23. Wilson was followed by teammates Sarah Houghton (third, 21:04), Linda Nguyen (seventh, 21:56), KellyRose O'Brien (11th, 22:40), Christine Marre (12th, 23:23), Natalie Caron (13th, 23:38) and Genevieve O'Brien (16th, 24:11).

"We didn't run a good meet against the Plymouths in the girls race, but we survived," said North head coach Geoff Hennessy.

"That's four meets in 10 days, tough for some of the mighty-mites we have on the girls squad. With some rest and training we'll be ready for the postseason."

In the boys' meet, Brian Breslin and Jeff Bartoloni continued to pace North's squad, finishing 1-2 and assuring themselves of Old Colony League All-Star status. Breslin ran the 3.1-mile course in 17:16, narrowly ahead of Bartoloni (17:20). North's Steve Wilkie placed 12th (20:11).

HN Manets, Mustangs Last Of The Unbeaten

YOUTH FOOTBALL

Following a weekend of rainouts, the Quincy Youth Football League season resumed on Sunday with two teams remaining unbeaten.

The Milton Mustangs (4-0) and Houghs Neck Manets (4-0) look to keep their unbeaten records intact Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The Manets take on the North Quincy Apaches (3-1) at 1 p.m., the Quincy Point Panthers (1-3) play the Quantum Storm (0-4) at 2:30 p.m. The Mustangs battle the Elks (0-4) at 4 p.m.

In recent action at Milton, 22 second-half points by the Apaches were not enough as the Mustangs held on for a 28-22 victory.

The Mustangs jumped out to a 20-0 lead in the first half, putting together two impressive drives for touchdowns and returning an interception for another score.

The second half belonged to the Apaches, as running back Ryan Farnham scored three touchdowns, James Coughlin added several big runs and the defense held the Mustangs' running game in check. Milton's lone score of the second half came on a 90-yard kickoff return which gave the Mustangs a 28-6 lead.

The Apaches closed the gap with a TD and recovered the ensuing outside kick to set up another score. Threatening late in the game, the Apaches' drive stalled at the Mustang 35, allowing Milton to run out the clock for the win.

Apache backup quarterback Chris Traetti played a strong game in relief of starter Kevin Holleran, who was injured in the first quarter. Linebacker Matt Francis had a strong game to lead the Apache defense.

In other action, the Manets battled back from a 14-0 deficit to defeat the Storm, 18-14. The Storm scored a touchdown in the first and second quarters, but the Manets cut the deficit to two before the half ended.

With 2:20 to play in the half, Jason Moore scrambled 48 yards to the Storm's 10-yard line. Paul Picarski followed with a run around right end and dove in to the end zone for the score. The Manets got the ball back on an interception.

With eight seconds left, the Manets' Frank Kellie threw a pass to Shawn Munchbach, who dodged three tacklers and got help from some key blocks to score on a 60-yard play as time expired. The score cut the deficit to 14-12.

The Manets' defense shut down the Storm's offense in the second half, sparked by the efforts of Picarski, Moore, Mike Sullivan Mike Quigley, Munchbach, Miah Hasson and Alex Santiago.

The game-winning score, a 10-yard run by the Manets' Josh Giordani around left end, was set up by a 40-yard dash by Moore. Playing well offensively for the winners were Jake O'Donnell, Chris Jacques, Ryan Tobin and Mike Cox.

The Storm threatened to re-take the lead late in the game, but on a fourth down and four at the Manets' 10, Picarski stalled the running play and sealed the victory.

In other action, the Panthers broke into the win column with an 8-6 triumph over the Elks. The Panthers scored first, sparked by the solid ground attack of Ryan Greene and Mark Dorois. Greene scored and Dorois added the two-point conversion, which proved to be the margin of victory.

Panther center Nick Puopolo played a strong and Eddie DeWitt stood out in the second half. Anthony Sandomato, J.P. White, James McQuinn and Joe Priscella turned in solid defensive efforts.

The Elks got on the board on a broken play a few minutes into the third quarter. The game turned into a defensive struggle as neither team could score.

Bregoli Injures Shoulder, Will Miss Four Weeks

Raiders Lose Game, Starting Quarterback

By LIAM FITZGERALD

The North Quincy High School football team lost more than a game last Friday at Taunton—it also lost its starting quarterback for a minimum of four weeks.

North's Chris Bregoli, a senior co-captain, injured his right shoulder when he was tackled deep in Taunton territory late in the game. The hit resulted in a separation of the right shoulder, according to North head coach Ken McPhee.

"This is a big loss, because he's the one we couldn't afford to lose," said McPhee, whose team fell to 0-5 overall, 0-3 in the Old Colony League following the 28-14 setback to the Tigers. "He was trying to make a play down their end and suffered a tough injury. It's part of the game, so we just have to regroup and move on."

Taking over for Bregoli will be sophomore Max Repoff, who has seen limited action as Bregoli's backup this season. Now the starter, Repoff will receive all the repetitions in practice this week as the coaching staff prepares him for OCL foe Plymouth South (1-4, 0-3) which visits North

Quincy Friday at 7 p.m.

"Max is the starter and our job as coaches is to get him ready to go," said McPhee. "We're going to try to protect him and not let him get too flustered in the pocket. Plymouth South isn't as strong as our last few opponents, but they play pretty good defense. We have to control their offense and try to score on their defense."

In the setback to Taunton, North trailed, 21-14, but Bregoli and the offense engineered a drive that brought NQ inside the Tigers' 10-yard line with less than two minutes remaining in the game. After a three-yard loss, Bregoli kept the ball on the next play and suffered the shoulder injury.

Repoff relieved Bregoli, and under heavy pressure from Taunton's defensive line, threw an interception that Jay Dumont returned 78 yards for the decisive score. For the game, Taunton took back three interceptions for touchdowns.

"Turnovers killed us; we also fumbled a few times," said McPhee. "Taunton did make a couple of nice plays on a few of the interceptions, so you have to give them credit. We moved the ball very well, but those mistakes hurt us a lot. Our defense played very well; they only allowed one scoring drive."

Early on, North had an offensive answer for everything Taunton did defensively. The Tigers struck first, as Dumont returned an interception 80 yards for his first touchdown. North fullback Brian Deputa scored on a one-yard scoring run and Bregoli's extra point tied the score at 7-7 after the first quarter.

The Tigers roared ahead when C.J. Askeew picked off a Bregoli pass and raced 40 yards to the end zone. Bregoli redeemed himself by calling his own number and scoring on a two-yard run.

In the second half, Taunton's John Carr broke the 14-14 deadlock with a six-yard scoring romp and Dumont's second score sealed North's fate.

Quincy Looks To Tame Tigers

Presidents' Road Trip Stops In Taunton Next

Continuing its October road swing against strong opponents, the Quincy High School football team looks to get in the win column against the new and improved Taunton Tigers Friday at 7 p.m.

The Tigers, 1-9-1 last season, have won four of their first five games, including a 28-14 victory over visiting North Quincy last Friday. Taunton (4-1 overall, 3-0 Old Colony League) returns 12 starters and has averaged nearly 30 points a game this season.

"Taunton's playing well, and they have a senior group that has a lot of experience," said Quincy head coach Peter Chella. "They took their lumps the past few years and seem to be taking out their revenge this season."

"This game is more winnable than our previous three games. They beat North last week, but North played them well down there. We have to play better than we have to beat them."

Quincy, which is 0-2 in the OCL, dropped to 0-5 overall following a 35-6 setback to host Rockland last Friday. The Bulldogs (5-0) jumped out to a quick 13-0 lead and added another three touchdowns in the second quarter to put the game away by halftime.

"We knew they were very good, and they showed it," said Chella. "We lined up to try to stop their power running game, so they went to the air and connected on some passes. Our cover people let us down a bit and they took advantage of that."

Less than a minute into the game, Rockland quarterback Jeff McSharry (4 for 4, 175 yards) threw a 42-yard touchdown pass to Jacob and followed that with a 63-yard bomb to Jacobs for another score.

The Bulldogs' Bob Murphy added a four-yard touchdown run, Rob Killinger scored on a seven-yard romp and Jason Murphy closed out Rockland's scoring with a 25-yard interception return for a touchdown just prior to halftime.

Unable to push the ball across midfield in the first half, the Presidents opened the third quarter with a 19-play, 67-yard scoring drive.

Quarterback Dan Kelly connected on passes to John Katsarikas, Mark Robertson and Jeff Peterson to reach Rockland's 40-yard line.

Switching to the ground attack, Nathan DoRosario (13 carries, 47 yards) carried the ball five times for 20 yards. After a Katsarikas run brought Quincy to Rockland's two-yard line, DoRosario fumbled in the end zone, but lineman Mike Chenette pounced on the loose ball for the Presidents' only touchdown.

"That was a very good drive; our best of the year," said Chella. "We controlled the ball most of the third quarter, which should give the offense a little confidence for future games. The offense looked much better, more cohesive and able to move the ball."

"Danny is becoming quite a good quarterback. He put the ball where he should, but our receivers need to concentrate more. He was hitting them in the hands and they kept dropping it. If we fix that, we should be more successful offensively, and I think the defense will come around."

AN AUTOMATIC CHECK

Automatic transmission fluid (ATF) is vitally important to the operation of an automatic transmission. It transmits power in the torque converter; activates clutches and bands; controls hydraulic valves; lubricates gears, bearings, and bushings; and cools the transmission. Thus, if fluid levels are allowed to fall, clutch slipping, shift flares, incorrect shifting, abnormal noises, and/or loss of a gear may result. It is very important, therefore, that the ATF levels are monitored with regular checks of the dipstick and that the fluid be replaced at recommended schedules. While ATF in good condition is either transparent green or red, darkened or blackened fluid may be an indication of clutch slippage. Pink or waterly AFT may indicate a coolant leak. Our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained, whether it is something as simple as a transmission fluid change, to more complex engine work. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), we look forward to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We're your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles. HINT: Many ATF dipsticks have separate scales for readings while the transmission is either hot or cold.

Seay Sparks Freshmen To Victory

The freshman football team at North Quincy High School picked up its first win of the season, 12-0, over Taunton last Thursday.

The Red Raiders were sparked by the sensational play of quarterback-cornbacker Tim Seay, who completed 5 of 8 passes, including a 35-yard touchdown strike to wide receiver

Wayne Moynihan.

Seay did not throw an interception and also ran the ball once, breaking several tackles for a 12-yard gain. Seay also intercepted a pass, his team-leading second of the season.

North tailback-linebacker Danny DiNardo played a nearly flawless defensive game and scored the game's first touchdown. The score capped off a drive which featured several tough runs by DiNardo, who broke numerous tackles by Tiger defenders.

Red Raider cornerback Dennis Thompson played well with a number of big hits and offensive guard-defensive end James Hawko played an all-around solid game.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

"Obedience is the Mother of success."
—Aeschylus... "He who obeys with modesty will be worthy some day of being allowed to command." — Plato

We know that at times it is hard for all of us to confront the necessity of obedience and accept it. Obedience is a very important word, nonetheless. We have to submit to some sort of obedience in every act and thought of our lives. We may not like this; we may rebel; but the fact remains that as we go through life, we are constantly being called upon to obey. We must obey traffic lights and rules... We must pay government taxes... We have to be on time regarding working hours...

Obedience is the first step in the direction of self-control, and self-control lies at the basis of moral character.

We know that a good home is a home where obedience is required and accepted in good spirit. Granted, children may not want to obey! Did we not feel the same when we were children?...

Yet, should we not remember that there is no moral character without self-control and no self-control without the willingness to obey?... Obedience... Popular or not... It is really quite a word!

Our Facade Remains Circa 1800s. Inside, We're All Set for 2000.

When the Blackmur residence was purchased by Dennis S. Sweeney in 1929, Quincy had a new place to pay its respects. At the time, residents liked the intimate parlors and separate visiting areas.

They still do. But today, some families prefer a larger, more modern visiting area. Other issues, like handicapped and elderly access, have become important, too.

That's why we recently added 1,645 square feet to our Elm Street location. From the front of the building, you won't notice the change. But, inside it means a much larger room and a more accessible entrance.

All, without disturbing our historic roots.

PSSB Changes Its Name To Interfaith Social Services

The Protestant Social Services Bureau Inc. announces that it has changed its name to Interfaith Social Services Inc. by a unanimous vote of its board of directors.

"Everything else about the agency will remain the same," said Mary Ann Walsh, executive director. "We have always provided services in a 'faith tradition, serving people of all faiths, and those without faith. Times have changed since the agency was created in 1947, known then as the Protestant Community Service of Quincy."

"We now have diverse staff and volunteers, serve diverse populations, and work in increasingly diverse communities. As the agency approaches its 52nd year of operation, we want our name to more accurately reflect the communities we serve."

Interfaith Social Services serves residents of Quincy, Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

Domestic and international adoption services, including child assessments, home studies, matching children to families and supporting children through the adoption process, are provided. The agency, licensed since 1974, has placed several hundred children of all ages with permanent, loving, adoptive families.

Counseling services are offered for children, adults and families, including adoption counseling, support groups and seminars.

The Pantry Shelf, staffed primarily by volunteers, provides free food to those in need. In existence since 1975, it is one of the highest volume food pantries in the area, serving close to 6,000 individuals each year.

The Bureau Drawer provides low cost clothing and household items which have been donated by individuals and churches. The thrift shop, which is also staffed by volunteers, has been in operation since 1975.

"We realize that our clients may have diverse beliefs, or no religious affiliation at all," said John C. Martland, Esq., president of the board. "We still approach our services from a faith perspective. So it seemed logical to keep 'faith' in our identity; it's part of our mission."

"In order to be inclusive, we decided on 'interfaith.' This is actually reflective of what's happening in the religious community. More and more, denominations are finding their common good outweighs their differences. We are merely responding in kind."

Interfaith Social Services Inc., a non-profit organization, receives funding from individual donors, churches, organizations, businesses, foundations, program fees, state contracts and fundraising events.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN (Never Known To Fail)

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein that you are my Mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all the things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine." The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. Thank you.

Electrical Industry Guide Available To Ratepayers

State Sen. Michael Morrissey announces the availability of a new guide to help the state's electrical ratepayers better understand the changes in the electrical utility industry.

"A Consumer's Guide to Understanding Changes in the Electric Industry in Massachusetts" is a 14-page booklet detailing the impact of a deregulated electrical generating market.

In November 1997, the Commonwealth passed legislation to allow competition between electrical generators. The legislation went into effect March 1 of this year.

"The electrical generating industry was deregulated on March 1, 1998," said Morrissey, chairman of the Joint Committee on Government Regulations. "As an architect of the legislation, the Legislature worked to ensure that consumer rights were protected. People will be able to choose their electrical generator, while the Commonwealth regulates the electrical delivery process."

Those interested in acquiring a copy of the "Consumer's Guide" can call Morrissey's office at (617) 722-1494 or the Department of Telecommunications and Energy at (888) 758-4469.

Ernie Aristide Honored

(Cont'd from Page 3)

"I really think you were the mayor of Southwest Quincy in 1982 to '89," he said with a laugh. At McCauley's suggestion, the council took a unanimous voice vote proclaiming Aristide "the unofficial mayor of Southwest Quincy."

Also praising Aristide was Reno Litterio of the Ward 4 Association.

"Quincy is a better place to live because of citizens like you," Litterio told Aristide. "Your recognition is long overdue."

An emotional Aristide, whose family members and friends also have been involved in the community, told the council the reason he has always been as active as possible is his love for the city.

"From my deep heart, I love Quincy," he said. "It's a wonderful, wonderful city and it has a great future. God bless Quincy, and all the people therein."

Councillor Timothy Cahill said he was moved by Aristide's words and that in reality, it is residents like Aristide who make the city such a fine place to live.

"I think it's people like Ernie and his family who make Quincy what it is, not the other way around," he said.

$470 Gadget To Cut Noise From Oil Barges

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Sprague Energy will install a device to create an absorber/barrier to diminish noise in the direction of the condominiums at Quincy Point from barges delivering oil.

This action follows complaints made by area residents because of inappropriate hours of delivery in the evening and early morning.

Sprague representative Steve Cipullo told the license board at Tuesday's meeting that device will cost only $470. The cone shaped barrier, which is 6 foot wide and four feet long, will be placed at the end of the exhaust.

The barrier would be removable and allow each barge easy installation prior to pumping.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi suggested the device be placed on the next barge to see if there is a "distinct change."

Raymondi said although the decimal numbers (.56) are within the law, the constant level of noise in a 24-30 hour period while the barges are present is "steady".

Raymondi said he "appreciates the fact that Sprague is willing to work with us," said another reading, taken with the new device should be taken as soon as possible.

Chairman Joseph Shea asked Cipullo to report the findings to the board in December.

Shea said he plans to monitor the new readings made by the device with board members, and will notify the owners of the condos to appear at the December meeting.

Sensor Might Solve Bright Lights Shining In Neighbor's Windows

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Mrs. Eva D'Ulisse, who lives across the street from Friendly's on Independence Ave. was told Tuesday at the license board meeting that an adjustment on lights shining in her windows and a possible light sensor placed in the restaurant will help solve her problem.

Mrs. D'Ulisse, who has appeared before the board several times was told by Michael Donahue from Friendly's that some of the lights that remain on after hours are left on for "safety reasons."

Chairman Joseph Shea said he had visited D'Ulisse's home and said even with the "high hedges and shades down" the lights are still bright.

Donahue said some of the flood lights were turned off or tilted.

D'Ulisse said this made a difference "upstairs, but not downstairs." She said even with shades that are supposed to "darken the room" the light still comes in.

Shea said although he was "happy that we're making progress" asked if a light sensor could be installed in place of the flood lights so if a person were to walk within "six feet of the place", an alarm of some kind would go off.

Donahue told the board he would look into the plan for the sensor and report at the next meeting.

Rhonda Merrill Named City Special Events Coordinator

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Rhonda Merrill, an administrative assistant at Dandy Summer & School Service in Quincy for 19 years, has been named the city's special events coordinator by Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor, who previously said Merrill was a front-runner for the new $48,000-a-year post, made the announcement Tuesday. Merrill, 45, will start work at her office at the Quincy Recreation Department next week.

Sheets, who has known Merrill since the early 1970s when he was her teacher at what was then Quincy Junior College--now Quincy College--said she is the ideal candidate for the position.

RHONDA MERRILL

"I've worked with Rhonda at different levels for over 20 years," he said. "I know her deep commitment to the City of Quincy. I think she'll do an excellent job."

Sheets said Merrill's computer literacy will enable her to work with Quincy Data Processing Director Charles Phelan on a number of projects. Much of the work she will do is promotional, he added, and she will team up with Quincy Access Television and other media outlets toward that end.

There were two other candidates for the position. Sheets declined to name them.

Reached by telephone, Merrill said she looks forward to the challenge.

"I feel great about it," she said. "I feel great about joining the city, actually. I'm looking forward to getting busy. I'm ready to roll."

Sheets said Merrill's immediate priorities will include putting together annual and monthly events calendars for the city, working with city officials in coordinating plans for Quincy's millennium celebration set to begin at the end of next year, and responding to tourism inquiries about which she will make recommendations to the city.

The mayor stressed that Merrill will not actually run festivities such as First Night Quincy but will work with those in charge.

"She won't manage events," he said. "She'll coordinate with those people who do manage. But all scheduling of events will go through her office."

Sheets said Phelan is working on transferring the 1-800 telephone number once used strictly for tour-

65% Voter Turnout Forecast D.A., Sheriff Races In Spotlight Here

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The races for Norfolk County sheriff and district attorney will share the local spotlight with the gubernatorial main event in next Tuesday's state election.

City Clerk Joseph Shea is forecasting a 65 percent voter turnout here and hopes to have the final results wrapped up by 10 p.m. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Acting Governor A. Paul Cellucci and Atty. Gen. Scott Harshbarger are in what is known as a close political horse race as they head down the homestretch in their bid for the governor's office.

Quincy and Worcester are seen this week as key voting factors in that final outcome.

For the first time in more than a half century, there is no Quincy candidate in the district attorney election picture.

Republican Jeffrey A. Locke, who holds the office by appointment, is from Wellesley and his Democratic challenger, state Senator William R. Keating, is a Sharon resident.

Locke was named to the post by then Gov. William Weld in January, 1997 when William Delahunt left the office to go to Washington as a Congressman.

It will also mean that for the first time in more than a half century, the elected district attorney will not be from Quincy. The last three, Myron Lane, George Burke percent of the vote defeating William O'Donnell and Jack Corrigan for the Democratic nomination.

Keating sees himself as an "innovator" who has written or co-written a number of criminal laws including those creating drug free school zones, increasing penalties on domestic violence crimes and protecting victim's rights.

There are three candidates for the Norfolk County sheriff's badge but observers see it as a two-man fight between Republican Jack Flood of Canton and Democrat Michael Bellotti of Quincy.

The third candidate is Lawrence C. Mackin of Braintree, running as an Independent, but who could have an effect on the outcome.

and Delahunt were not only Quincy residents but all three were former Ward 5 city councillors.

Locke, who served 18 years in the Middlesex District Attorney's and U.S. Attorney General's offices, is campaigning as the "experienced prosecutor."

Keating, who served in the state legislature 22 years, rolled up nearly 50

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Twelve new Quincy firefighters were sworn-in during a ceremony last Friday in the City Council Chambers at City Hall.

More than 100 people were on hand for the event, which included congratulatory remarks from Mayor James Sheets and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman. Assistant City Clerk Maureen Hallen administered the oath to the recruits.

The new firefighters are: Thomas F. Bamberg, Joseph C. Jackson, Michael P. Kelly, James M. Connolly, Kevin F. O'Connor, Paul J. Cohane, James J. Cosgrove, Myles J. O'Malley Jr., Timothy A. Price, Jonathan

E. Columbus, Brian P. Mahoney and Stephen T. Wallace Jr.

Nine of the men are from Quincy. Kelly is from Milton, O'Malley is from Braintree, and Price is from Pembroke.

Sheets told those in attendance the firefighters will continue a history of service in the city and help people survive various fire and medical emergencies.

"I guarantee you they will save lives," said the mayor. "There are many people in the city today who are alive because our firefighters responded. The Quincy Fire Department is one of the greatest organizations in the city."

Gorman said he has every confidence the men will be an asset to his department after they have completed two months of work at its training academy.

"Over the next eight weeks, they'll receive the finest training," he said. To the men, Gorman added, "When you get out of this school, your training will never let you down."

Also offering brief congratulations were Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymond, who serves as chairman of the council's Public Safety Committee and Councillor Paul Harold.

Prior to the ceremony, Gorman said the recruits were hired to replace retirees. The Quincy Fire Department is funded for 156 firefighters and the new men will keep the current department number at 153, he said.

Gorman added that in January, he plans to ask Sheets to hire seven more firefighters—four because of other anticipated retirements, and an additional three to bring the manpower level to the maximum number of 156.

The starting salary for a Quincy firefighter is $29,327.

Saint Joseph's Parishioners Fight Liquor License Transfer

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Even though the License Board was unable to vote for a liquor license transfer because of a lack of a full board caused by the absence of Police Chief Thomas France, a large crowd of opponents filled the city hall chambers at Tuesday's meeting.

Chairman Joseph Shea said because of a liquor license transfer with such opposition, input from the police chief is vital.

Strongly opposing the transfer of the license from Point Pub to The Porter House Pub, 536 Washington St., were parishioners from St. Joseph's parish who cited lack of parking and safety of school children being picked up at the parking lots.

A petition signed by 900 persons taken at two Masses at St. Joseph's Church, failed to daunt attorney Lou Cassis who continually reminded the board and the audience that the request was for the transfer of an existing license and said the board "could not revoke the license without cause."

Rev. Daniel Graham, pastor of St. Joseph's Church said there are 1200 families in the parish filling the church at most Masses and cited the parking as the biggest problem.

John (Jake) Comer, who resides on Lancaster St. representing the parish told the board "we're going to fight this and we'll always be against any barroom in that corner." He added that the 1200 families in St. Joseph's parish are "irate" and do not want this to ever happen. This drew applause from the audience.

Comer asked "Is this a restaurant or a barroom?" and what was the capacity for each?

Cassis said the establishment, which plans to serve food, will have 60 seats (20 at the bar).

Chairman Joseph Shea, recuperating from surgery read letters from abutters who not only opposed the liquor license but a cabaret license as well which would cause more parking problems as well as noise.

Citing the lack of parking even more was one abutter who said there are five eating establishments in the area, three playing fields; two churches and four school bus stops

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond said there was significant public sentiment against this venture and residents will "continue to oppose it."

He spoke about the times the Point Pub was closed for violations when the board suspended them for 30 days.

However, Cassis said the suspension in question involved a person that the state did not believe, but the license was suspended by the license board.

Raymond said the owner Steve Barrett purchased the building a year and a half ago, promised the board he would expand the kitchen to serve food but has never opened the business.

Barrett who loudly said "Point Pub is no longer", said the city accepted all the money for fees for the renovation and the license and then questioned why "someone in America can't purchase a piece of license, fix it and then not be able to sell it." He has since sold the building to Bridget and Patrick Henry.

Cassis told the board that Barrett took a dilapidated building and upgraded it at a cost of $150,000 and should not be blamed for misleading the community, but instead should receive praise from the community and the license board.

We Get Letters

We get letters
Some complimentary. Some not.

In the latter category, this one from Alice Burke of South St. who didn't care too much for our recent column on the Clinton-Lewinsky scandal:

"I really take issue with your comments on Pres. Clinton. Monica Lewinsky is an adult and should take responsibility for her own actions.

"After all, the females of this generation are having babies at the age of 12, so Monica Lewinsky at age 22 is not an innocent who was taken advantage of.

"What I'm really upset about is your taking such a negative stand on all Democrats. You are supposed to give a 'somewhat' divided opinion on all candidates and not grandstand on just what you believe in.

"When your paper first came out, I had a subscription to it. After you did such a 'hatchet' job on Joe LaRaia many years ago, I cancelled my subscription and only read your paper if a neighbor calls my attention to an article that I may be interested in."

Comment: Granted, Monica is not "Miss Innocence of 1998." But I still resent Clinton turning the public's White House into his private Playboy Mansion. It is too bad Mrs. Burke doesn't see The Sun more often. She would find we pick on Republicans, too. But we're glad her neighbor gets the paper.

(Incidentally, a friend of mine—a Democrat—who read that column told me she thought Clinton's personal behavior could be overlooked because "he's been a good president." But, she added: "I wouldn't want to be married to him.")

Migealio Tracy, a student at Broad Meadows Middle School, writes regarding our coverage of that school's highly acclaimed campaign to abolish forced, abusive child labor:

"Thank you so much for writing about the work of this campaign. Being a kid, I know what it feels like not to be taken seriously at times, but it feels really good to know that our work is really making a difference. We really appreciate this.

"A big part of changing an injustice is making people aware of one in the first place. We won't forget this and neither will kids around the world."

Comment: The Broad Meadows students are most deserving of the national—and international—acclaim they have received in this most worthy cause. So, too, Ron Adams, their guiding teacher.

It is heartwarming to see 12 and 13-year-old youngsters taking up such a serious and difficult challenge. With youngsters like them growing up like this, our country's future will be in good hands.

Well done, kids. You, too, Ron.

Dr. Henry F. Paterson, Jr., president of the Quincy Retired Teachers Association, writes:

Farmers' Market Closes Friday

The Quincy Farmers' Market will close for the season Friday.

The market, located at the Hancock Parking Lot across from Quincy District Court, will be open from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. for the last time this year.

Items for sale will include locally-grown pumpkins, Indian corn, garden mums, herbs, perennials, varieties of winter squash and apples, potatoes, onions, sweet potatoes, cranberries, tomatoes, string beans, cabbage, eggplant, winter pears, lobsters, and dry-flower wreaths for home and gift giving.

Those with Massachusetts Farmers' Market coupons are invited to redeem them. The 1998 coupons expire after Friday.

There are over 100 Farmers' Markets across the state that are designed to offer individuals the opportunity to sample local agriculture. The produce comes directly from area farms, bypassing the warehouses and middleman.

Benjamin Franklin attended school for only two years, where he proved himself excellent in reading, fair in writing and poor in arithmetic. He went on to become one of the best self-educated persons of his time.

Scenes From Yesterday

Hancock Street looking North, Quincy, Mass.

BEFORE WORLD WAR I, most postcards used in the U.S. were printed in Germany. This is a hand colored view of Quincy Square made in Germany in 1915. The automobile in the foreground looks real enough, but sometimes the German artists added social activity to scenes like this to make seem more interesting. If that is the case here, it is difficult to tell. On the right is the Quincy Savings Bank and the F.W. Woolworth 5 & 10c store.

Urges Yes Vote On Question 4

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Last year, Massachusetts adopted a new electricity law. As required under the law, electric rates were cut for all consumers by 10 percent on March 1. In the first year alone, Quincy will save an estimated $6.5 million. Next year, electric rates will be reduced by at least another five percent. And, the law sets a rate cap to lock in these lower rates for at least six years.

In total, Massachusetts consumers will save an estimated $500 million during the first year. And, according to a recent study by Standard & Poor's DRI, these savings are expected to total more than $10 billion as electric rates drop 28 percent by the year 2010. That's an average of $4,000 per customer.

In addition to providing lower electric rates for all consumers, this important law breaks up the utility monopolies, allows consumer choice and competition, protects the environment and helps strengthen our state's economy. However, these benefits are threatened by a misguided effort to repeal the law, Question 4 on the Nov. 3 ballot.

A YES vote on Question

4 will keep the New Massachusetts Electricity Law in place. A NO vote would repeal the entire law and undo all these positive changes in the electric industry. All the benefits and consumer protections the new law provides would be lost. The new law's guaranteed rate reductions and rate cap would be gone, resulting in higher electric bills, and the reliability of our electric system would be threatened.

A coalition of more than 60,000 Massachusetts consumer advocates, environmentalists, energy providers, small and large employers, and individual citizens from all walks of life have joined together to support a YES vote on Question 4. We urge your readers to learn more about the New Massachusetts Electricity Law by calling the YES on 4 Coalition at 1-800-669-1952 or by visiting our web site at www.yeson4.com.

On Nov. 3, join us in voting YES on 4—for lower electric rates, consumer protection and cleaner air.

Thanks Those Who Helped Success Of Breast Cancer Walk

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

They walked because they know someone suffering from breast cancer. They walked because they knew that their commitment made a difference.

On Sunday, Oct. 4, 25,000 individuals joined the American Cancer Society's Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston, raising $2.4 million for breast cancer research and outreach programs. On behalf of the American Cancer Society, heartfelt thanks to all of you who participated, whether physically by walking or financially by pledging. Any outstanding pledges can be mailed to the American Cancer Society at Box 3163, Boston, MA 02241-3163.

The American Cancer Society is involved in the fight against breast cancer in many areas—and our efforts are yielding results. Earlier this year, we received the exciting news that the anti-estrogen compound tamoxifen can prevent breast cancer in certain women and save lives in premenopausal women. Many of the fundamental concepts that needed to be investigated before tamoxifen could be used in breast cancer treatment and prevention were funded by the American Cancer Society. The American Cancer Society currently has $16.9 million invested in promising research projects related to breast cancer.

During October—National Breast Cancer Awareness Month—we are also reminded of how many more lives could be saved if more women practiced the three early breast cancer detection checkpoints: mammography, breast exams by a health care professional, and breast self-exam. Every woman over age 40 should have a mammogram each year. When found and treated in its earliest stage, the five-year relative survival rate for localized breast cancer is 97 percent today.

Thanks to all those who joined Making Strides Against Breast Cancer, women and their families throughout our community will directly benefit from American Cancer Society programs. For information, call the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345, or visit our web site at www.cancer.org.

Faxon House To Be Razed At Hospital

By PAUL HAROLD

The Hospital Board of Managers re-affirmed its vote to tear down the Faxon House on hospital grounds because of safety reasons.

The board was asked to reconsider its original vote by Mayor James McIntyre and the city council. Dr. Milton Brougham, president of the medical staff, supported the board's decision noting that the house created a traffic hazard for ambulances and other vehicles trying to reach the emergency room.

Board member Carl Naderson was the only one voting against the demolition with all other members in support: Leslie Brierley, John Williams, George Tull, Mrs. Syria Mayo, Herbert Cooper, Dennis Ryan and chairman Edward Cronin. Ernest Montilio was absent for the vote.

$7,500 FIRE AT WATER ST. SYNAGOGUE

The vacant building of Congregational Ahavath (House of Brotherly Love) on Water St., sustained $7,500 in fire damage.

The building, originally built for a Catholic temperance society in 1911, was purchased by the Grossman family in 1921 for use as a synagogue. Following the death of Rueben Grossman, the family made the property available to Survival, Inc., the city's anti-drug abuse program.

Survival had not yet made use of the building, but was in the process of making renovations before the fire.

KENNEDY TOURS SHIPYARD

Sen. Edward Kennedy toured the Fore River Shipyards with management and union officials. He said that the General Dynamics yard was "uniquely qualified to compete for shipbuilding contracts available in the next few years." However, a crisis was predicted in the short-term if interim work was not secured between the current contracts and the new wave of Navy work.

YOU CAN BE TOO FLEXIBLE Bend and stretch, keep an open mind - whether for physical or mental health. flexibility is a quality we value. When it comes to feet, however, super flexibility can be too much of a good thing. "Pronation" is the word used to describe the when adapting to ground surfaces and absorbing the impact of walking. Excessive pronation occurs when that normal rolling motion rocks too far inward. The band of tissue that connects the heel to the bottom of the foot is then stretched abnormally, causing such problems as heel pain and injuries to hips, knees, or lower back. Treatment may range from use of orthotics (prescription shoe inserts) to medication, physical therapy, or surgery. If you are suffering from these or any other foot related complaints call us at (617) 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Pkwy., Suite #18, Quincy and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.
P.S. The problem of excessive pronation is often first noticed when a person starts a walking or jogging regimen.

MEN'S HEALTH ISSUES

A recent survey conducted by Men's Health Magazine and CNN suggests that 32 million American men are avoiding visits to their physicians for preventive care (routine check-ups). While 65 percent of American males did visit their doctors in the past year, nearly 25 percent had not had a check-up in more than two years. A startling one in ten admitted not having been to a doctor in more than 5 years. Among the issues cited by men as their greatest concerns: 82 percent mentioned heart disease, 80 percent worried about prostate cancer (49 percent believe they will develop prostate cancer in their lifetime), 77 percent cited hypertension, 69 percent feared testicular cancer, and 66 percent mentioned diabetes.

Having a routine physical just makes good sense. Why spend time worrying about that which can be prevented through proper health care? At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. Forty-four percent of the survey respondents mention above admitted that cost was the main reason for skipping routine medical care.

"Who's Who Among American High School Students" or "The National Dean's List" publications which recognize 5 percent of the nation's high school and college students respectively.

The students were requested to nominate teachers who "made a difference in their lives" by helping to shape their values, inspiring interest in a particular subject and/or challenging them to strive for excellence.

McCauley, Cedrone Endorse Locke

Former Mayor and present City Councillor Francis McCauley was among those endorsing Jeffrey Locke for Norfolk County district attorney show of support at City Hall Plaza Saturday.

Others supporting Locke were Christine Cedrone, School Committee member and Quincy Housing Authority commissioner; Joyce Baker, community activist and John "Butch" Mahoney who introduced Locke.

Locke, a Republican, was appointed in January, 1997 to fill the vacancy created when Dist. Atty. William Delahunt was elected to Congress.

McCauley noted that Locke brought more than 16 years' experience as a prosecutor in both the federal and state courts to the district attorney's office.

"Jeff Locke," he said, "is someone who did not need any 'on-the-job' training to become an effective district attorney. He was able to 'hit the ground running.' He is deserving of our wholehearted support."

Sheets Neutral In Gubernatorial Race

Mayor James Sheets is remaining neutral in the gubernatorial race between Acting Gov. Paul Cellucci and Atty. Gen. Scott Harshbarger.

"I'm not involved in the gubernatorial race," Sheets said Tuesday. "I have endorsed Mike Bellotti (for Norfolk County sheriff) and Bill Keating (for district attorney), but that's it."

Of Cellucci and Harshbarger, the mayor said, "I think they're both highly qualified. I'll work with whomever is elected, and I'm sure he'll work with this city."

Sheets has received criticism from fellow Democrats in the past for not endorsing Democrats such as Harshbarger in major elections.

For instance, he did not endorse Sen. John Kerry two years ago when the senator was challenged by Republican Gov. William Weld.

Sheets says he does not endorse candidates in such elections because his first responsibility is to the city and local issues have to transcend partisan politics. He has cited "a good working relationship" with both Weld and Cellucci as an example of how such cooperation is crucial to successfully running a city.

Cahill Has Not Endorsed Candidate For D.A.

Because of incorrect information forwarded to The Quincy Sun, the name of City Councillor Timothy Cahill was printed in last week's issue as part of a list of city officials who recently endorsed Sen. Bill Keating's candidacy for Norfolk County district attorney.

Cahill said at press time he has not endorsed anyone for the seat.

"I'm not part of this endorsement," he said. "I wasn't present at the endorsement for Bill Keating in front of City Hall, nor have I endorsed him."

State Police Neutral In Norfolk County DA Race

The State Police Association of Massachusetts (SPAM) has not endorsed either candidate in the final election for Norfolk County district attorney, according to the president of the association.

A story in last week's Quincy Sun erroneously stated that Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke had been endorsed by SPAM in the final election to be held Tuesday, Nov. 3.

SPAM did endorse Locke in the Republican

Primary as well as Sen. Bill Keating in the Democratic Primary. Both Locke and Keating won their respective nominations and will challenge each other in the final election Tuesday, Nov. 3.

With less than a week to go before the final election, it appears that the State Police Association of Massachusetts will remain neutral in the race for Norfolk County district attorney.

"We have not been asked to endorse any candidate," said Dean Bennett, president of SPAM. "I don't expect we will be endorsing any candidate."

Bennett said there was no discussion to make an endorsement at the association's executive board meeting Oct. 21. The next executive board meeting is scheduled for the day after the election, Wednesday, Nov. 4.

SPAM, with 2,006 members, is the largest police association in New England. It is comprised of troopers and sergeants.

Delahunt, Burke Endorse Keating

Two men who have held the post are endorsing Sen. Bill Keating for Norfolk County district attorney.

Congressman William Delahunt and Atty. George Burke, Quincy Democrats who between them served as district attorney for more than 30 years, endorsed Keating this week.

"Bill Keating is an absolute force in dealing with criminal justice issues," said Delahunt.

"Just as Dist. Atty. George Burke began the fight against the drug scourge and my office began an innovative fight against domestic violence, Bill Keating will continue those traditions and take the office forward on new fronts."

Burke, who preceded Delahunt, said:

"I know the job of district attorney and I know Bill Keating. He has earned my vote and my endorsement. Bill Keating will make an exceptional district attorney."

ACTING GOV. A. Paul Cellucci praised Quincy's commitment to education and said the new school "is a fitting tribute to Clifford Marshall." Cellucci: 'A Fitting Tribute' To Late Sheriff Marshall School 'A Commitment To Education'

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN
Acting Gov. Paul Cellucci praised Quincy's commitment to education Sunday at the dedication of the new $10 million Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School in Quincy Point.

And Cellucci commended naming the school after the late Norfolk County sheriff who had also served as state representative and city councilor.

"I want to thank the people of Quincy for the commitment you have made to the future of your children and your city," said Cellucci in his keynote address.

"And this is a fitting tribute to Clifford Marshall, who was born and raised in Quincy and who dedicated his life to Quincy."

The dedication was attended by Congressman William Delahunt and more than 500 others ranging from state, county and city officials to educators, students, neighbors and friends. It was also a tribute to the late Sheriff Marshall, known as "Kippy" to his friends, who died in 1996.

Music for the hour-and-a-half ceremony was provided by State Trooper Daniel Clark, who has performed with the Boston Pops among others, and the Clifford Marshall Chorus.

"As I look around," said Cellucci, "I can see that this is a beautiful school. This is a great place for kids to learn and a great place for kids to enjoy. I look forward to seeing many, many children benefit from the Clifford Marshall School."

Mayor James Sheets called the new school "part of a general renaissance in Quincy Point."

"Our most significant character-building institution is our schools," said Sheets. "Let it be said that this generation had a vision about education."

Norfolk County Sheriff Jack Flood presented the school with a specially-designed Norfolk County flag. Calling his predecessor "a man ahead of his time," Flood talked about the Braintree Alternative Center for non-violent offenders as well as continuing education programs which Marshall started.

"Sheriff Marshall believed that every human being was valuable, and that they deserved a second chance," said Flood.

State Rep. Ronald Mariano introduced former House Speaker Thomas McGee who was in the audience. "Former Speaker McGee's presence speaks volumes about what kind of man Clifford Marshall was," said Mariano.

Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, also former Quincy city clerk, introduced Bill Draicchio who he said first suggested naming the school after Marshall.

Gillis also noted that Marshall "showed compassion for the little guy and set an example for all of us."

"I know," said Gillis, "that Kippy is looking down upon us, smiling, and thanking you for this magnificent honor."

Marshall School Principal Philip Connolly, who was emcee, said that opening the school was preserving the legacy of a man whose mission was to make things better for other people.

"Many of our lives here today have been blessed for having known Clifford H. Marshall," said Connolly. "This program is the city's way of showing our gratitude to him."

The Rev. Daniel Graham, pastor of nearby St. Joseph's Church, said that Marshall did much for the people of Quincy and beyond.

"May this building always be a living sign and symbol of the life, dedication and work of Clifford Marshall," said Fr. Graham.

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymond said, "Today is a day of celebration, a celebration to honor the life of a loving husband and father and a dedicated public servant."

"Opening a school is a tremendously exciting event," said Linda Stice, School Committee vice chairman. "On behalf of my colleagues, I thank all the parents who entrust your children to our care, especially the parents of the Marshall School PTO who worked so hard to make today a success."

Calling it a "magnificent school building," School Supt. Eugene Creedon said the school "is also a living memorial to the life and principles of Clifford Marshall."

Marshall's widow, Louise, was presented with a bouquet of red roses.

"Cliff was the most wonderful man any woman could be married to," said Mrs. Marshall. "For 36 years, I lived a fairy tale. I know that Cliff is here today and proud of this tremendous accolade."

The Marshalls' four sons, Michael, Clifford III, Paul, and Christopher also participated in the program.

"His favorite saying was that attitude is everything," said Michael. "Today, he would want us to tell the children, reach for the sky and strive for excellence whatever you do."

The program also included presentation of colors by the Quincy High School AFJROTC. The Pledge of Allegiance was led by William Chasson, grandnephew of Sheriff Marshall, and Devyn Correia.

In addition, Katherine Andreosatos was awarded a T-shirt and gift certificate to South Shore Plaza for her prize-winning entry of a mascot design for the school. Her design was selected from among 300 entrants.

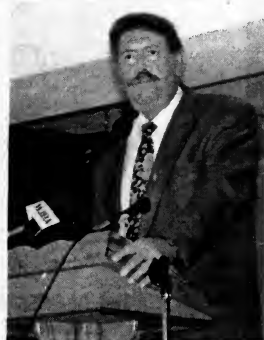

An open house followed the program.

D.A., Sheriff Races In Spotlight Here

Flood, a former Democrat, was named sheriff by then Gov. Weld following the death of Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall, Quincy Democrat, in 1996.

In the 22 months he has worn the badge, Flood points to accomplishments such as: opening the first correctional center for substance-dependent female inmates, expanding the free inmate labor program saving more tax dollars for participating municipalities, creating a partnership with Quincy High School to keep at-risk students in school, and generating grants for police departments for public safety equipment.

Bellotti, who vacated his state representative seat to run for sheriff, says there are a number of things he would do to improve the operation of the sheriff's office.

Among them: professionalize victim services by employing only trained victim advocates, create a county-wide coalition on juvenile crime, establish a sheriff's liaison with councils on aging, put convicted "dead beat dads" to work while in jail to pay child support, and streamline the sheriff's department budget.

Mackin, a former Houston police officer, is founder and president of Citizens Against Reverse Discrimination and a Braintree town meeting member. He ran unsuccessfully for Congress as an Independent in 1992.

As the underdog, Mackin has had the least funds to wage a campaign with. But in a close race between Bellotti and Flood he could be a factor as to which one he might take crucial votes away from.

Delahunt, seeking his second term as Congressman from the 10th District, is challenged by Eric V. Bleicken, Yarmouth Republican.

Four Quincy Democrats are virtual winners before any votes are counted: State Senator Michael Morrissey, state Reps. Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano are unopposed for re-election.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who won the Democratic nomination for the state representative seat Bellotti is vacating, is also unopposed.

County Commissioner Peter H. Collins, Milton Democrat, is challenged by Needham Republican Robert D. Hall, Jr., former Norfolk County treasurer.

The governor-lieutenant governor candidate teams are: Cellucci and Jane M. Swift, Republican; Harshbarger and Warren E. Tolman, Democrat; and Dean Cook and Elias Israel, Libertarian.

Middlesex County Dist. Atty. Thomas F. Reilly, Democrat, and Brad Bailey, Republican, seek the attorney general post Harshbarger is leaving to run for governor.

Secretary of State William F. Galvin is challenged by Dale C. Evans, Jr., Republican, and David L. Atkinson, Libertarian.

Bob Maginn, Republican; Shannon P. O'Brien, Democrat and Merton B. Baker, Libertarian, seek the vacant state treasurer's post.

Auditor A. Joseph DeNucci, Democrat, is opposed by Michael T. Duffy, Republican, and Carla A. Howell, Libertarian.

Governor's Councillor Christopher A. Iannella, Jr., a Democrat, is running unopposed.

There are also four referendum questions on the ballot:

Question 1: Setting compensation of state legislators.

Question 2: Public campaign financing.

Question 3: Tax rate on interest and dividend income.

Question 4: Electric utility industry restructuring.

4 Questions On All Ballots

Besides casting ballots for candidates next Tuesday, voters will also be asked to vote yes or no on four questions, including one proposed amendment to the state Constitution.

Two other questions are laws proposed by initiative petition, and the other question is a referendum on an existing law.

Question 1, a proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerns setting compensation of state legislators.

A "Yes" vote on Question 1 would prohibit state legislators from changing their base pay and instead would adjust that pay according to changes in median household income. A "No" vote would make no change in the method for setting legislators' base pay.

The compensation amendment was approved by the General Court in joint sessions of the two houses in July, 1996, (127 to 65) and again this past June (149 to 41).

State senators and representatives currently earn a base pay of $46,410.

Question 2, a law proposed by initiative petition, focuses on public campaign financing.

A "Yes" vote would change the laws governing public financing of campaigns. A "No" vote would make no change in the laws governing public financing of campaigns.

Essentially, the proposed law would create a new voluntary system allowing candidates for state office who agree to campaign spending limits and $100 contribution limits to receive a set amount of public funds for their campaigns, starting with the 2002 election.

The proposed law would also limit transfers of money from national political parties to state political parties for administrative, overhead, or party-building activities. It would also require candidates for state office who had raised or spend at least a set minimum amount in an election cycle to file their required campaign finance reports with the state electronically, and the public would have prompt electronic access to such reports.

No vote was taken on this initiative petition by the Senate of House of Representatives before May 6, 1998.

Question 3, another law proposed by initiative petition, pertains to the tax rate on interest and dividend income.

A "Yes" vote would reduce the state tax rate for interest and dividend income. If approved, the law would change the state income tax rate on interest and dividend income, which was 12% as of September, 1997, to whatever rate applies to Part B taxable income (such as wages and salaries), which was 5.95% as of September, 1997. The change would take effect starting in tax year 2000.

A "No" vote would make no change in the current state tax rate for interest and dividend income.

No vote was taken on this initiative petition by the Senate of House of Representatives before May 6, 1998.

Question 4, a referendum on an existing law, concerns the electric utility industry restructuring.

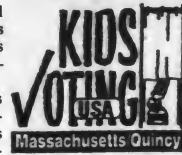

A "Yes" vote would continue the new law changing the electric utility industry. Instead of buying power from the utility that owns the power lines, customers may choose to buy power from separate generating companies competing with each other to sell power to be delivered by the existing utility.

Customers not choosing a new competing generating company will be provided power by their existing utility under a transition rate for seven years, starting from a rate 10% less than 1997 rates. By September 1999, rates for such customers must be further reduced from 1997 rates (adjusted for inflation) by 5%.

A "No" vote would undo these changes in the electric utility industry.

The law was approved by the House of Representatives on last November, by a vote of 124 to 30, and approved by the Senate last November, 32-6.

Volunteers Still Needed To Help Kids Voting

Volunteers are still needed to help Kid Voters cast their ballots at the polls in Quincy for the state election on Tuesday, Nov. 3.

Harold Crowley, Kids Voting Quincy project coordinator, said he anticipates the turnout among Kid Voters to be about the same percentage as that of their parents.

"That's my guess," he said. "That's the way it was in 1997."

City Clerk Joseph Shea has predicted a 65 percent turnout for adult voters in this year's state election.

Crowley said last year's city election drew a Kid Voters turnout of about only 35 percent because of the lack of a mayor's race and no other heavily-contested races. Previous Kids Voters turnouts, he said, were 50 percent in 1996 (the Kerry-Weld senatorial race) and 48 percent in 1995's city election when there were "several hot City Council races" and Mayor James Sheets was challenged by retired contractor Roger Lyons.

Crowley added, "I hope both kids and adults vote. If we don't, I think sometimes we get what we deserve."

The only major difference between the adult and Kids Voting polls is the opening time. Polls are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. for adults and 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. for Kid Voters.

This is the fourth year in which students in Quincy's public and parochial schools will be going to the polls with their parents to cast their ballots in the Kids Voting program. Last year, over 3,300 Quincy students made their choices known in Quincy's city election.

Kids Voting is a non-profit, grassroots education program that gives young people actual experience in the election process by casting ballots alongside their parents in a real election.

Volunteers are needed at the following polling places: Ward 1, Precinct 1 (Merrymount School); Ward 3, Precinct 1 (Covenant Congregational Church); Ward 3, Precinct 3 (Montclair School); Ward 5, Precinct 1 (Bernazzani School); Ward 5, Precincts 2 and 3 (Quincy Community United Methodist Church); and Ward 6, Precincts 1 and 3 (North Quincy High School).

Volunteers are needed to staff the polling places in various shifts between 10:45 a.m. and 8 p.m. They will help the students cast ballots at the same polling places that their parents will be casting theirs. Volunteers are asked to commit as little as two hours of their time.

Each precinct in the city has an area set aside for students to mark their Kids Voting ballot. Since the regular election workers are busy tending to the parents and adults are voting, Kids Voting needs volunteers to help students cast their votes while not interfering with the adult voters.

Volunteers follow the same check-in, vote, check-out procedures as adult voters. The Kid Voters will indicate their choices for U.S. Representative, state offices, and county offices using ballots especially prepared for Kid Voters. Their ballots will be tallied separately and the results of the Kid Voting election will be announced following the adult results.

At least 10 volunteers are needed at each of the city's 30 polling precincts. Volunteers will serve on two-hour shifts throughout the day. Kids Voting Massachusetts/Quincy will furnish the instructions and necessary materials.

Businesses and organizations are invited to "adopt" a precinct with a commitment to see that the precinct is staffed by at least three volunteers per shift throughout the day.

Those wishing to volunteer to help Kids Voting on Election Day can call Crowley at (617) 471-6881.

On Universal Health Care A Fifth Question For Voters In Second Norfolk District

In addition to the four questions on the ballot next Tuesday, Quincy voters in the Second Norfolk District will have an opportunity to decide a non-binding referendum on universal health care.

The text of the health care rights referendum, known locally as Question 5, reads:

"Shall the state representative from this district be instructed to initiate and support legislation to create a health care system for all the residents of Massachusetts that: Provides universal coverage for comprehensive health care services that includes the freedom to choose doctors and other health care professionals, facilities and services; Eliminates the role of insurance companies in health care and creates an insurance trust fund that is publicly administered and fairly funded; and in order to safeguard the availability of quality health care, stops the buying, selling, managing and closing down of health care facilities by for-profit companies?"

Question 5 will appear only on ballots in the Second Norfolk District and parts of Boston. The Second Norfolk District, represented by Rep. Steve Tobin, includes the neighborhoods surrounding Quincy Hospital, Houghs Neck, Germantown, Adams Shore, Merrymount, Quincy Center, Cranch Hill, part of Wollaston, and most of West Quincy.

The initiative asks voters whether they support creating a universal, comprehensive, affordable health care system without the private insurance industry or restrictions on choice of professional or facility. In addition, it recommends, in order to "safeguard the availability of quality health care," the prohibition of for-profit corporations' "buying, selling, managing and closing down of health care facilities."

"A strong vote for this non-binding referendum will send a powerful message to Quincy's political leadership of the vital importance of access to quality, affordable health care in Quincy for all area residents," said referendum spokesperson Sandy Eaton, a nurse at Quincy Hospital. "Passage of this referendum will also help create a climate in which community hospitals can survive and thrive."

Initiated by the Massachusetts Labor Party, Eaton said the thrust of Question 5 "dovetails nicely with the efforts of the Ad Hoc Committee to Defend Health Care in reopening the health care debate after the Clinton catastrophe."

The Massachusetts Health Care Trust, a bill which would create a universal health care system in the state, will be reintroduced by the Massachusetts Campaign for Single Payer Health Care in December for the 1999 legislative session, Eaton said. Legislation to establish a moratorium on conversion of not-for-profit hospitals into for-profit ones has also been introduced on Beacon Hill, he said.

"Many feel the creation of a universal health care system and the halt to the wholesale corporatization of health care are necessary steps to make health care a right for all and not the privilege of a few," Eaton added.

CityView Celebrates First Anniversary

CityView Real Estate has completed its first year of operation at 63 Billings Rd., North Quincy, and has recognized Joyce Baker as its top producer for the year.

Baker has excelled in sales and service for the company. She is the incoming vice president of the South Shore Board of Realtors, president of the Quincy Historical Society, treasurer of DOVE Inc. and director of the Quincy Partnership since its inception.

Peter Bravo and Peter Graceffa, principals of CityView Real Estate said they are extremely gratified with the results of their first year of operation and credit their success to a strong emphasis on service, experienced sales staff, attention to detail and extensive advertising.

Bravo said, "With this wonderful staff of 12 CityView has grown and developed to be a household word."

When asked for a prediction for the upcoming year, Bravo said, "With interest rates and the economy as they are today, and with indications that they will prevail, there is no reason why the market will not continue to grow. Home ownership is the American Dream and with the many programs for first time buyers, liberal financing guidelines, and the wealth of information provided by the media, the realization of this dream is within reach of a much larger segment of the population."

Participating In The Process Will Result In A Better Move

People who are relocating will be rewarded with a better move if they actively participate in the moving process, says a moving company executive.

"By actively working with your mover, you can provide information that will help him understand your needs and, ultimately, give you better service," said William Albert of Albert Moving & Storage. "Moving is the type of business that almost demands good communication between the customer and the company."

Four ways that Albert suggests can help attain a better move are:

• Obtain a cube (estimating) sheet from a mover. Go through your house and check furniture and other items that you intend to move or not to move. When the two or three movers you have invited to provide estimates arrive at your home, give them the cube sheet so they all will base their estimates on the same criteria.

• Learn as much as possible about your new home and share the information with your mover. For example, your mover needs to know if your new home is on a particularly narrow street so he can determine if a large moving van can drive down it. If you are moving into an apartment or townhouse development, find out if there are delivery restrictions or elevator times. Make sure your large pieces of furniture will fit through doorways and into rooms of your new place.

• When your driver takes your inventory, walk around with him to make sure every item you want shipped is on the list. Be sure to double check closets and cabinets.

If you question what the driver writes down as the condition of an item, put your own opinion on the inventory sheet before signing (i.e., the driver says the wooden table has a gouge, but you think it's just a scratch).

• Finally, before you leave for your new home, let the moving company know how they can contact you at all times while you are in transit. If that is not possible, be sure to call your mover daily so you can stay current on the status of your belongings.

"Participation and effective communication by the consumer will result in a better move for everyone," said Albert.

Albert Moving & Storage is affiliated with Paul Arpin Van Lines. For free consumer information on moving or to request an estimate, call Albert at (508) 668-9663, or e-mail to Info@arpin.com.

Rhonda Merrill Named City Special Events Coordinator

ism issues to Merrill's office as soon as possible.

Merrill, prior to her work at Dandy Summer & School Service, worked as a bookkeeper for Quincy Community Action Programs, an assistant secretary to the Quincy City Council, and an office assistant to the area director of the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Boston.

A board member of the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association, she is also past president of Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, a past board member of DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended, where she was also long-range planning chairperson) and the Quincy
Historical Society, a volunteer coordinator for Sheets's election committee and a past member of the Quincy Park and Recreation Board.

A lifelong resident of Quincy, she graduated from Quincy High School in 1971 and received an associate's degree from Quincy Junior College in 1973. She also has taken various courses at Suffolk University in Boston.

The new special events coordinator's position was created by a 7-2 City Council vote on Oct. 5 at the mayor's request. Sheets said the city holds so many events throughout the year that a full-time position is required for them to be properly organized.

Two city councilors disagreed. Councilors Francis McCauley and Paul Har-proposal, saying the departments should handle mayor's staff and other city those duties.

Halloween Safety Tips

Police Chief Thomas Frane offers the following safety precautions to motorists, parents and homeowners to ensure a happy and safe Halloween for the children and residents of Quincy.

Motorists are advised to exercise caution on Halloween, Saturday, Oct. 31. Children will be "trick or treating," wearing costumes with masks, and crossing streets as they go throughout the community.

Parents should go over these safety rules with their children before they leave the house.

- Cross only at corners.
- Never cross between parked cars.
- If there is no sidewalk, walk facing the oncoming traffic.

• Remove masks before crossing streets.

Parents should follow these tips to further ensure the enjoyment of Halloween:

• Remove all obstacles from steps and leave on outside lights which will help prevent youngsters from falling.

• Make sure children are dressed in light-colored clothes;
short enough to prevent tripping. (Reflectors and/or reflective material would be added safety measures.)

• Check that costumes are flame-retardant so the little ones aren't in danger near candle-lit jack-o-lanterns and other fire hazards.

• Encourage children to wear comfortable whoses.
• Make sure children can see well through face masks,
if worn.

• Makeup is preferable to face masks as it does not hinder vision -- a dangerous thing when kids are crossing streets and going up and down steps.

• Accompany young children.
• Go out early, in daylight if possible, or carry a flashlight in the dark.

• Stay within the boundaries of your immediate neighborhood and visit only the homes you know.

• Watch for traffic.
• Only accept and give wrapped or packaged candy.
• Examine candy before allowing children to eat it.

• Eat only unopened candies and other treats that are in original wrappers. Don't forget to inspect fruit and homemade goodies for anything suspicious. By all means, remind kids not to eat everything at once or they'll be feeling pretty "ghoulish" for a while."

Girls Host Falmouth Today North's Focus Switches To Improving Seeding

Outscoring its last three opponents by a combined total of 19-2, the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team increased its unbeaten streak to an impressive 11 straight games.

North (11-1-4 overall, 8-1-4 Old Colony League) hosted non-league foe Martha's Vineyard Tuesday and wrap up the regular season today (Thursday) at 3 p.m. at Varsity Field against OCL opponent Falmouth, the only team to beat North this season (1-0, Sept. 23).

Heading to the state tournament for the second straight season, North's focus shifts from vying for the OCL title to improving its seeding in the South Sectional. The tentative opening date for the tournament is next Friday, Nov. 6.

"This week, we're just playing for seeding, because Silver Lake is too far ahead," said North head coach Paul Bregoli. "Right now, we're a fourth or fifth seed in the South Sectional and may get a home game, which would be great."

In recent action, senior co-captain Betsy Stone scored her 18th, 19th and 20th goals and added an assist as North completed a season sweep of rival Quincy, 9-1, last Saturday.

"Betsy played a great game, passing as well as scoring," said Bregoli. "We didn't play as well as we did in the first game against them, but we stepped it up late in the first half and put the game away."

Playing at Veterans Memorial Stadium, North set the tone early when Stone scored 15 seconds into the game. Taking an entry pass from senior Liz Bennett, Stone lofted a shot over the head of Quincy goalkeeper Jazelle Derbes (29 saves).

Stone struck again later in the half, assisted by junior Caitlyn O'Donnell. Quincy cut the deficit to 2-1 when Leanne Martin connected on a penalty shot past North senior co-captain goalkeeper Kristen Bowes with nine minutes left. The shot was Quincy's only shot of the match.

North pulled away late in the half, scoring four goals in the final six minutes to build a 6-1 lead. Stone netted her third tally of the half, blasting a shot past the diving Derbes.

Raider senior co-captain Dorothy Cronin scored her first goal when she headed in a throw-in by freshman Lauren Sleeth. Senior Ashley Murphy followed that with her 11th goal, and just before the half ended, junior Kristin Coughlin one-timed a corner kick from Sleeth for her first goal.

North sophomore Jen Conley, who early in the second half hit the crossbar, later scored her first goal from 35 yards out. Sleeth scored off a corner kick, assisted by Murphy. Sophomore Kellee Conley closed the scoring, taking a pass from Stone for a goal.

NQ seniors Rachel O'Hara and Renee Gillan, both of whom have missed games due to illness or injury, played well. Bregoli also made special note of the Koch sisters, senior Lauren and freshman Jackie, playing together for the first time in a high school game.

In other recent action, Stone notched both goals and Bowes recorded her 10th shutout as NQ blanked visiting Plymouth South, 2-0, last Thursday.

The game remained scoreless at the half, thanks to a remarkable defensive play by North senior co-captain Rachael Powers. On a direct kick from 35 yards out, Powers rushed in to clear the ball, heading it over the crossbar after Bowes tipped it in the air.

In the second half, Stone's first goal was assisted by Lauren Koch, and Cronin set up Stone for the second goal.

Similar to the Quincy game, North broke open a close match against host Barnstable last Tuesday, picking up an 8-1 triumph.

Junior Maureen Holleran netted NQ's first-half goal, assisted by Murphy. Barnstable tied it on an direct kick before the half ended.

North pulled away early in the half, collecting three goals in a three-minute span, the first two by Kellee Conley. Murphy and Coughlin assisted on those tallies, and Murphy scored on an O'Donnell pass.

Three more goals in the next 10 minutes were scored by Lauren Koch, sophomore Stacy Szuesli and Stone. Sleeth closed the scoring with 10 seconds left.

Quincy's Strong Effort Against NQ Falls Short

For most of the first half of last Saturday's match, the Quincy High School girls' soccer team stayed with North Quincy High School, but North eventually pulled away for a 9-1 victory.

The Presidents wrapped up their season yesterday (Wednesday) with a 3:30 p.m. non-league game against Randolph at Varsity Field. Quincy looked to avenge a 2-0 setback in the season opener and earn its second victory.

In the loss to North Quincy at Veterans Memorial Stadium, the Presidents fell behind early when North's Betsy Stone scored the first of her three first-half goals 15 seconds into the match. Stone lofted a shot just over the head of Quincy goalkeeper Jazelle Derbes (29 saves).

The Red Raiders came right at the Quincy defense, but Derbes came up with a number of saves to keep the game close. Later in the half, North increased its lead to 2-0 when Stone scored from out front following a corner kick. Derbes had not time to react as the quick shot found the back of the net.

Moving the ball downfield but unable to penetrate North's defense for a clean shot, Quincy got the break it was looking for with just under nine minutes left in the half. North was called for an infraction in its penalty area, and Quincy was awarded a penalty kick. Senior co-captain Leanne Martin took the shot and sent it past North goalkeeper Kristen Bowes, trimming the deficit to 2-1.

A few minutes later, North was awarded a penalty kick and Stone pushed NQ back ahead by two with her third goal. The Raiders added three more goals and led, 6-1, at the break.

"We played well early on and kept it close, but in those last six minutes they got four quick goals," said Quincy head coach Robin Welinsky. "We were right with them, but then forgot what we were doing. You have to give North credit; they're a very good team, a strong team that knows where to put the ball. We're a young team, so maybe in a year or so we can be in the race with them."

In the second half, North scored three more times, while Quincy could not muster much offense despite solid overall efforts from a number of players.

"I thought Jazelle's play was one of the highlights," said Welinsky. "She kept us in it with some nice saves. On defense, Kim DiBona, Julie Gibbons, Crystal Kazolias and Kelly Raymer played well. All the girls worked their tails off, getting after every ball, hustling the entire game."

"I couldn't ask for anything more from Leanne Martin. She gives 100 percent effort on the field all the time. We're going to miss her and all the seniors next year. A lot of them were good starters and added a high quality of soccer to the team."

Early Spurt By Quincy Not Enough Vs. North

The season may have ended on a sour note for the Quincy High School boys' soccer team, but not for a lack of effort, said head coach Ray Papile.

"We went 2-13-1 this season, but we were a lot more competitive than in past years," he said, following a 4-2 setback to rival North Quincy last Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium in the season finale.

"The kids all worked hard and played their hearts out all season long," he added. "If a few breaks go our way, things would've been different, but that didn't happen. We have some players returning next year with a lot of varsity experience, so we hope to keep building the program and get the numbers up. Hopefully, we'll get there."

When the game began, it appeared that Quincy would run away with it, taking a 2-0 seven minutes into the opening half. Quincy sent North reeling 52 seconds into the game, as senior co-captain Tony Monaco was credited with a goal when a shot deflected off an NQ defender and into the net.

After a Quincy goal was disallowed a few minutes later, Presidents' senior co-captain Bard Hajrizaj carried the ball into North territory and blasted a shot to the lower left corner of the net. Eluding defenders with some deft ball handling, Hajrizaj pushed the Quincy lead to 2-0 at the 6:33 mark.

"I told the kids before that the pressure's on them, so go out and play loose," said Papile. "They did, and got two quick goals. But North's a good team and we knew they wouldn't lay down and die."

North battled back with two goals by Stephen Rochon and went ahead, 3-2, on another Rochon goal late in the half.

Now trailing for the first time, Quincy came out strong in the second half, but good shots by senior co-captain Jim Sullivan and Hajrizaj were turned away. Ten minutes into the half, a shot by senior Stephan Allsop ricocheted off the crossbar and went out of bounds.

With about 13 minutes to play, the Raiders got some breathing room when Rochon netted his fourth tally of the match. Quincy senior goalkeeper Joe Vallatini made a number of saves to keep the Presidents in the match, but the offense could not close the gap. The win secured North's first tournament berth in 14 years, and Papile congratulated the Red Raiders on their successful season.

"My hat's off to Bob (Dano, North head coach)," said Papile. "He's done a great job with the kids and they deserved to go. I'm glad for him and the team."

Papile also cited a number of Quincy players who turned in strong overall efforts, including Sullivan, Hajrizaj, Vallatini, Osgar Berk and senior co-captain Scott Staiti.

NQ Boys Beat Quincy, Clinch Tourney Berth

For the first time in 14 years, the boys' soccer team from North Quincy High School will participate in the state tournament, clinching a berth with a thrilling 4-2 victory over rival Quincy.

"We're just overjoyed," said North head coach Bob Dano following last Saturday's triumph at Veterans Memorial Stadium. "It's still sinking in, because it's such a big accomplishment for the team, which hasn't made it in a long time."

"To come from two wins last year to make the tournament, that's terrific. We have a good combination of talent and hard work, and hopefully we can keep it up and play good, solid soccer in the tournament."

Unlike information that appeared in last week's article in the Sun, the Red Raider boys have qualified for the state tournament in previous years. The first NQ boys' team to reach the postseason was the 1964 squad, which qualified by winning the South Shore League title.

This year's Red Raiders (8-7-2 overall, 7-6-0 Old Colony League) wrap up their regular season schedule today (Thursday) at 3:15 p.m. at Falmouth. The tentative opening date for the state tournament is next Friday, Nov. 6.

In the triumph over Quincy, high-scoring junior Stephen Rochon put on an offensive show, scoring all four goals as North came from behind to win the match.

"Steve's really picked it up in the second half of the season and playing like we expected he would," said Dano. "He's got a lot of talent and did some very nice things out there."

It was the Presidents that came out firing on all cylinders, however, scoring two goals in the first seven minutes. Just 52 seconds into the match, Quincy's Tony Monaco was credited with a goal that deflected off an NQ defender and eluded senior goalkeeper Rob Bell.

A few minutes later, Quincy's Bard Hajrizaj added to the lead with a remarkable individual effort, eluding defenders and blasting a shot into the lower left corner of the net.

Not long after, Rochon cut the deficit in half with his first goal, assisted by junior Joe Flynn. Gaining momentum, North kept the pressure on Quincy and tied the game 10 minutes later. Set up with a lob pass from junior Bill Miller, Rochon wheeled around and fired a shot by Quincy goalkeeper Joe Vallatini.

North eventually vaulted ahead, 3-2, on another Rochon score. At the 34:25 mark, North senior co-captain Kevin Walsh sent a long indirect kick towards the Quincy penalty area, where Rochon waited for the pass. He timed his leap perfectly and headed the ball in to give NQ the lead.

Trailing for the first time, Quincy opened the second half with a few scoring chances, but Bell and North's defense, anchored by senior co-captain Matt O'Mahoney and Walsh, kept the Presidents off the board. The play went back and forth until NQ padded its lead with about 13 minutes to play. Receiving a lead pass from junior Bill O'Toole, Rochon broke in past a couple of defenders and sent a shot past Vallatini to seal the victory.

In earlier action, North dropped a 3-0 game to Plymouth South last Thursday, following a 5-3 triumph over Barnstable last Tuesday. In that victory, Rochon notched four goals and junior Rick Loughmiller also scored a goal.

Barra Third At Minuteman Judo Classic

Christopher Barra, captain of the North Quincy High School wrestling team, recently placed third overall at the inaugural Minuteman Judo Classic in Malden.

The event, the largest judo tournament in New England this year, drew competitors from as far away as Colorado.

Competing for the first time as a senior (age 17 and older), Barra trailed only U.S. Olympic hopeful Ryan Reser, who is currently training with the U.S. Judo Team in Colorado Springs, Colo., and Henry Aroyo, a seasoned competitor from Connecticut. Barra defeated former Israeli Junior National Champion Radu Brestyan by a narrow margin to finish third.

Barra will be out of competition for the time being as he underwent surgery to repair torn cartilage he suffered during the Nationals in Toledo, Ohio, in July. He is expected to be ready to wrestle for the high school in December and resume judo competition in mid to late January.

NQ Hosts Quincy Today Balanced Red Raiders Gear Up For Tourney

Heading to the state tournament for the 12th consecutive season, the North Quincy High School girls' volleyball team recently picked up key wins over New Bedford and Whitman-Hanson.

The Red Raiders (13-5), who qualified for the post-season with a victory over Dennis-Yarmouth on Oct. 14, visited Taunton yesterday (Wednesday) for a 4 p.m. match.

Today (Thursday), the Red Raiders take on visiting rival Quincy, looking to complete the season sweep. North defeated the Presidents, 2-0, on their home court on Oct. 7. The JV match is slated for 5:30 p.m., followed by varsity match at about 6:30 p.m.

North closes its regular season next Monday at 6 p.m. against Medway.

Tournament pairings will be released next Wednesday and head coach Jim Rendle said he expects North to open play next Friday.

"We've got some tough matches before the tournament, which is what you want, a challenge to keep the team sharp," he said. "I definitely think we're ready for the tournament. We've played well against strong competition and we have 11 girls who can play and contribute. All we have to do is find the right combination and we're tough to beat."

Regarding the Quincy match, Rendle is well aware that the Presidents will look to upset North and avenge the earlier setback.

"I'm always nervous about the Quincy match, even though they didn't make the tourney this year," he said. "We need the match to help our seeding, so it's a very big match for us."

In recent action, North upended New Bedford, which entered Monday's match with a 17-1 record. North dropped the first game, 7-15, but came back to win the second and third, 15-12 and 15-4.

Leading NQ were junior Katie Jellison (12 kills, 30 digs), junior Meghan Ginty (seven kills), senior Angela Scott (seven kills, 17 digs) and senior co-captain Alexis Miranda (26 assists).

In a 15-2, 15-3 win over Whitman-Hanson last Friday, North's leaders were juniors Jessica Barbeau (seven kills), Jessica Lorman (three blocks, five kills) and Caitlin Powers (11 digs).

Last Wednesday, North battled the No. 2 team in the state, Barnstable, but lost 15-6, 18-16. Senior co-captain Alison Haddad (five service points, four kills, one block) was among the leaders for North.

Back on Oct. 19, North took on the No. 1 team in the state, Dracut, on its home court. The Red Raiders lost the match, 15-12, 12-15, 6-15, but became the first team this season to take a game against Dracut. In that first game, NQ junior Tia Harris recorded four blocks and four kills. Sophomore Amy Jellison, senior co-captain Kim Huerth and Katie Jellison (nine kills) also played well.

Injuries Wreak Havoc On Winless Presidents

Depleted by injuries at key positions, the Quincy High School football team could not contain Taunton's potent offense and lost, 55-6, to the host Tigers.

Last Friday's night setback, which Quincy head coach Peter Chella called "possibly the worst defeat" in his four years at the helm, dropped Quincy's record to 0-6 overall, 0-3 in the Old Colony League. Taunton improved to 5-1, 4-0 with the victory.

"We had some players who couldn't make it at the last minute, and we had a lot of injuries to begin with," said Chella, whose team's last four defeats have come against opponents with a combined 20-4 record. "We've lost five starting offensive linemen to injuries, so we're playing five new kids, and that makes it tough."

"We also lost our starting running back (John Katsarikas) again, and he's been hurt on and off all season. That and a few other things caused us not to play well. We're all pretty disappointed, but all we can do is try to regroup, put this behind us and get ready for the next game."

Friday at 7 p.m., the Presidents play their fifth straight (and final) road tilt when they visit league foe Plymouth South, fresh off a thrilling 10-8 victory over host North Quincy last Friday night. Plymouth South (2-4, 1-3) won that contest with a 43-yard field goal by Nate Buchanan with just 12 seconds remaining.

"They are a very enthusiastic, hard-working team, and they showed that against North," said Chella of the Panthers. "They didn't give up when North went ahead, so we'll have to be ready for a battle. North played them well, though, and I hope we can, too."

In the defeat at Taunton, the Presidents fell behind on three first-quarter touchdowns by John Carr, who finished with 251 rushing yards against Quincy. Carr scored on runs of 70, 50 and 78 yards, followed by Jon Kahn's extra point kicks.

The Tigers, scoring an average of 33 points per game, eclipsed that mark with three additional second-quarter touchdowns. Jay Dumost scored on a 26-yard run, followed by a 23-yard scoring pass from quarterback Ryan Colton to Kahn. Dumost added a 65-yard punt return for a touchdown, providing Taunton with a 41-0 lead at the break.

The Presidents held the Tigers to two second-half touchdowns, a 62-yard scamper by Latroy Gordon in the third quarter and a 15-yard scoring run by Derek Sanchez in the fourth.

Quincy's lone touchdown came in the fourth quarter, when quarterback Dan Kelly scored on a two-yard run. The Presidents opted for the two-point conversion, and Kelly passed to Mike Ramponi to close out the scoring.

Presidents Prepared To Play Spoiler Role

Splitting its past four matches, the Quincy High School girls' volleyball team headed into the season's final week looking to finish on a positive note.

With a 5-12 record, the Presidents will not participate in postseason play, but head coach Christine Barrett looks for the squad to play the role of spoiler this week.

"Our record really isn't an indicator of how we've played," she said. "We're not going to make the tournament, which is somewhat disappointing. We were a young team this year with not much experience, but the girls gave 110 percent every match."

"With three matches left, we want to end the season with a couple of victories and at the same time spoil the chances of tournament teams trying to move up in the seedings."

After a match yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. at Whitman-Hanson, the Presidents visit rival North Quincy today (Thursday) in hopes of upsetting the tournament-bound Red Raiders. The JV match is slated for 5:30 p.m., followed by the varsity match at approximately 6:30 p.m. North won the first meeting, 2-0, on Quincy's home court three weeks ago.

"Anytime Quincy plays North, it's an exciting game, no matter what the records are," said Barrett. "Like any match, anything can happen. The pressure is on them, because they want to improve their seeding. Hopefully we'll play well and catch them on a bad night."

Next Monday at 4 p.m., Quincy concludes its season with a match at Taunton.

In recent action, Quincy junior Caitlin Nichol (four kills, eight digs, two aces), junior co-captain Tabitha McLellan (four kills, four digs, two blocks, once ace) and sophomore co-captain Jacqui Niosi (12 assists five digs, once ace) led the way in a 15-5, 15-11 setback to Falmouth on Monday.

Last Friday, the Presidents defeated Plymouth North, 15-11, 15-8, sparked by the efforts of junior Colleen Nichol (eight kills, two aces, three digs), Niosi (11 assists, three digs, one block), senior co-captain Liz Ashworth (four kills, two blocks) and junior Michelle Catrambone (three kills, three blocks).

Quincy lost to perennial powerhouse New Bedford, 15-3, 15-6, last Wednesday, but picked up a 15-5, 15-12 victory over Plymouth South on Oct. 16. Leading the Presidents against PS were Niosi (17 assists), Colleen Nichol (nine kills, five digs, two aces), Caitlin Nichol (five kills, seven digs, once ace) and McLellan (five kills, three digs).

In a match played Oct. 15, Quincy dropped a tough 2-1 match to Brockton, 9-15, 15-8, 14-16, despite the play of Colleen Nichol (10 kills, nine digs, four blocks), Niosi (23 assists, six digs, two kills, one block) and Caitlin Nichol (five kills, 14 digs, one block, once ace).

Pee Wee B's Blank Parkway, 9-0

The Quincy Pee Wee B Bandits opened its season with a bang, shutting out Parkway, 9-0, at Neponset Rink.

Quincy goalie Ryan Barter only faced three shots as the defense kept Parkway's forwards from getting good scoring chances. Quincy's forwards and defense turned in solid efforts, with some excellent back-checking.

The Bandits jumped out to a 5-0 lead in the first period, as Bill Barter scored two goals in the period and added a third in the final period for his first hat trick. Assisting on the goals were Steve McGrath and Joey McManus, who were flying up and down the ice.

Danny Sullivan also notched his first hat trick, courtesy of some nice passing from George Snowling and Brendan Craig, who collected two assists. Matt Haskins registered his first goal and contributed two assists. Richard Stone netted his first goal and the last of the game, set up by Keith Flaherty.

Unbeaten Manets, Mustangs Tangle Sunday At Stadium

Quincy Youth Football League's two unbeaten 5-0 teams, the Houghs Neck Manets and Milton Mustangs, tangle Sunday at 1 p.m. in the opener of a tripeheader at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The 2:30 p.m. Sunday tilt pits the Quincy Point Panthers (1-4) against the West Quincy Elks (0-5), followed by the North Quincy Apaches (3-2) and the Squantum Storm (1-4).

The Manets preserved their perfect mark with a come-from-behind 8-6 victory over the Apaches. The Manets controlled the ball for the entire first quarter, but the drive stalled at the Apaches' 10-yard line.

In the second quarter, the Apaches got on the board with a 5-yard touchdown and took a 6-0 lead into halftime. Neither team scored in the third quarter as the defenses stepped up and held the offenses in check.

After a minor injury, Manets quarterback Frank Kelly returned to the game in the fourth quarter and threw a 20-yard pass to Paul Picarski. On the next play, Jason Moore ran 25 yards for the tying touchdown. The Manets went for two, and Kelly ran a bootleg around right and scored the game-winning conversion.

The Apaches got the ball back, but the Manets defense held the NQ team scoreless the rest of the way, led by Mike Quigley, Brian Malone, Picarski, Moore, Shawn Munchbach and Ryan Tobin, among others.

Offensive leaders for the Manets were Kelly, Moore, Tom Belton, Robbie Tatum, Mike Cox and Josh Giordani, along with Tom Walsh and Sean Connelly.

In other action, James Foster scored three touchdowns to spark the Mustangs over the Elks, 24-6. Norman Yuen scored the only touchdown for the Elks.

Two touchdown passes from quarterback Tim Watson to tailback Chris Dubeare led the Storm over the Panthers, 22-14. Storm fullback Dylan Seay sealed the victory with a four-yard touchdown run. Defensively for the Storm, Matt Grazioso had an interception.

Woodward School Soccer Splits Four Games

The Woodward School sandwiched two victories between its first two setbacks of the season, improving its record to 6-2-1 in the Independent Girls Conference.

Woodward edged the Waring School, 1-0, on a goal by freshman Danielle Rugg in the opening minutes of the game. Assisting on the score was freshman Kathleen Hester. Junior captain Danielle Gatto recorded 17 saves, posting her fifth shutout of the season. Junior captain Audrey Ferguson, sophomore Caitlin Golden and junior Jackie McKim all turned in solid efforts.

In previous action, Woodward dropped two games to Falmouth Academy. The second games a 7-0 shutout, as Falmouth outpowered Woodward despite the efforts of Gatto, who came up with numerous saves.

Falmouth earlier handed Woodward its first loss by the score of 3-1. Hester scored the lone Woodward goal, assisted by freshman Ryan Kelley. Sophomore Lori McKiewicz, Ferguson and freshman Meaghan MacTaggart turned in strong defensive efforts.

In a 4-1 victory over Cambridge at Weston, Woodward battled back from an early deficit with three second-half goals. Trailing 1-0, Woodward's Hester tied the score, assisted by Kelley and senior captain Jessica Boothby.

Woodward dominated the second half, as Boothby clinched the game with the first of her two goals. Hester added an assist and Golden scored on a penalty shot. MacTaggart, McKim and senior Jackie O'Meara played well defensively.

Pee Wee A's Capture Early Season Tourney

The Quincy Pee Wee A team emerged victorious from an early season tournament in which goalie Nick Manning notched two shutouts and Quincy outscored its opponents 18 to 1.

Quincy coach Al Grazioso and assistants Mark Giordani and Steve McGowan were pleased that the team displayed such crisp passing and selfless teamwork.

Quincy captured the tourney with a 4-0 victory over South Boston, scoring the first goal late in the first when Kevin Richardson rifled off a pass from Ryan Feldhoff after Matt Lavery started the breakout.

Jake O'Donnell, Kyle Carmody and Tim Duggan played strong defense throughout the scoreless second period as Manning came up with spectacular saves to preserve the lead.

Quincy sealed it with three third-period goals.

Matt Germain scored twice on back-to-back shifts, with assists on the first by Steve Kelley and Feldhoff and Richardson on the second. Brendan Conley netted the final goal when he slammed Tim Duggan's pass under the Southie goaltender.

In the second game, Manning posted the shutout as Quincy blanked Weymouth, 7-0. Ryan Conley scored twice, assisted by Kelley and Lavery, and Conley also combined with Josh Giordani to assist Matt Grazioso on a goal. Germain scored off a centering pass from Richardson, who also scored off passes from Kelley and Feldhoff.

Andrew Patten played outstanding defense and collected two assists. The first was a breakout pass resulting in a goal by Giordani. The second was a pass from the point to Brendan Conley, whose pass out front was neatly tucked away by Brendan Craig.

In the opener, Quincy fell behind, 1-0, but reeled off seven unanswered goals to hand South Boston a 7-1 setback. Giordani scored Quincy's first two goals and finished the evening with a hat trick and an assist. He was assisted twice by Grazioso and Ryan Conley, who had an assist on one of Grazioso's two goals.

Also contributing to the offensive onslaught were Liam Powers and Feldhoff, who scored one goal apiece. Richardson and Germain assisted Powers and Craig garnered an assist on Feldhoff's tally. Defensesmen Timmy Duggan, Lavery and Kelley each picked up an assist. Manning was outstanding between the pipes, with help from defensesmen O'Donnell, Carmody and Andrew Patten, who relentlessly met Southie attacks with hard-hitting checks.

Squirt A's Tie Triboro

The Quincy Squirt A Falcons opened the season in fine fashion, with a tie against Triboro and a victory over Somerville.

In a 2-2 tie against Triboro, Matt Giordani got the Falcons on the board with an unassisted goal. In the third period, Mike McKeon beat the Triboro defense and netted a goal, assisted by Jonathan Conso.

The backchecking of Brendan Mulcahy, Matt Tobin and Stevie Bythrow was vital to the Falcons' success. Offensive charges by Mike Giordani, Glen Gibbons, Pat Devlin and Craig Calley kept Triboro's defense in its own end. A strong defensive effort by blueliners Paul Fasoli, Mike MacPherson, Ray Marchand, Dan Poggi, Ed Rooney and Conso kept Triboro's forwards at bay.

Quincy goalies Frankie Sorrento and Matt Connors made key saves to keep the team in the game.

A 4-0 triumph over Somerville was sparked by first-period scores by Mulcahy and Mike Giordani, assisted by Matt Giordani and McKeon. In the second, Tobin notched a goal, assisted by Conso. Mulcahy and Mike Giordani teamed up again for a goal and an assist in the third.

Excellent backchecking by Bythrow, Craig Calley, Devlin and Gibbons made it difficult for Somerville's offense to sustain an attack. Quincy blueliners Conso, Fasoli, MacPherson, Marchand, Poggi and Rooney also played well. In goal, Connors and Sorrento turned away every shot.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

In less than a week we will have a chance to exercise one of our great privileges as Americans. Yes, it's time to vote again. Election Day is next Tuesday, Nov. 3. We can exercise a right that nearly every American is willing to fight to maintain, yet pitifully few exercise and fewer exercise seriously.

No need to discuss at length the reasons for low voter participation. The reasons given vary little over time... no good candidates, no good corruption, my vote doesn't matter, not registered but may register and vote next time, etc., etc.

Granted, some of the folks we elect leave much to be desired, but if all the smart people who didn't vote or weren't registered had been registered and had voted, maybe we'd have elected better. It is so easy to agree with Harry Truman who said, "Ninety percent of politicians give the other ten percent a bad reputation, but if we don't vote, there is no chance of improvement..."

Let us, as Americans, make next Tuesday a very special day. Let us exercise our very special right. Let us "in droves" go to the polls and vote for the candidate of our choice and for the issues we believe in...

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Morning hours this week may bring a few antisocial feelings, but these quickly subside as you have exhilarating times in the company of your friends. Romance is a plus, particularly over the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Success comes in business by maintaining a low profile. Though it's not the best time for dealing with higher-ups, you nevertheless can get a lot of significant work done now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) This is a good week for getting together with your friends or for participation in a group activity. Try to guard against needless expenditures. The weekend is best for quiet pursuits.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't overreact to a callous remark you overhear. A certain element of secrecy is necessary to insure the success of a project. Your financial situation improves as the week winds down.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be especially attentive to the feelings of a family member. You're bursting with creative energy this week and should begin new projects. Surprise news is welcome.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You could be a trifle extravagant, but money is well spent if it goes on the home this week. In romance, be sincere. You're inclined now to put too much emphasis on superficial things.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It may be hard to muster up enthusiasm for a current work assignment, but you're excited about a creative project or a new romantic interest. Surprise news arrives this weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Either you or a family member seems moody as the week begins, but you're on the right track regarding an innovative career move. Do-it-yourselfers begin new projects this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It's a wonderful week to do something new for entertainment, provided that you don't go wild in your spending. Loved ones tune into different facets of each other's personalities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Try not to let the moods of others disrupt you, as you have important work to do this week. Ingenuity and intuition are your allies on the road to accomplishment.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The personal touch doesn't work very well for you on the job this week. Maintain a businesslike decorum to get ahead. Partners are on the same wave length.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An unusual suggestion is made to you in business this week. Tact and diplomacy are needed in dealing with a sensitive friend. Avoid spending money frivolously while shopping over the weekend.

A Report From Morrill:

He's Finding Other Quincys 'Small But Friendly'

Bill Morrill, on his ambassador of goodwill trip across country to visit 12 other Quincys, so far is finding them small but "very friendly."

Morrill, who left last Tuesday in his 1995 Ford club wagon with a hitched trailer, had visited five Quincys as of Monday: Quincy, Pa.; Quincy, W.Va.; Quincy, Ky.; Quincy, Miss. and Quincy, Ind.

In a telephone report to The Sun from Quincy, Mo., Monday, Morrill said:

"The first five Quincys I have been to so far are all small—unbelievably small."

"The reception has been great. They are real nice people. I went out to lunch with one resident. They are very interested in our Quincy."

Morrill found Quincy, W.Va. to be "hardly more than a strip mall."

Quincy, Ky., he reports, is a small town about three 10ths of a mile long with a downtown consisting of a post office, convenience store and an auto body shop.

"Quincy, Miss.," he said, "is not much more than a cemetery and cotton fields. But they have a cotton named Quincy."

"Amory, the town next

door, has acquired most of Quincy's land down through the years."

Quincy, Ind., he says, comprises five square miles.

"The post office seems to be the only main building standing. The elementary school burned down some years ago and the Masonic Temple last year. The convenience store is still standing but has been closed a long time."

Morrill said he asked residents why buildings burn down there and was told it was because Quincy did not have a fire department of its own and had to wait for fire apparatus to arrive from another town a distance away.

"Boy, our Quincy Fire Department would be really welcomed out here," he said. "Tell (Chief) Tom Gorman."

Morrill noted that floods heavily damaged Quincy, Ind., years ago, knocking down railroad bridges which were never replaced. This apparently led to the decline of the town.

Morrill's next scheduled stop was Quincy, Ohio and he expected to reach there yesterday (Wednesday). Then it will be off to Quincy, Mich.

Morrill hopes to find the rest of the Quincys a little larger.

One for sure will be Quincy, Ill., our sister city, which he will reach after his stop in Michigan.

"I'll probably stay a couple of days in Quincy, Ill.," he says.

Others he will visit are: Quincy, Mo.; Quincy, Wash.; Quincy, Calif. and Quincy, Fla.

Morrill is carrying with him an official letter of greetings from Mayor James Sheets and donated mementos and other items including:

department uniform patches, Quincy T-shirts, sweatshirts and buttons, brochures, literature about John and John Quincy Adams and copies of The Quincy Sun and its Historic Quincy supplement.

"You'll be happy to know," says Morrill, "that The Sun and the Historic Quincy supplement copies are making a big hit."

Morrill has a TV camera with him to shoot scenes and record greetings in the Quincys he is visiting.

It will be used in a millennium celebration documentary Quincy Access Television is producing.

Morrill's trip will cost an estimated $5,000 even though he is traveling in his club wagon, "his home away from home."

He put up $2,000 of his own money as a starter and friends, $1,500. He will personally go the remaining $1,500 needed but hopes donors might help reduce

Contractor Turning Heads

In Quincy Neighborhood

LOCAL: Neighbors are talking about a local company that built a 25' x 40' second level that turned a two bedroom cape into a 4 bedroom garrison in 21 hours. Patrick J. Flaherty of Flaherty Contracting says it all comes down to good planning and being organized. With interest rates down, it's a good time to borrow and add on instead of selling because the house market is high and it makes it difficult to trade up in size. Flaherty Contracting is a full service home improvement contractor. Fully licensed and insured. They can handle your needs whether it is an addition, new kitchen or bath as well as your roofing, siding and window needs.

Quincy Center Restaurant Gets Expansion Approval

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

On a 4-0 vote at Tuesday's meeting, the License Board approved a plan for an extension of the common victualer-all alcoholic license at X and O European Trattoria, 1384 Hancock St. (formerly Mando's), pending a meeting with the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Police Chief Thomas Frane was absent.

According to attorney Robert Fleming, the new owners plan to add more dining seats (from 94 to 160) a cafe and pastry shop and a new ladies room.

He added that there would be a better floor plan, a different entrance to the bar and a more comfortable waiting area.

He said persons will be able to purchase pastries from the cafe.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue told the owners that the kitchen area would have to be enlarged if the baking were done on the premises.

However, the owners said they do not plan to bake their own pastries at this time.

A question arose in which Building Inspector Walter White questioned whether a photo studio (former Fine Light Photography) can be converted into a restaurant without a vote from the Zoning Board.

Attorney Robert Fleming explained that it would be a "retail to retail operation" in a non-conforming building and not necessary for the owners to appear at the zoning board. He cited a few restaurants in the area that had expanded without having to appear before the zoning board.

However, White was adamant and said he didn't have the authority to make the decision, but instead it would be under the jurisdiction of the zoning board.

Trying to spare the owners further from delays, Fleming said he was afraid the meeting with the zoning board would be delayed until the first of next year.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the request will go to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC)

Lodging House Approval At Former Church Parsonage

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board granted a request Tuesday to Porteus House, 17 Elm St., at Christ Church for a lodging house license to be managed by the Quincy Community Action Programs Association, pending repairs done up to code.

The site, the former parsonage in the rear of Christ Church, will house eight residents.

Chairman Joseph Shea who requested that a resident manager be appointed, read two opposing letters citing disorderly tenants in the past.

Susan Keenan, director of the QCAP told the board that a person who once lived in the lodging house has since moved and would be temporarily managing the facility.

Keenan, who directs similar housing on Phipps St., Broadway, Berlin and Wayland in Wollaston and a site in Weymouth, said she plans to visit the Porteus House several hours a week.

According to Fire chief Thomas Gorman, the site has been used for different organizations, but this was the first time the church had applied for a license for lodging.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond said there were concerns in the neighborhood and said he felt it "very important to have a resident manager" with a system of accountability and an assurance to some degree of a contact if necessary.

Gorman said if the Community Action at some point ends their contract, the church would have to go before the board at another time.

Shea said the city has about 40 lodging houses and they have all been "upgraded" and cited the need for these types of houses. He said the community action should "work towards finding a resident manager."

Keenan told the board that in about three to four weeks, most of the work will be completed including replacing windows.

'Cocoa House' At Union Congregational

Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston, has begun a "Cocoa House" program for children ages 3-12.

The program, which meets on the last Saturday of the month from 9 a.m. to noon, is based on the church's Vacation Bible School and features Bible stories, crafts and games.

Three Decades

By HENRY BOSWORTH
Publisher

Three decades!
The Quincy Sun is 30 years old.
How quickly the years whiz by. And the changes they bring.

The first issue of The Sun rolled off the press Sept. 26, 1968 in the latter part of a year that was both momentous—and tragic—for the nation.

Assassins gunned down Martin Luther King, Jr. and Robert Kennedy within two months of one another. There were riots at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

And, for the first time ever, a controversial war in a place called Vietnam—a country many of us had trouble trying to find on the map—was right there in front of us in our living rooms nightly on television.

That war really hit home, here in Quincy, where a Vietnam War Memorial was unveiled on Veterans Day, 1968, in Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Inscribed on it were the names of 27 from Quincy who had given their lives in a war that many—especially young people—were having difficulty understanding.

Sadly, the names on that memorial would eventually grow to 46 before it was over.

It was an eventful year in other ways here in Quincy. Mayor James R. McIntyre, in his second term, was keeping a close watch on the progress of the MBTA Red Line extension into Quincy.

He talked MBTA officials into relocating the site of the North Quincy T station to spare 22 homes from demolition and avoid a potential costly year and a half construction delay.

In fact, that was the lead story in that first issue of The Sun under a banner headline: "Major Delay Averted In Quincy MBTA Extension."

Locally, overall, times were pretty good.

The General Dynamics Shipyard, long the economic backbone of Quincy and the immediate South Shore, was booming.

With a healthy backlog of contracts, the yard's workforce numbered 8,000 and there were 500 more jobs waiting to be filled. There were also optimistic predictions there could be 10,000 employed there soon.

Who would have thought then that the shipyard would one day be shut down and idle for years? Or that the yard that produced such fighting ships as the Massachusetts, Quincy and Lexington would have stacked bags of fertilization pellets from a sludge plant passing through the Fore River bridge?

The average family income in Quincy in 1968 was estimated at $11,000. Not much compared to today's salaries. But a dollar seemed to go a lot further back

Major Delay Averted In Quincy MBTA Extension

City Council Will Discuss Incinerator Plan Saturday

The City Council's special committee on dumping and refuse problems will meet Saturday at 10 a.m. to discuss a proposal for an estimated $2 million incinerator.

The committee will explore various methods of rubbish disposal, including incineration, before making a final recommendation on which to build for Quincy.

Our queries are rapidly being filled, noted Committee Chairman George B. McDonald. "We are fast approaching a critical stage in which a long-range refuse disposal system must be agreed upon and thoroughly planned.

We can't foot around with this any longer.

The full council membership has requested to sit with McDonald and regular committee members, Councilors Albert R. Barlow, Edward Graham, Arthur Tobin and John F. Kiegar, at the series of upcoming meetings to help find the right answer to the problem as soon as possible.

Councilor McDonald is also inviting interested residents to attend the committee meetings in the council chamber to hear the various proposals.

At Saturday's meeting, John Corbett, president of North American Incinerator Corp. of Boston will outline his firm's proposals for either a municipally or privately operated incinerator.

McDonald said one of his firm's special incineration features is rocket-type grates for complete combustion, leaving no unburned rubbish or garbage.

He said his committee, Mayor James R. McIntyre and key department heads have been invited to inspect the North American Incinerator Corp. of Boston's plant in Greenwich, Conn. He expects the Quincy delegation to make the trip within a week.

McDonald said of particular interest to the Quincy group will be a new section added to the 30-year-old incinerator at six years ago.

In further, he said, burns more than 300 tons of refuse a day at a cost of $5.75 per ton. Primary combustion is at 1,850 degrees with the rubbish that the only fuel. "There are more technological advances developed by North American since they may be incorporated in an incinerator built today," McDonald said.

He believes Quincy would require dual 250-ton capacity burners to handle up to 100 tons of refuse a day. He estimated the

A threatened potential year and a half delay in the MBTA extension to Quincy has been averted and 22 North Quincy homes spared from demolition.

Mayor James R. McIntyre disclosed last night that the planned North Quincy transit station will be located 350 feet, preventing an ominous "long term" construction snag and taking of the homes.

But despite the development the Mayor does not expect trains to be running to Quincy until early 1970, mainly because of a construction slowdown caused by the iron works strike. MBTA General Manager Leo Cosak had predicted the Quincy line would be in operation by Christmas 1969.

The North Quincy station, the Mayor said, will be located 350 feet north of the new West Squamton St. bridge.

Original plans were to put the station immediately under the bridge with an extending 300 feet north and south.

The location was selected as a result of a number of hearings in 1965 and 1966.

But the new site has been designated with agreement by city officials, North Quincy Mayor McIntyre and planners and engineers thought the original site was the best compromise at the time he said "but since they have run into difficulty because of the Newport Ave. extension."

It is a space difficulty—trying to get the Newport Ave. extension, the station and tracks and the West Squamton St. bridge.

The Mayor had immediate meetings with MBTA officials to hold them to their original commitments to place the station under the West Squamton St. bridge.

McDonald said he, "when we saw the preliminary plans for the station under the bridge would require the taking of 22 homes in the vicinity."

Peak Enrollment At Jr. College

Quincy Junior College has reached another milestone in its 10-year history with a fall total record enrollment of 1,687 students.

The figure, announced by President Kenneth F. White, is 122 higher than last year's.

The growth the school has undergone in just a decade is shown by comparison of this figure with the first enrollment in September, 1958. Total students that opening year: 25.

Of the 1,687 students this year, 711 are in the full-time day Division-592 freshmen and 182 sophomores.

The part-time Evening Division has 976 students including:

- Evening College: 464
- Quincy City Hospital student nurses: 31
- Evening Community Educational Services: 436
- General Dynamics personnel: 25

The 711 full-time students is an increase of 71 over last year's 640.

The biggest gain is in the 436 students enrolled in the Evening Community Educational Services program for adults. This is nearly triple the 160 taking these courses last year.

The overall gain in total enrollment would have been considerably higher than 122 if it had not been for a drop in those taking courses at General Dynamics. There were 170 at General Dynamics last year compared to 25 this fall.

The college, keeping pace with its growth, now has three Dean assistants White. They are Hugo F. Sabat of Quincy, Dean of Administration, Joseph J. Fair of Squamton, Dean of Students, and Richard T. Mait of Braintree, new Dean of Evening Community Educational Services.

The college offers more than 60 courses in liberal arts, business administration, secretarial and continuing education.

Between 90 and 95 percent of Quincy Junior College graduates go on to a senior college.

THE QUINCY SUN was born Sept. 26, 1968 in the former Quincy Conservatory building at 7 Foster St., Quincy Center. The Sun's office was on the second floor, the three windows to the left.

OUR SECOND LOCATION was on the second floor of the Mutual Building on Hancock St., above the Kincade Furniture Store and which has since burned down. The rent was good but we often had trouble with the heat. Here Muriel Lyon, typesetter; Sun publisher Henry Bosworth and reporter Tom Henshaw give you an idea of how cold it could get.

office manager; Publisher Henry Bosworth; Dorothy Bosworth, clerk of the corporation; Editor Robert Bosworth; Robin Powers, production supervisor; Robert Noble, photographer; Liam Fitzgerald, sportswriter; and Lois Seggelin, accountant.

then.

For example, you could still buy a pretty nice home for under $25,000. A new Ford could be had for $3,200 and at 34 cents a gallon you could keep the tank full.

Bread was 22 cents a loaf. You could mail a letter for six cents and it probably got there as fast as one does today for 32 cents.

Yes, it was a pretty good year.

And a pretty good year, we thought, to launch a community weekly newspaper in Quincy.

We introduced ourselves with an editorial entitled "Sunrise" that Sept. 26th. A letter from Mayor McIntyre welcomed us.

Reaction to the first issue, and the next few was encouraging but hardly earth-shaking. There were doubters who read the "Sunrise" editorial and predicted "Sunset" would follow within six months.

There were times we thought they might prove to be right.

But, fortunately, there were friends—readers, news sources and advertisers—who strongly believed in a community newspaper and also felt that having two newspapers in town was better for the town than having just one.

Advertisers like Remo and Pete DeNicola at South Shore Television, George Reardon at Presidential Chevrolet, Bob Fitzgerald and Bob Costello at South Shore Buick, and Leo Darr at Quincy Motor kept us alive during those crucial early months.

Readers who plunked down a dime for a copy encouraged us. Those who paid $3.50 in advance for a year's subscription by mail showed their faith in us despite the skeptics and their predictions of doom.

Many of you were among them back then.

And thanks to you—we hung in there and—well—we're still here 30 years later.

It all started in a second floor corner office in the old Quincy Conservatory Building at 7 Foster St. a few feet from where the Quincy District Courthouse now stands.

We moved a year later to another second floor office above the Kincaide Furniture store in the Mutual Building on Hancock St., later destroyed by fire.

We finally made it to the street floor in early 1975 at our present location, 1372 Hancock St. in the old Quincy Savings Bank building and which we have since purchased.

We have seen many changes in Quincy's landscape these 30 years: The coming of the T, State Street South, Quincy Center Plaza, new City Hall, Presidents Place, Crown Colony, Marina Bay, etc.

And have seen a mixture of old landmarks disappear: Remick's the Bargain Center, the Strand, Art and Lincoln theaters, the old Waldorf Restaurant, DiMarzio's roller skating rink and more recently, Eddie's Diner, among them.

We have covered the administrations of six mayors—their promises, accomplishments and frustrations. We watched Walter Hannon go home the apparent winner one election night only to have a recount say the real winner was Joseph LaRaia.

And we have bid sad farewells to such powerful political figures as Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Thomas Burgin and, not long ago, Clifford Marshall. And seen a new one come along: Jim Sheets.

We have recorded Quincy's economic ups and downs.

We reported schools being closed as enrollments dipped. Now they are building new ones. And now bank names are changing so fast you need a scorecard to keep track of them.

We have seen our young news carriers grow up, go off to college, into the service—some to war—and into successful careers. We have had photographs of some of those little girls who grew up like Gigi as beautiful brides on our social pages.

We have chronicled thousands of births, high school and college graduates, dean's lists, honor rolls and, sadly, the deaths of many friends. Among them: Munroe MacLean, Jack Donahue, James Asher, Fr. Cornelius Heery, Richard Koch, Ruth Gordon, Ruth Abbiatti, Muriel Goudey.

We have had photos of 30 New Year babies grace Page 1. And have honored 13 residents with "The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award" for outstanding community service.

We cheered when Hank Conroy's Quincy Presidents went undefeated in 1970 to win the Greater Boston League Championship. And, in 1992 when Ken McPhee's North Quincy Red Raiders won it all: undefeated season, the Old Colony League title and a last-minute win over Arlington in the Division 1B Super Bowl.

We are still asked, now and then, "What was your favorite Sun edition?" And we still reply as we have these 30 years: The first, because it was the beginning, the one that started it all.

Ranked right up there, as we have said before, would be the Feb. 9, 1978 issue: The Blizzard of '78.

Quincy was paralyzed by 27 inches of snow but we somehow managed to get the paper out just one day late. The banner headline over the Page 1 story and photos pleaded: "Please, No More!"

One nice thing about that blizzard: it really united the city, bringing people—neighbor and stranger—together to help one another get through it all.

Down through the years, The Sun has won a number of awards for editorials, features, supplements and photography from our peers and community service awards from Quincy organizations.

One of the awards was the National Newspaper Foundation's Blue Ribbon Award recognizing us as "an outstanding community newspaper."

That's what we started out to be: a good community newspaper. We hope we have been. And we will continue to work at it, to be sure.

It has been an interesting three decades as "Historic Quincy's Hometown Weekly Newspaper."

We have said it before but we'd like to say it once again: All of you are as much a part of The Sun as we, the staff.

Without you we never would have reached this 30th milestone. In fact, without you, those skeptics might have been right. We might not have made it past those first six months.

With your help and encouragement we look forward to the future and the new century with confidence and enthusiasm. In Quincy and The Quincy Sun.

We are proud to carry that name Quincy in our banner. That's what we are all about: Quincy. The best little city in the world.

As we begin our fourth decade and make plans for the new century, we want to thank you—our readers, advertisers, news sources, news carriers and friends—for making it all possible. You really did make it possible.

Thank you, Quincy!

1968 MBTA Red Line Delay Averted

Delay in construction of the MBTA Red Line was averted when Mayor James McIntyre convinced officials to relocate the site of the North Quincy station 350 feet to spare 22 homes from demolition. It could have been a costly year and a half construction delay.

The General Dynamics Shipyard was booming with a workforce (as of Oct. 24) at 8,336 and 500 job openings still to be filled. There was even talk of the workforce soon reaching 10,000.

"The Granite," the 123-year-old hand-drawn fire tub and the city's first fire fighting apparatus was honored by the Boston Fire Department during Fire Prevention Week.

The Hong Kong Flu was expected to hit the city hard. There was a rush for vaccinations.

The USS Whale, the first nuclear submarine built in Massachusetts, was commissioned at the General Dynamics Shipyard.

Jordan Marsh announced plans for a distribution center—the largest in the country—in Squantum with completion scheduled for the early 1970s.

Quincy's Vietnam War Memorial was dedicated at Mount Wollaston Cemetery on Veterans Day with 27 names of those from Quincy who had given their lives inscribed on it.

Mayor McIntyre called for widening the span of the Fore River Bridge 300 feet so that General Dynamics could bid on contracts for super-sized ships and tankers.

Quincy was linked to the Natural Warning System or "Hot Line" to give the city a two-minute warning in case of a nuclear attack or disaster.

Deaths included Reuben A. Grossman, city leader and executive of the Grossman Company.

THREE MAYORS were among those pausing for this group photo at mid-term ceremonies for Mayor James R. McIntyre and the City Council in January, 1969. Seated are former Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa, Mayor McIntyre, former Plan E Mayor David S. McIntosh and City Council President J.

Vincent Smyth. Standing are Rabbi Jacob Mann, Rt. Rev. Walter J. Leach, Dist. Atty. George G. Burke, former City Council president; Percy N. Lane, re-elected to his 31st term as clerk of council committees, Rev. Bedros Baharian and a crew-cut City Clerk John M. Gillis. (Quincy Sun photo)

1969 McIntyre Re-elected To Third Term

Mayor James McIntyre vowed in his mid-term address to fight city-wide property revaluation, saying it could have a negative impact on the small homeowner.

Several northeast storms dumped 71.5 inches of snow in the city and nearby area, causing numerous power losses.

Mayor McIntyre sought the use of Army equipment to help battle the storms.

Contracts were signed for a 226-unit addition to 1000 Southern Artery which, it was believed, would make it the largest elderly housing facility in the nation.

The Names On The Memorial Would Reach 46

The Vietnam War: The Agony And Pain

The agony and pain of it all were felt here as Quincy sons gave their lives in a little-known country so far away in a war that had become so controversial it was tearing the nation apart.

The names of 27 of those Quincy sons were inscribed on the Vietnam War Memorial unveiled and dedicated at Mount Wollaston Cemetery on Veterans Day in November, 1968.

The 27 names: Brian P. Ahern, Richard C. Archer, Francis Builaert, James E. Casale, Ralph Caspole, James H. Cavicchi, Thomas Chiminello, Basil L. Ciriello, John P. Coughlin, Richard S. Davis Jr., Robert J. Fay, John W. Granahan, Paul V. Grasso, Lawrence A. Grenham, William D. Hinchey, James J. Jenks Jr., Stanley W. McCausland Jr., James F. Murray, George A. Nash Jr., David A. Pitts, Richard D. Slack Jr., Alfred V. Schofield, James A. Stark, George W. Underwood, Richard J. Vasconellos, James M. Walsh, Ralph J. Willard Jr.

Sadly, more names would be added before that war was over. Nineteen more. Bringing the total number of names on the memorial to 46.

The other 19: Michael J. Barry, Charles Bifulchi (MIA), James C. Daigle, Warren C. Deyermont, Christopher C. Donahue, George F. Fell Jr., Peter J. Gerry, Leo F. Grady, James P. Hickey, Martin R. Keefe, Peter J. Landry, George R. Levesque, Gerald R. Peterson, Joseph M. Pignato, Lawrence E. Sirois, David O. Sullivan, Richard D.

Walsh, Gary J. Webb, Raymond J. West.

In February, 1969 at the height of the war, Mayor James R. McIntyre ordered the flag at City Hall to be flown "both day and night until the Vietnam War ends and the young men and women of Quincy return."

The flag was finally lowered in February, 1973 when the last two Quincy sons, Navy Comdr. Richard A. Stratton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Stratton of North Quincy, and Air Force Capt. E. Alan Brudno, son of Dr. and Mrs. James Brudno of Wollaston were released from POW camps.

Stratton, who was a POW for six years, said: "My home town was the root of whatever strength I had to resist the enemy and stay alive."

"We wept tears of joy," said Brudno of his release after seven and a half years. But tragedy was to follow.

Just four months later—the day before his 33rd birthday—Brudno was found

THE VIETNAM WAR MEMORIAL with 27 names of Quincy men inscribed on it, was dedicated on Veterans Day in 1968 at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Principal figures at the ceremonies included Mayor James R.

McIntyre and Congressman James A. Burke shown at right. Sadly, the list of names grew to over 40 on the memorial.

dead in the home of his mother-in-law in Harrison, N.Y.

A note left read: "There is no sense to living any longer. My life is no longer worth living."

He was the first of the returned POWs to die and it made news across the country.

Why did he take his own life? His brother, Robert J.

Brudno, now a management consultant in Washington, D.C. had his answer in an article he wrote in June of this year for Newsweek. It was entitled "Unfinished Business" with the sub-head: "I think it's time for anti-Vietnam War Americans to recognize the pain they caused."

comfort was given to the enemy during the war and not enough to those who came home from it, he wrote, in part:

"He became a victim not just of the North Vietnamese, but of the inability of so many in his own country, during that horrible war, to separate the war from the warriors.

"Whether the war was right or wrong, these were our boys. They deserved our support whatever the cause, whatever the result.

"The anti-war movement has yet to recognize the pain and heartache that it caused.

ALL OF QUINCY grieved with the family of Dr. and Mrs. James Brudno on the death of their son, Air Force Captain E. Alan Brudno less than four months after he was released from a North Vietnam prison camp. The family is shown here leaving Temple Beth El after the funeral service in June, 1973.

My brother had no say in the politics that sent him to war. The lack of appreciation for what he had done combined with the rationale of those who gave aid and comfort to the enemy, helped destroy the will to live that had kept him alive (as a POW) for all those years."

A quarter century later, that war is still painfully remembered.

A Long Time Coming

After 47 Year Wait The First MBTA Train Finally Arrives

It was a long time coming, but the first train on the MBTA's new $75.4 million Red Line finally pulled into the Quincy Center station Sept. 1, 1971.

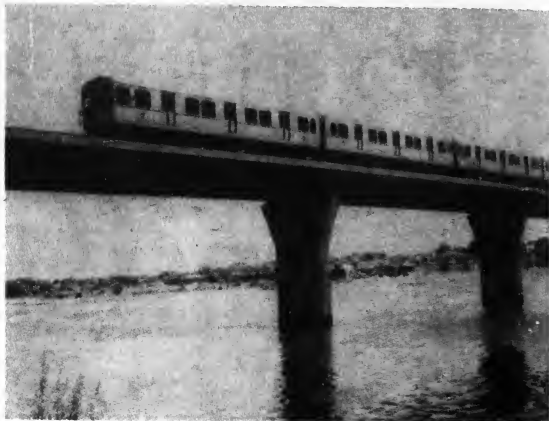

That was 47 years after rapid transit to Quincy had first been proposed. And six years after it got to the drawing board.

The arrival of that first train marked the return of public transportation to Quincy and the South Shore for the first time since 1959 when the New Haven Railroad's Old Colony Line stopped carrying passengers.

It was an occasion for celebration with festivities at the North Quincy, Wollaston and Quincy Center stations. The public was invited to take a free ride from the Quincy Center station to the South Portal interchange near the Columbia station.

The following morning, starting at 5 a.m., some 15,834 commuters began using the Red Line, paying 50-cent fares.

Dignitaries in the Sept. 1 ceremonies included Gov. Francis W. Sargent, U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe, Carlos Villarreal, federal administrator of Urban Transportation and Mayor James R. McIntyre.

Mitchell seemed to be enjoying himself that day. And who would have thought then that something called Watergate was soon to come?

MBTA General Manager Joseph C. Kelly by December called the Red Line "extraordinarily successful."

Some 22,000 daily riders, he noted, were taking the 14 1/2-minute trip to their jobs in downtown Boston.

And the MBTA was already busy planning to extend the Red Line south beyond Quincy Center. But South Quincy residents didn't want a station in their backyard.

Their bitter opposition was unleashed at a public hearing April 26, 1973 attended by a crowd of several hundred jammed into the Sterling Junior High School auditorium.

Thirty opponents stood up to be heard and a petition containing 11,820 names supporting them was presented.

One of the speakers was Pasquale DiStefano of the South Quincy Civic Association.

Some 250 10-cent parking meters were installed in Quincy Center. City Councillor Clifford H. Marshall, chairman of the council's Ordinance Committee said, however, they might be illegal because there was no installation.

The Duke of Windsor died, and a Quincy connection to him was recalled. Wallis Simpson, the woman he gave up his throne for to marry in 1936, lived here on Davis St., Wollaston from 1917-1918 while married to Navy Lt. Earle Spencer stationed at then Naval Air School in Squantum.

The Quincy High School band was invited to join the Cotton Bowl festivities in Dallas, Texas, and the North Quincy High School band was invited to march in the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Dublin.

Bonfires and fireworks were banned on the Fourth of July because of ecology and economy reasons.

A firebomb caused $50,000 damage to the former Hunting School in Houghs Neck.

A HUD (Housing and Urban Development) $885,284 grant assured completion of the Quincy Point Improvement Project.

Regina Smith, 18, was crowned Miss Quincy Bay Race Week.

A petition demanding that President Richard Nixon's administration find work for the General Dynamics Shipyard was circulated by Mayor Hannon, Local 5 Shipbuilders Union, the Chamber of Commerce and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

A 10-day festival celebrated the opening of the 900-car parking garage in the Ross Parkingway.

Deaths included Myron N. Lane, 64, former Norfolk County district attorney and city councillor; Harry Pavan, city solicitor; William C. Edwards Sr., 78, city historian and Rev. Bradford E. Gale, 64, former minister of United First Parish Church.

ciation who declared: "A station in South Quincy is not necessary. There is no financial need for it or benefit from it."

James McIntyre, who had been succeeded in the mayor's office by Walter Hannon, said: "The Red Line must be extended out of Quincy Center or traffic will slowly stultify our economic core."

Thirty-six other speakers and most of the Quincy business community agreed with him.

The question went on the November, 1974 ballot, with South Quincy residents again voicing their opposition.

Another public hearing--this one an 1 1/2-hour oral marathon--was held in June, 1975 at Quincy Masonic Temple.

Some 109 speakers supported the proposed station and 32 opposed it. Opponents claimed the hearing was "stacked" by proponents.

Mayor Walter Hannon noted that "residents anticipated traffic problems, high assessments and other negative changes when the Red Line first came to Quincy but these changes didn't happen."

Robert Cerasoli called the hearing "a farce." "The decision has already been made to build the station," he said.

The South Quincy station was to be and it finally opened in September, 1983 with the official name Quincy Adams station.

South Quincy residents may have lost the war but they won a decisive battle. As a concession, the Town Brook Flood Project was tied in with the new station package to bring long-sought relief to that flood-prone area.

Climax To Bitter Campaign

LaRaia Defeats Hannon On Close Recount Vote

Mayor Walter J. Hannon went to bed election night Nov. 4, 1975 the winner of a third term over Joseph J. LaRaia, climaxing a bitterly-fought campaign.

Only it wasn't the climax. That was yet to come. Tabulations that night showed Hannon with 17,060 votes to LaRaia's 16,926: a slim 134-vote victory margin.

But a recount was to determine LaRaia the actual winner.

Hannon was 44 and LaRaia 43, both of them former city councillors and veterans of a number of Quincy political battles.

But this one--between them--was the closest mayoral election in a half-century with the pair slugging it out with no holds barred on the campaign trail.

There was no trouble getting the vote out that year. A record number--34,374 voters--went to the polls. That was even more than the 33,355 that turned out for the showdown between incumbent Amelio Della Chiesa and challenger James R. McIntyre in 1959 which Della Chiesa won by 2,017 votes.

The Hannon-LaRaia recount held two weeks after the election showed LaRaia the actual winner by 483 votes--17,231 to 16,748.

This was during Quincy's paper ballot days and votes were counted in blocks of 50.

Some of those blocks were erroneously credited to Hannon in the election night count and should have gone to LaRaia. Hannon people shrugged it off as a mistake. LaRaia people charged somebody was trying to steal the election.

Hannon called for an investigation to clear the air.

"I won't leave this office," he said, "with any impression...I have nothing to do with the election, with counting votes. There'll be no aspersions cast at me."

Judge Albert L. Kramer conducted an in-depth inquest at Quincy District Court. It found that the miscount of the votes was an honest mistake made by six different people at six different polling places. They, it was determined, had written down LaRaia's figures on Hannon's line on tally sheets, the layout of which was confusing.

The error, it was determined, was compounded by the use of the so-called "flash count" system of bundling votes in blocks of 50 in order to speed up the vote count. And, none of the poll workers had been assigned to double-check figures.

Later, a committee of citizens appointed by new Mayor LaRaia, himself, reviewed the evidence and came to the same conclusion: the election was honest but the count sloppy.

There were those, however, including LaRaia, who were still skeptical.

"You can never erase that small doubt from your mind," he said.

The election was over. But the hard feelings were still there and would be there for years to come.

And, LaRaia's single term would be one of the stormiest in the city's history.

Our community has made great strides over the years.

We're looking forward to the next step.

LaRaia Starts Stormy Term

Joseph J. LaRaia, Quincy's 25th mayor, began what would be a stormy and his only term, cleaning out City Hall of personnel with ties to the Walter Hannon and James McIntyre administrations. It was dubbed the "January Massacre" by The Sun. LaRaia said he wanted people "with regard to my goals and not in opposition with them."

After some controversy, Mayor LaRaia agreed to a $13.5 million project to renovate the 50-year-old North Quincy High School. The cost was $1.5 million less than originally estimated.

LaRaia battled with Police Chief Francis Finn and Fire Chief Edward Barry, cutting $700,000 from Finn's proposed department budget and $950,000 from Barry's.

The tax rate was set at $194.60, an increase of $34.90. LaRaia blamed the big jump on under-budgeting in Hannon's administration and interference by Council President Arthur Tobin.

A $21 million grant for construction of the Quincy Adams (South Quincy) MBTA station was approved by the Mass. Transportation Administration in Washington.

WJDA personality Mary Johnson, who with her husband, Russ, became friends with Jimmy Carter, died from cancer a few days after Carter was elected President. Carter personally sent her a bouquet of roses while she was in the hospital. The Johnsons met Carter when he was invited to speak at the South Shore Protestant Men's Breakfast in 1973 and they met him at the airport and escorted him to the breakfast.

Public school enrollment was 14,772, lowest in 10 years.

One of Quincy's favorite daughters, award winning actress Ruth Gordon, celebrated her 80th birthday. Her hometown helped mark the milestone with a giant cake.

"Quincy Is Our Name" was selected the city's official song, composed by John Fantuchio of Quincy, a Berkley School student.

A number of Quincy stores defied the 250-year-old "blue laws" statute of opening on Sunday. Five were cited by the Police Department.

Deaths included Mrs. Evelyn Della Chiesa, wife of late Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa; Mrs. William P. McIntyre, 72, mother of former Mayor James McIntyre; Michael J. Peatridge, 29, information officer for Mayor LaRaia, killed in an auto accident; Anthony Venna, 76, former Quincy Welfare Commissioner; Frank Kelly, former news photographer and founder of the Quincy Track Club; Joseph P. Collins, co-founder and director of the Quincy Detoxification Center; Alfred Raymondi, superintendent of the Quincy Highway Department and Paul Nigro, 17, president of the National Honor Society at Quincy High School.

Tobin Ousts LaRaia

City Council President Arthur H. Tobin ousted incumbent Joseph L. LaRaia from the mayor's office by a vote of 19,096 to 14,046 in November. Tobin also led a six-candidate field for mayor in the September preliminary election.

LaRaia's appointment of Lt. Corady Solimini to the post of Inspector of Divisions in the Police Department was shot down in court. Judge Ellis Brown ruled it exceeded the mayor's authority. It would have made Solimini second in command to only Police Chief Francis Finn.

A raid on a Quincy Point cafe helped break up a multi-million dollar gambling ring. It was led by Lt. David Powell who had been restored to the Special Services Unit by a court injunction by Chief Finn after LaRaia had put Rowell on uniformed street duty.

LaRaia, Finn and Fire Chief Edward Barry were squabbling again as LaRaia proposed, and they opposed, a three-member commission to oversee operation of the Police and Fire Departments.

LaRaia and City Council squared off in another battle of the budget, this time over a $3.4 million supplementary budget sent to the council by the mayor to cover late pay raises.

There was also a controversy over a $600,000 mistake in the budget.

Jet Noise Draws Ire Of Residents

Arthur H. Tobin was sworn-in as Quincy's 26th mayor with one of his priorities a desire to reunite the city after the wrangling during Mayor LaRaia's administration. "And with a fresh spirit," he said, "launch our city on a new beginning." Revitalization of the downtown was another priority.

Congressman James A. Burke (D-Milton) who represented Quincy in Congress for 20 years, announced he would not seek reelection because of diabetes. He was succeeded by Brian Donnelly of Dorchester, a Democrat.

It Started To Snow And . . .

The Blizzard Of '78: City Brought To Standstill

By HENRY BOSWORTH

It started to snow early Monday, Feb. 6 and when it stopped late Tuesday, 27 inches had fallen, bringing the city to a standstill for four days.

It was the heaviest snowfall since the Boston Weather Bureau started keeping records in 1870.

And, it fell on top of a 22-inch snowfall Jan. 20--just 17 days before. And yet to come was another nine inches on March 4-5.

That was a lot of snow.

The Feb. 6 northeastern-Blizzard of '78--was backed by winds that gusted to more than 90 miles an hour. High tides, driven by those winds, rose five feet higher than usual, flooding sections of Houghs Neck and Squantum where several hundred people had to be evacuated from their homes.

Fortunately, there were no storm-related deaths in Quincy. But damage--mostly to homes--was heavy. It was estimated at $70 million. The cost for snow removal alone was set at around $600,000.

Cars were strung along the Southeast Expressway and Route 128 with drivers still in them waiting to be rescued.

Gov. Michael Dukakis later issued an edict banning all but the most essential highway travel for nearly a week. In Quincy, only vehicles on emergency missions were allowed on the streets.

People trudged through the snow or on skis, pulling sleds to get to stores and bring back food. And many of them became reacquainted with one another.

Quincy youngsters thought it was a great time.

They got an unexpected six-day vacation from school.

Mayor Arthur Tobin, in office barely a month, and Public Works Commissioner James "Pete" Ricciuti set up a command post at Civil Defense headquarters on Sea St. to direct snow removal and relief operations for the elderly and those in need.

The Federal Disaster Assistance Administration opened a field office in the Quincy Vo-Tech School gym to process emergency loan applications. The Red Cross turned part of Quincy High School into a disaster center for emergency housing, clothing, food and medical supplies.

Radio station WJDA, except for a four-hour period when it was knocked off the air when high tide flooded its transmitter in Germantown, got back on and stayed on all night past its dawn-to-sunset hours broadcasting emergency reports. Members of the staff slept at the station that night.

Twenty-five persons were arrested for looting during the storm, primarily in the Houghs Neck and Germantown areas where homes were evacuated. There were other cases in North Quincy.

But there were many heroes who came to the aid of others.

Among them was Warren Sims who organized a bucket brigade to quell a fire on Stoughton St. in Houghs Neck that could not be reached by fire apparatus.

James (Red) Riley, custodian at the Atherton Hough School, remained at his post to help refugees despite the fact that his own home was flooded.

And Sylvester Ray, whose heavy equipment was hired to clear Houghs Neck streets of snow, got to do something extra. In the Edgewater Drive section of Houghs Neck, which was being pounded by the rushing high tide, he rescued people from the second floors of their flooded homes in the bucket of a front-end loader.

A feeling of togetherness and unity descended upon the area in a way reminiscent of World War II. People helping one another.

"There's always some good that comes out of every happening and the blessing of this blizzard was that it brought the people of our city together," said Mayor Tobin.

LONE WALKER BRAVES high winds and driven snow in deserted Quincy Sq. during the height of the Blizzard of '78--the most furious storm to hit New England in recorded history. Nearly 27 inches of snow were dumped in Quincy and winds reached gusts of more than 90 miles an hour during what was like a hurricane.

It also humbled a lot of people.

Fr. Daniel Graham at St. John's Church that Sunday shared a food-for-thought anecdote with parishioners.

He said he was walking down Hancock St. just after the storm and met a man who said to him:

"Well, Father, I guess He showed us who's boss."

We've been through a lot together and we're both still here.

City Stunned At Death Of Former Mayor James McIntyre

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The death of James R. McIntyre stunned the city March 7, 1984.

One of Quincy's all-time popular and powerful political figures, he was suddenly gone at age 53 from a heart attack following unrelated surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital.

It was hard to believe, for his family, his close friends, followers and, yes, critics.

Quincy's political scene, it was thought, would never be quite the same again. And it hasn't, really.

His political career was somewhat spectacular.

The son of Quincy Police Capt. William and Lillian McIntyre, he was elected city councillor at age 25 in 1955 in his first bid for public office while still in college. He would go on to become City Council president, state representative, state senator and mayor.

His only political defeat came in 1959 when at age 29 he challenged the old master, powerful incumbent Amelio Della Chiesa.

Della Chiesa, who served 12 years as mayor—eight under Plan A and four under Plan E, died in 1975. But his death did not have the impact that McIntyre's did because he was retired from the political scene for nearly 10 years and had moved out of Quincy.

McIntyre gave up the mayor's office in 1971 after serving three terms to become counsel to the Massachusetts Senate, a post he
